AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

There will be an entire change of bill at this house to-night. J.A. Heme will appear in "Solon Shingle," in which he is extremely clever. Mr. Whiffen and Miss Blanche Galton will make their debut at this house in the operetta of "The Blind Beggar," and Fay Templeton will appear in "Parepa Rosa" and other specialties.

Opera House.

Billy Emerson, Ben Cotton, J. M. Davis, J. G. Russell, J. R. Kemble, W. Arlington, Billy Rice, and others appear in the first part, ending with the descriptive sketch entitled "Out at Sea." Harry Rickards who has become quite a favorite appears in character songs, Billy Emerson in "Love Among Big Noses," J. R. Kemble and others in "The Milliners," Billy Arlington in Banjo solos. Billy Rice and J. R. Kemble in "The Actor's Studio" and Lottie and Frank in their wonderful "Aerostatic Voyage."

California Theatre.

"The Streets of New York" has proved a decided success and is drawing crowded houses. Frank Mayo as Badger, Miss Rosa Rand as Lucy Fairweather, Miss Belle Chapman as Alida Bloodgood, Miss Jennie Lee as Bob the boot-black, and the others in the cast, all act their parts splendidly the scenery is very fine and everything goes very smoothly. "Griffith-Gaunt" will be the next play.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

To-night, after a bright first part and lively olio of songs and acts and dances, the Irish drama entitled "The Flower of Connemara" will be presented, Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson Johnny Tuers, Miss Maggie Brewer and others in the cast.

On Sunday next an entertainment will be given at the City Gardens to Madame Buisiay, widow o Ernst Buisiay, the proprietors Messrs. Schneider & Gramm having tendered the Gardens free of charge. The orchestra under the direction of Professor George T. Evans, will consist of fifty performers. The fashion of San Francisco will be numerously present.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

The steamer Japan from China which arrived this morning did not, as was expected bring Chiarini and his troupe from Yokohama, Japan. The vessel was so densely crowded with passengers and so loaded with freight that Chiarini was unwilling to risk his horses on board. We learn from Mr. Astredo that the Signor contemplates chartering a vessel for the conveyance of his troupe to this city.

The Biggest Attraction.

A Chronicle writer who uses a stellar monicle plume, says: What surprises a stranger most in San Francisco? The theaters, the streets, the ladies the stock excitements, the perpetual restlessness of the people? Bah! These are trifles compared with the attractions of the IXL Auction Store on the southeast corner of Kearny and Commercial streets. Such a large collection of goods was never dreamed of before. Everything is there that the heart of man can desire, and the system practiced is the most perfect in the world. The saving to each buyer is simply incredible, and the tact and expertness of the salesmen are something never to forget.

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate. G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-r

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10-q

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest sheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Clothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Clothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 2-x

A SHOWER OF STARS.

[The Chicago Academy of Music Programme publishes the following astronomical observations relative to the stars that will, from time to time appear on the dramatic horizon of the Academy of Music. Said stars being luminaries of the first magnitude, observers need neither telescope nor microscope to discover the excellent qualities of these terrestrial beauties, and their splendor can in no wise be eclipsed:]

Aimee shines with merry twinkle;
Soldene brings her pretty faces;
Olive Logan Merryweather
Charms with wit and queenly graces.

John McCullough, Roma's hero,
Manly figure, sterling worth;
Burlesque Swansboro, from London,
Comes with comedy and mirth.

Hamlet Fechter, dashing, daring;
John L. Toole in Wig and Gown;
Agnes B. Olh brings Joseph Wheelock;
Stars of merit and renown.

Robert Rip Van Wade McWinkle,
Charming rake with priestly smile,
Simple Dutchman, tipsy dreamer,
In thy heart there is no guile,

William Horace Lingard, lordly;
Dickie Linzard, handsome maid
Wallace Sisters, little Nellie,
Has a charm that cannot fade.

Franklin Mayo's Davy Crockett,
Western knight, so full of grace,
In thy rough breast hides a diamond,
Loving kindness in thy face.

Doud, brusque Byron, ex-Avenger,
Greater still in mimic art,
Much esteemed by all who know thee,
Hero with a noble heart.

Brightest star of brilliant lustre,
Janauschek, thou heavenly light!
Lesser orbs around thee cluster,
Sun among thy satellites!

Full of feeling, strong of passion,
Every impulse warm and kind,
Acting every heart's emotion,
Clara Morris comes to mind.

Dutiful, obedient daughter,
Katherine Rogers, Thalia's own,
Follow up the path she leads thee,
On to glory and renown.

Seize the horoscope and cast it,
Look! the season augurs fairly,
Whilom was our night so glowing,
Brilliant y will rise our day.

The Pilgrims of Love.

Lovers will be sorry to learn that the tomb of Heloise and Abelard, Pere La Chaise cemetery, which is the object of many a pilgrimage without candle or banner, threatens to become a ruin, and the municipal councillors, who must be all old bachelors or separated from their wives, decline so far to vote a sou towards repairing the little mausoleum. This month new elections will take place for the council, and it is to be hoped some candidates will come forward on the Romeo and Juliet ticket. One superior advantage the French empire possessed—it attended to such matters at once, was prodigal in the way of expense, which it left, of course, to the republic to defray.

A Pretty Effect.

A correspondent describes a new kind of table decoration that he witnessed in the house of a Russian lady in London. The table was entirely covered with moss, and the only evidence of a white table-cloth was seen in that portion which hangs at the sides of the table. Flowers were profusely introduced, and the effect was altogether unique. This is one of the ordinary kinds of table decoration in the aristocratic houses of Russia.

A Model Hack Driver.

It is no use saying that the following happened in San Francisco because no one would believe it. A gentleman accompanied by a young lady called a hack. The hackman looked at them and said "I cannot take you." "Why?" asked the gentleman. "I have some respect for myself," replied the hackman. "That is a married lady whom you have with you. I am married myself, and I will not be the cause of making trouble in a family."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

What Cheer Laundry.

Feminine Vagaries.

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget them all.

Young girls wear felt hats, with a wing, to match their fall suits.

It is said an effort will again be made this fall to bring mantles into favor.

The Judicial Messenger of St. Petersburg, Russia, says that the tribunal of Vordoriege has permitted a lady advocate to defend a man accused of theft.

A New York family containing four daughters came near starving to death last week because the cook left and none of the girls even knew how to make tea.

The attempt last year, to inaugurate wreaths over the brow, and, on the same bonnet, pendant garlands, will be carried into effect, the flowers themselves being of exquisite beauty.

Gray will appear even in evening dresses, affording as it does a desirable background for pinks, turquoise-blue, lilacs, greens and all the ghosts of colors that are now so much sought.

Wear only two colors at the same time. Thus ladies are really compelled to have a larger number of bonnets than they used to need in the old days, when only one color was used in making them.

Woman's rights are being curiously practised in a town in the west of England. A very fast lady has lately been wrenching off bell-pulls and knockers upon returning home a little late at night after dining out.

A correspondent writes from a Swiss town I was much amused on looking over a visitor's book at the inn to find that under the heading Occupations, two German girls had written, "Looking for a husband."

If you want to realize the heights to which feminine eloquence can mount, go home and find your wife in company with a table covered with jars of canned fruit, and ask her why she has her hand wrapped in a cloth.

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part, and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commenserate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys, Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Ackerman's.

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a Fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. No. 269 Sutter street near Kearny. 8-bg

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-r

Miss Clara Morris—Her Professional Career.

The actress now famous as Clara Morris is of Irish parentage, and commenced her professional life in the humblest way in Cleaveland, Ohio. She was for a time a member of the ballet, and for a considerable period played the most trifling parts. But the genius in her found vent, spite of all crushing weight of poverty and obscurity, and when she was still very young she had worked her way up to the Queen in Hamlet and similar parts, supporting Mrs. Ellsler, wife of Mr. Ellsler, the celebrated manager, who was the first to extend the helping hand to the future star. One of her best parts in those days was in the character of Lizzie in "The Mutual Friend." During the Summer seasons Miss Morris would support Mr. Ellsler in a starring tour through Ohio, and ultimately became quite a favorite in Cincinnatti. She finally came, accompanied by her mother, to whom she has always been devotedly attached, to New York, where for some time she was unable to obtain an engagement. Mr. Osmund, the author of several popular plays had previously endeavored to introduce her to the Metropolis, but had been prevented by circumstances. At last Mr. Daly engaged her at the salary of $40 per week, and for several months she did not appear to do more than earn her scanty salary. But her "opportunity" came at last. Mrs. Allen refused to play the part of Annie Sylvester in "Man and Wife," and being in a dilemma, Mr. Daly cast Miss Morris in the part, who made a hit in it from the start. In "Article 47" she materially added to her reputation. A difficulty with Mr. Daly then arose concerning the casting of certain pieces, and Miss Morris withdrew from the Fifth Avenue Company. Negotiations were entered then into with Wallack's Company, which came to nothing, and finally, through the acumen of Messrs. Shook and Palmer, she was secured to the Union Square Theatre, where she has now become so regular and constant an attraction. Without entering into invidious comparisons, or invading the field of criticism, it may safely be said that Miss Clara Morris is the greatest actress of the emotional school now in this country. The performance of the heroine in "The Sphinx" is equal to, though differing from, that of Crozizette in the original play as produced in Paris, and is in its own peculiar line a chef d'oeuvre of art. The role has been elaborately studied by Miss Morris who not only witnessed the original part in Paris, but attended the hospitals and consulted with medical experts as to the outward effects of certain poisons upon the physical system, in order the more fully to qualify herself for the role of Blanche.

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute, After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. B. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required. x

JUDGE NOT.

It is not a very easy thing for some people to act uprightly, and these try to make up for their lack of virtue by expressing their horror of the misconduct of others. They reason somewhat as follows. I at least have high principles if I don't act up to them. Some free and easy good souls profess no principles at all, and in these the practice is better than the profession. It really is not necessary to judge your neighbors. You never can be sure that you will not judge them too harshly. You don't take the trouble to investigate all the circumstances attendant on the act for which you condemn them. If a generally good fellow does something of which you disapprove on principle, you may confine your disapproval to the act, and not condemn the perpetrator as an out and out rascal. You may say "he's a good fellow. It is a pity he does such things." Of course every now and then one meets with a man in whom it would be absurd to look for good qualities. You look at the man and you instinctively feel he is a coward, a cur, a liar, and a general swindler. Nature has stamped some men. When you meet a man like this, the best way is to have nothing to do with him. Follow your instinct. It will not often lead you wrong. Your judgment will frequently, if you get into the habit of exercising it on the faults of your fellow creatures. The sinners whom Christ met were not severely judged by him. He generally had some kind words for the women of bad character, the men of weak mind. It was the hypocrites, the Scribes and Pharisees who thought themselves so much better than anyone else that he directed his attacks against. It is a bad plan this howling against a man, because in certain circumstances the bad side of his nature comes out, while under better influences he would be the best fellow in the world.

Haydn.

Haydn was a little fellow with a dark complexion, and was of low origin, his father being a working wheelwright, and his mother a cook. He knew the scourge of poverty in his youth, and often suffered real privations. When Prince Esterhazy called him a nigger, and told him to go and get a curly wig, a new coat, bands, and red heels, Haydn quietly went and did as he was ordered. Imagine Handel receiving such an order as that! While yet young, Haydn suffered himself to be beguiled into a foolish marriage, which ere long resulted in separation. Eventually his genius and industry were rewarded by princely patronage, and from that time forth he devoted all energies of mind and body to his art. Indulging in no luxury, wasting no time, he composed an enormous number of works. His religious principles were deep and strong; when engaged on sacred music, it was his custom before beginning to compose, to kneel down and to pray to God devoutly that he might be enabled to praise him worthily.

Quite Liberal.

The following advertisement appears in a morning paper:

WANTED TO LET—TO A RESPECTable single lady (no objections to one child), a bay-windowed front Chamber, with access to parlors and piano, in a strictly private family.

We rather like this. A single lady who has only one child should not be objected to on the score of respectability. More than one child, however, would be objectionable as denoting an intention, on the part of the respectable single lady, of keeping up that sort of thing.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast? —
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Night to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Dr. Doherty

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practice, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office 519 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below What Cheer House. x

J. L. Toole in Philadelphia.

The All-Day City Item says of Toole, who recently made his appearance at the Walnut Street Theatre:

Mr. Toole is an actor of experience rather than of talent. His reproductions of English low life are immensely enjoyed in London by the lower classes. He may, indeed, be termed the pet of the cockneys. His specialty is the performance of farces. Into these he introduces all sorts of stage-tricks that amuse the easily-amused classes, and the theatres at which he performs are always crowded. But the kind of fun that cheers English audiences does not inspire those in this country. Therefore, we know that Mr. Toole will not produce an impression in the United States.

One of Mr. Toole's most serious mistakes is the production of a lot of wretched farces. "The Weavers," which was the opening piece last evening, and which the programmes tenderly call a comedy, is utter trash, with not one redeeming quality. As Simmons, Mr. Toole introduced a quantity of worn out "stage business" such as big breeches, big gloves, a big coat, being afraid to sit down in an easy chair, calling the chair-tidies "towels," and throwing them under the table, getting choked with wine, talking with his mouth full of bread, carrying a big twisted cane, etc. In the entire character he did not make one point. The other characters in the farce are unworthy of comment.

In "Off the Line," Mr. Toole appeared to better advantage. The affair is called "a comedy-drama," probably because the hero gets drunk, quarrels with his wife in regard to a letter he has received from some female; and they cap the climax by breaking things, after which there is a good deal of blubbering, a tin trumpet is most pathetically introduced that belonged to "our dead darling," etc. There is not an original idea in the piece—it is a mere rehash of old situations that have been well used up. As Harry Coke, Mr. Toole appeared to better advantage than as Simmons, and more than once showed his ability to act agreeably. Several of his "points" were clever, although his pathos became somewhat monotonous, and Mr. Toole has a habit that is not a wise one, of speaking his "gags" until they fall flat. This was the case with "Jim knows—don't yer, Jim!" and "A sandwich and a drop of brandy."

A Society Item.

We find the following in the Sacramento Bee of Monday:

"Charles De Young, the head and front of the San Francisco Chronicle and its offendings or otherwise, is in town to attend to his interests in the matter of the libel suit against his paper commenced by Col. Berton. It is to be examined before Justice Conger on the 22d inst. Mr. De Young is the guest of his brother-in-law, Supervisor Elkus."

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clam and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game;
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Opera House.

This house holds its own bravely, and would hold more people every night if it were larger. First part, interlude, and concluding performance are all bright and entertaining. Billy Emerson, Ben Cotton, J. R. Kemble, Billy Rice, Harry Rickards, Lottie and Frank, with the rest of Emerson's Minstrels make up a company hard to beat.

California Theatre.

"The Streets of New York" with Frank Mayo in his great impersonation of Badger, is crowding this house nightly, and the applause is loud and prolonged. The scenery is very fine, and the fire scene is most effectively managed. "The Streets of New York" will be played every evening until further notice. Frank Mayo is playing a splendid engagement.

Maguire's New Theatre.

A most pleasing performance was given at this house last night. It commenced with the very amusing burletta entitled "Parepa Rosa," in which Fay Templeton appeared as a miniature edition of the great cantatrice whose loss we all lament; she sang charmingly and acted with much spirit. This was followed by Offenbach's musical trifle entitled "The Blind Beggars," in which Miss Blanche Galton and Thomas Whiffen made their first appearance. Miss Galton has a sweet voice and is a good actress. Mr. Whiffen sings with much expression, is an excellent violinist and last night displayed considerable comic talent. The performance terminated with 'Solon Shingle" in which J. A. Herne caused much amusement by his clever impersonation of the old Yankee in search of his "bar'l of apple sass." The same bill will be played to-night.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Ned Buckley, Johnny Toers, Frank Mortimore, Miss Maggie Brewer, Hughey Robinson, and all the stars will appear this evening in a great bill comprising songs, dances and acts, and the Irish ay of "The Flower of Coonamara."

The Carnival Ball.

The preparations for the Carnival Ball at the Pavilion to-morrow evening are now nearly completed, and will, we are sure, give general satisfaction. An immense number of comic masks will enliven the scene, and the Bouquet Quadrille will be quite a feature. The supper will be under the management of Louis Thiele ("George" of the old Faust Cellar), and will be of the most perfect description. Altogether the ball promises to be a great success.

Woodward's Gardens.

There are thousands of objects of interest at these gardens, and even a wet afternoon may be pleasantly spent in the Museum and Pavilion. On Saturday and Sunday Prof. Miller the Australian Hercules and champion of broadsword, single stick and boxing, will appear with the new troupe comprising Little May, the Sheridan Brothers, Robbie Burns and the gymnasts Luproll and Carson.

Benefit to Madame Buisiay.

On Sunday next an entertainment will be given at the City Gardens to Madame Buisiay, widow of Gruet Buisiay, the proprietors Messrs. Schneider & Gramm having tendered the Gardens free of charge. Madame Buisiay is left with four children to support, and is in delicate health. The public will respond.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

John Piper, of Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, is in town on business connected with his theatre. Manager Piper, is one of the Republican nominees for Legislature in his burgh, and says he is "going to be elected, sure." We'd bet on it, if it wasn't against the law to do so; as it is, drinks go—they don't count, as "Rip" says.

Montgomery Queen's Circus exhibited at Visalia last night. Manager Queen will make the Southern tour as far as Los Angeles before taking up his winter quarters with Tony Oakes, at Hayward's.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10 q

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Clothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Clothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 2-x

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 213 Sutter street, near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. F

THE EYES OF AN IRISH GIRL.

BY DANIEL CONNOLLY.

You may talk about black eyes and blue,
About brown eyes, and hazel, and gray,
You may praise as you please every hue
Known on earth since its earliest day;
But no other eyes under the sun
Can set poor human hearts in a whirl,
With their pathos, and mischief, and fun,
Like the eyes of a bright Irish girl.

They are soft as the down of a dove,
They are mild as a midsummer dawn,
They are warm as the red heart of love,
They are coy as the glance of a fawn;
Tender, pensive, and dreamy as night,
Bright and pure as the daintiest pearl,
Yet as merrily mad as a sprite
Are the eyes of a young Irish girl.

They can soothe and delight with a beam,
They can rouse and inspire with a glance,
They can chill and reprove with a gleam,
That is keen as the flash of a lance;
To bring peace, or the pangs of despair,
To one's breast, be he noble or churl,
There is nothing on earth to compare
With the eyes of a true Irish girl.

You may search cabin, cottage, and hall,
Thro' the loveliest lands that are known,
But the loveliest land of them all
Has no eyes like the eyes of our own;
There are faces, no doubt, quite as sweet,
And as fair under ringlet or curl,
But no light like the splendors that meet
In the eyes of a glad Irish girl.

Ah! Dame Nature was cruelly kind
When she took from her tenderest skies
The most exquisite tints she could find
And bestowed them on soft Irish eyes;
For no other eyes under the sun
Can set poor human hearts in a whirl,
With their pathos, and mischief, and fun,
Like the eyes of a bright Irish girl.

Keeping his Promise.

Max Adeler says: The Delaware Railroad runs right through Peabody's farm, just below our village, and close to the track there is a kind of a mud hole. Into this one of Peabody's horses fell, the other day, and defied every effort that could be made to get him out. While Peabody was working at the job, a freight train ran in upon the siding and stopped to shift some empty cars. The engineer noticed Peabody's trouble, and finally offered to pull the horse out with the locomotive if Peabody would give him five dollars. Peabody gladly consented and the engineer got down for the purpose of fastening a rope under the horse's belly. Just as he completed this job, the fireman, a greenhorn, got meddling with the starting bar, and the engine suddenly gave a jerk and began to move off. In less than a minute that iron steed was proceeding down the Delaware peninsula at the rate of a mile a minute, with Peabody's horse behind, slashing up against the fences, swishing through ditches, butting against the crossties, and dancing and frolicking and jumping about in the most extraordinary manner. When the engine was stopped, twenty-three miles below, by leaping the track and rolling over into a gully, there was nothing on the rope but four ribs and a piece of the back-bone, and these Peabody concluded not to drive home. The engineer says all he promised to do was to get the horse out, and he got it out. But Peabody, somehow, doesn't appear to be satisfied.

Quick Work.

The Austin (Nev.) Reveille relates this A squaw sat down on the curb in front of the Postoffice, this forenoon, and unrolling a bundle of calico, commenced the manufacture of a dress: In less than an hour, the dress was finished; and putting it on over her old clothes, the squaw pulled out a pin here, a peg there, and untied a string in another place, made one step and presto! the old clothes lay in the gutter. Gathering up the rags just shed, the noble daughter of the forest cast one look of triumph on the spectators, and skipped gracefully off in the direction of the Indian camp. A prominent citizen, who was an interested witness of the transaction mildly remarked that he would give thirty dollars if Mrs. P. O. could shed herself like that.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 8-cj

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate. G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-r

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

A Dedication.

This is Max Adeler's dedication to his new book, "Out of the Hurly Burly:"

"My original intention was to dedicate this book to the friend of my boyhood, Azan ben Ghes, the Imaum of Muscat, in memory of the happy days when together we played marbles in the Oman desert, and ducked each other in the Persian Gulf, and tortured inoffensive cats on the Island of Kishm. But I have changed my mind; I have resolved to dedicate the book to a humorist who has had too little fame; the most delicious, because the most unconscious humorist; to that widely scattered and multitudinous comedian who may be expressed in the concrete as the Intelligent Compositor. To his faculty of perpetrating felicitous absurdities I am indebted for 'laughter that is worth a hundred groans.' It was he who, putting into type an article of mine which contained the injunction, 'Do not cast your pearls before swine,' transformed the phrase into, 'Do not cart your pills before sunrise.' It was he who caused me to quote the poet's inquiry, so that I propounded the appaling conundrum, 'Where are the dead, the varnished dead?' and it was his glorious tendency to make the sublime convulsively ridiculous that rejected a line in a poem of mine, which declared that 'a comet swept o'er the heavens with its trailing skirts,' and substituted the idea that a 'count slept in a haymow in a traveling skirt.' The kind of talent that is here displayed deserves profound reverence. It is wonderful and awful, and thus I offer it a token of my marvelling respect."

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part, and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys, Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Ackerman's.

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a Fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. Carnival Ball.

Disappointment in Love.

The San Jose Mercury commenting on the suicide of Niels J. O. Selmer, who killed himself because he loved a girl who did not love him, says: Suicides from this cause are of frequent occurrence. Failing to elicit a response to his passion in the breast of the object of his adoration, this young man concluded that life had no further attractions for him. He also, doubtless, realized that the reason why she did not return his love, was his inability to draw out a response. If there was any necessity for killing anybody for such a state of things, he killed the right person. And yet if he had been educated in a better school of philosophy, he would have seen that self-murder, under such circumstances, was the act of a consummate ass. What man, of right thought and feeling, would care the snap of his finger for a love that was not for him—a love that he lacked the power to call forth? The possession of the woman without her love would be to secure the empty casket without the jewel—an idea abhorrent to any refined mind. If this young man had only stopped to take a rational view of the case, cold poison would have been the last conclusion he would ever have thought of, and he would have soon come to regard her rejection of his suit as the luckiest event of his life. A man is a fool to want a woman who doesn't want him, and he ought to have sense and philosophy enough to see it. To go off and puncture his own or some other person's gizzard because he can't change a law of nature and compel some woman to love him who prefers somebody else is to advertise onesself to the world as a shallow-brained noddle.

True as Gospel.

Kinsella, of the Brooklyn Eagle, in his speech in answer to a press toast at the banquet given there to the Mayor of Dublin, said:

"Let me not be understood as admitting that the newspapers are solely responsible for the ugly things which come to the surface in public or social life. The newspapers reflect the life of their times, and those who desire to see pretty things reflected in a mirror must take care that the object to be reflected is a pretty one. This much I will say, and I mean to scare nobody, either; the newspaper people do not tell half as much as they know, and there are secrets enough buried in every newspaper office to set half a city by the ears."

Stuck to his Post.

"You may retire," said Governor Moses to a colored waiter who was standing behind his chair in a South Carolina restaurant. "'Scuse me, sah," said Sam, "but I'se 'sponsible for de spoons."

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. B. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 3 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required. x

New Scenery.

The Virginia City Post speaking of Pipers' Opera House says:—

All admirers of beautiful stage scenery cannot help but unite in congratulating John Piper on his good fortune in securing the services of that clever scenic artist and social fellow Mr. Wilkins. Satisfied that the scenery of his theatre had amply performed its duty, and merited retirement, which its increasing age and concentrated mustiness loudly demanded, Mr. Piper engaged this gentleman to paint him an entirely new set. Gradually, the well-known drawing-room sets and the withered forest scenes, begin to be lost to sight, though to memory dear, and fresh, exquisitely designed and elegantly painted new ones, to take their place. Last evening we were agreeably surprised with a magnificent forest scene, that for beauty of perspective, grand old oaks, cool, inviting shades, and glowing foliage, cannot be excelled by any that we have seen elsewhere. Mr. Wilkins contemplates painting a new drop curtain that will be a masterpiece of scenic art. We are sure it will be, as we entertain a very high opinion of his ability, and know that he will not spare himself in its execution.

The Baltimore Opera House Burned.

The "Baltimore Opera House," formerly known as Washington Hall, situated at the southeast corner of the Baltimore street bridge, was burned on the 13th, between half-past 1 and 2 o'clock. The opera house was under the management of Eugene and Addie Kernan, and was used for variety performances. Several business firms occupied the first floor and basement. The building was owned by the estate of Hugh Gelston.

The fire originated in the kitchen under the stage, and the flames ascending communicated to the staging and stage effects, scenery and other paraphernalia attached to the theatre. The material being of an inflammable nature, the fire spread with great rapidity, and but few minutes elapsed ere the entire Opera House proper was completely enveloped in flames.

From the rear of the Opera House the fire communicated to the large double building on the corner of Front and Plowman streets, and this too shared in the general destruction. This was a large four-story building, and was occupied by several families.

Declined.

A country paper gives the following advice to a correspondent: "We shall have to decline your article on the Decline of Aristocracy. We have left out several of our own articles this week, and yours is worse than any of them. Take our advice, and write a few very short pieces; write only on one side of the sheet; write plainly; and then take your pieces and burn them up in the kitchen stove."

Why Shouldn't They?

They say that among the most aristocrati young ladies of the principal cities of Europe, there are many of them who smoke their cigarettes, secretly, as regularly as the men do their pipes and cigars. In the Spanish Americas it is notorious that the ladies all smoke cigarettes, and that in some of the South and Central American States they smoke the largest kind of cigars.

A Pleasant Error.

An invalid was ordered by a physician to take three ounces of brandy a day; and, knowing that sixteen drams make an ounce, has patiently been taking forty-eight drinks a day ever since.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Aching for a Row.

The Detroit Free Press says:

Yesterday, as a policeman was leaning against the walls of the Detroit & Milwaukee depot, he was approached by a man about thirty years old, whose red face was a good match for his hair. He was a little "sprung" and he felt like a steer turned into a clover field.

"Mister," says he, speaking very confidentially to the officer, "I don't want to get locked up, and have my name in the papers, and be fiend, but I am in from Ionia on a little blow out, and I'd give a clean ten dollar note to have a little scrimage with somebody." "You mean you want to fight?" asked the officer. "That's what I mean. I am just aching for a row. I want to stand before about three good fellows and have some one to give me the word "go in." The officer asked him if he was heavy on the fight, and he answered: "Heavy! I should say I was! Why, I'm terrible! They call me the Russian bear at home, and the hull town stand up or sit down, just as I say!" The officer said it was his duty to discourage disorderly conduct, but in a case like that, where a man had come 120 miles to get up a row, he felt it his duty to extend indirect aid. He told the Russian bear to go to the corner of Beaubien street, enter some saloon, talk in a very loud voice, and he'd soon have his hands full. "That's me, much obliged!" exclaimed the man, and he walked off. In about ten minutes a boy came running down and said that a man with a chewed ear, two black eyes, and a broken nose was "up there" in a ditch. The officer went back with the boy, and he soon came upon the Russian bear, who was lying in the gutter, one leg doubled back, blood all over him, and his coat ripped in every seam. "That's you, is it?" asked the officer, as he pulled at the man's arm. "Well, did you find that row?" "Policeman," replied the man as he gained his feet and looked at himself and felt of his ear. "Policeman, don't it seem to you as if I did?"

An Honorable Man.

An old Catholic priest in Switzerland is about to follow Father Hyacinthe's example, abandoning celibacy. St. Ange Lievre, of Biel, in announcing his betrothal to a Protestant lady, says: "I marry because I wish to remain an honorable man. In the sixteenth century it was a proverbial expression to say 'as corrupt as a priest,' and this might be said to-day. I marry, therefore, because I wish to get out of the Ultramontane slough."

A Hint.

If you don't know a waiter's name coin one for him. It is innocent counterfeiting; and he prefers to be called somebody rather than have your fingers snapped at him. One seems a kindly, the other a contemptuous act.

Oysters.

Instrolling round the other night,
To look at Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T.'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men,
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

While "The Streets of New York," with Frank Mayo in his original character of Badger, proves so popular, there is no reason for changing the bill at this house. This lively play will be presented to-night and also at the matinee to-morrow.

Maguire's New Theatre.

A very attractive entertainment is given at this house. Fay Templeton in the burletta of "Parepa Rosa" appears at her best, and is ably supported by Miss Alice Vane, George Giddens and others. In the operatic sketch entitled "The Blind Beggars," some capital singing and acting is done by Miss Blanche Galton and Thomas Whiffen and "Solon Shingle" with J. A. Herne in the title role, in which he is fully as funny as John E. Owens, winds up the evening's amusement in good style. This bill will be played at the matinee to-morrow.

Opera House.

To-night the performance will be for the benefit of the graceful, agile and altogether fearless Miss Lottie. On this occasion she will, with her brother Frank, perform the original aerial feat in which she created such an immense sensation on making her first appearance in this city. Billy Emerson will present some of his best specialties, Harry Rickards will sing his most popular character songs a great variety of popular acts will be performed, and an entertainment worthy of the occasion will be presented The bill which has delighted thousands during the present week will be played at the matinee to-morrow.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Ned Buckley and Harry Devoy in acts, Miss Lizzie Worrell in dances, Johnny Tuers in his great character of Madame Gasaynigger, and in song and dance, Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson, Miss Maggie Brewer and others in "The Flower of Connamara," and other attractions will be presented to-night.

The Carnival Ball.

To-night is the night so long looked forward to by the fashion of San Francisco. Thousands of dollars have been spent on costumes, the Committee of Arrangements have been indefatigable in their endeavors to make it the greatest bal masque ever given in this city, and we think it safe to prophecy that the expectations of all will be more than realized. The theatrical profession will be largely represented, and the amateur gymnasts will add to the attractions. The Pavilion has been splendidly decorated and will be gorgeously illuminated. There will be a grand orchestra and a fine supper. Over six thousand spectators' tickets have already been sold.

Woodward's Gardens.

There are thousands of objects of interest at these gardens, and even a wet afternoon may be pleasantly spent in the Museum and Pavilion. On Saturday and Sunday Prof. Miller the Australian Hercules and champion of broadsword, single stick and boxing, will appear with the new troupe comprising Little May, the Sheridan Brothers, Robbie Burns and the gymnasts Luproil and Carson.

Benefit to Madame Buislay.

On Sunday next an entertainment will be given at the City Gardens to Madame Buislay, widow of Gruet Buislay, the proprietors Messrs. Schneider & Gramm having tendered the Gardens free of charge. Madame Buislay is left with four children to support, and is in delicate health. The public will respond.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

Mr. Marshal has returned to this city with his troupe of Japanese performers after an extended tour through the Northern, Southern and Eastern States. It is two years and a half since the troupe left and they have exhibited in nearly all the towns in the United States.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly, 10 c

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Clothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Clothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. THE DISTANT LAND.

Oh, snow so pure! oh, peaks so high!
I lift to you a hopeless eye.

I see your icy ramparts drawn
Between the sleepers and the dawn.

I see you, when the sun has set,
Flush with the dying daylight yet.

I see you, passionless, and pure,
Above the lightnings stand secure;

But may not climb, for now the hours
Are spring's, and earth a maze of flowers.

And now, when Autumn glows, I fear
To lose the harvest of the year.

Now Winter frowns and life runs slow,
Even on the plains I tread through snow.

While you are veiled, or dimly seen,
Only reveal what might have been;

And where high hope would once aspire
Broods a vast storm-cloud dealing fire.

Oh, snow so pure! oh, peaks so high!
I shall not reach you till I die.

—Songs of Two Worlds.

Fashion Notes.

Street dresses are to be made to form a demi-train.

The "Alhambra" is the new black silk at Stewart's.

While tulle veils are fashionable, with long streamers behind.

The back hair is still worn in a single braid called the "queue."

For evening dress a very handsome dotted organdie has appeared.

Grenadines gradually disappear at the approach of cool weather.

Buff and gray boots made of linen are all the rage with Paris ladies.

Ball fringe will be all the rage this winter. There are hundreds of styles.

Brides are to wear bonnets at church weddings, after the London style.

Sashes are destined to continue in favor for a long time to come, and the new importations are very beautiful.

Overskirts are made very long in front, and have long sash ends, tied or looped up behind in every imaginable style.

Embroidery will continue in favor, and many of the new street and house costumes are completely covered with it.

Aigrettes and pompons are to occupy prominent places on the coming bonnets; about which there is so much anxiety.

An Unfortunate Mistake.

There is a magistrate in a town in Indiana named Helser. A clergyman in the same place was called upon by a young couple not long since, who wished him to join them in the holy bonds of matrimony. He asked the bridegroom (a soldier by the way) for his marriage license. The man in blue responded that he had been engaged to the girl for four years, and thought that would do. The clergyman thought not, and remarked as the speediest way to obtain a license, "You had better take your girl and go to Helser!" "You go to hell yourself!" retorted the angry veteran. And seizing the bride by the arm, he dragged her from the house, wondering what manner of a profane minister he had met with.

Smart Boy.

"Mother," said a little shaver, the other day, "I know what I would do, if I was at sea, and the men were all starving, and they should draw lots to see who should be killed and eaten, and it should be me—I'd jump into the water."

"But," said his mother, "they would fish you up." "Ah! but I wouldn't bite!"

A Hopeless Case.

A minister asked a tipsy fellow who was leaning up against a fence, where he expected to go when he died. "If I can't get along any better than I do now," he replied, "I shan't go anywhere."

Finished Her Education.

Upon the marriage of one of her companions, a little girl about 11 years of age, of the same school, said to her pa: "Why, don't you think Amelia is married, and hasn't gone through fractions yet."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 8-cj

The Old Mint Restaurant

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate. G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-x

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

A Kindergarten School.

The only free Kindergarten School in the United States is in the last place in which anybody would suppose—upon the fur-seal island of St. Paul. The expenses of this school are borne by the Alaska Fur Company, and its pupils are the children of those Aleut slaves of which we have heard so much. The teacher is Mrs. Fish, the wife of the Signal Service officer stationed upon the island. This school and the comfortable frame cottages which the company built, and for which it induced the Aleuts in its employ to leave their underground hovels, are, as we learn from the Alaska Herald, doing very much to promote the physical welfare and mental development of the seal catcher.

"Suspicion Haunts."

Ben Butler receiving an invitation to take tea with a lady friend, accepted. While at the table the lady observed that he had no spoon for his cup. "Is it possible," said she, "that I forgot to give you a spoon? I could not have made such a mistake." "I have no spoon, madam," said Butler, rising from his seat, "and if you don't believe it, you may search me."

Making Amends.

Maiden Aunt (remonstrating with Dublin Street Arab): "Don't you know, sir, it's very dangerous to throw stones? That one very nearly hit me, sir! And supposing it had put my eye out, and blinded me, what would you have done then?"

Street Boy: "Shure, I'd have married yer, av coorse!"

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part, and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Ackerman's.

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a Fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. No. 269 Sutter street near Kearny. 8-bg

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

OAKLAND.—Oakland is waking up in dramatic matters. The new Lyceum Hall opened this week. It is capable of seating 800 persons. Brayton Hall is being remodeled and redecorated, and better than all, Oakland is to have a new theatre. Mr. Bryan, who owns the lot on Broadway, opposite the City Hall, known as the circus lot, intends erecting thereon a well-built and commodious theatre, which will be leased to any responsible manager.

VIRGINIA CITY.—On Monday Mlle. Marie Zoe appeared at Piper's Opera House as Topsy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." On Tuesday she took her farewell benefit and appeared in "The Wept of the Wish-ton-Wish." To-night Miss Carrie Coggswell will take a benefit.

CARSON CITY.—Mlle. Marie Zoe and the company from Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, opened here on Wednesday.

PORTLAND, O.—Miss Amy Stone supported by H. P. Stone, Mrs. Fanny Morgan Phelps and the dramatic company commenced a re-engagement at Oro Fino Theatre on the 20th in "Dot." The engagement closes to-night.

CHEYENNE—McDaniel's Theatre, Lewis Parker Manager, is doing good business. A variety per ormance is given by Miss Minnie Wells, Miss Fanny Garretson, Blanche Forrester Monte Verde, Miss Pauline Parker and others.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, "THE SADDLE ROCK,"
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Colville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-r

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. B. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required. 8

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

The operatic season has commenced at Lyons with "La Juive."

"Robin" is the favorite work this season at the Salle Ventadour, Paris.

"Don Juan XIV." is the title of a new opera of Lecocq, to be played in Paris shortly.

Drury Lane, London, has been opened with "Amy Robsart," under Mr. Chatterton's management, Mrs. Wallis, Mr. Creswick, Mr. Sinclair, Mr. W. Ferris, Miss Kate Vaughan and others were in the cast. Mr. Creswick is praised, with both intelligence and warmth, for his impersonation of Varney.

"The Lady of Lyons" will be clothed in an operatic toilette by Mr. Cowen, the English composer.

One of the most promising of American artists abroad is Miss Emma Abbott, formerly "Little Emma Abbot," a strolling singer of this country. She is now in Paris, and has most urgent calls to go to St. Petersburg and appear at a large salary, while Patti says to her "come, and I'll sit in the box and throw you your first bouquet."

Victor Sejour is dead, a dramatic author who wrote several successful plays for the Porte-Saint-Martin Theatre. One of the dramas which bore his name, the "Tireur de Cartes," was, in fact, written by M. Mocquard, the Emperor's secretary, who shared with Sejour authorship rights.

The London Era, under the caption of "Theatrical Success," says: "Miss Neilson, the talented actress, of whose service our American cousins seem determined to deprive us, sails Saturday, September 26th, from Liverpool, per the Russia, for New York, where she opens on the 19th prox. at the Lyceum. The extraordinary success which has attended Miss Neilson finds eloquent proof in the fact that while seven years ago, when appearing as Nelly, in "Lo t in London," her salary was £7 per week, the terms of her forthcoming engagement, alluded to above, will secure £700 for a corresponding period. Miss Neilson is to give seven performances in the week—six evening and one morning—and for each is to be paid the handsome sum of £100. It is evident that when the New Yorkers discover talent they have no scruple about paying for it."

Miss Lydia Thompson met with a great reception on her reappearance in London, at the Charing Cross Theatre. The Daily Telegraph says: "The welcome to Miss Lydia Thompson, who has been away from England for six years, was cordial, genuine, and thoroughly English, and if the greeting was hearty on the reappearance of an old friend and favorite long before she had opened her mouth to speak or sing, how much more enthusiastic was the applause when it was discovered that America and adulation had in no way tarnished the style of an artiste. The same delicate tints and half-tints; the same pleasant and unaffected manner; not a trace of coarse work or over-coloring. With the familiar soft voice and graceful presence, Miss Lydia Thompson returns from the Far West to her native country, and, finding burlesque half-trampled by noisy fun and thumping breakdowns, suggestively shows her sister artists how; in the old days, favor was won by refinement in style and elegance in movement. It is a treat to see this lady dance, even when the music is of the noisiest kind. She catches up a scarf and gives some meaning to every step. Miss Lydia Thompson has returned not one moment too soon. Eminently picturesque in appearance she will, whether as the idyllic shepherd or the romantic prince, deservedly claim a legitimate position in the photographers windows; but, apart from all this it is not impossible that her natural good taste will check the success of much extravagance, and her refined dancing will silence the applause bestowed upon the indecent rompings of the can-can." Willie Edouin, Alice Atherton and John Morris have also passed the ordeal of English criticism with the most gratifying results.

Managers

The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 8-cj

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part, and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend. "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a T."
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners,"
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.
Pacific Oyster House, 337 Bush street, above Montgomery; open Day and Night.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—Little Fay Templeton and Miss Alice Vane in "Perepa Rosa." Miss Blanche Galton and Thomas Whiffen in Offenbach's operetta of "The Blind Beggars." Fay Templeton in N. G. S. N. Y." and "After Me." and J. A. Herne, Thomas Whiffen, George Giddens and others in "Solon Shingle," make up an entertainment which cannot fail to give satisfaction to all. This is the bill for the matinee to-day to-night and to-morrow night.

OPERA HOUSE.—Miss Lottie had a splendid house for her benefit last night, and gained much applause for the daring act entitled "The Aerostatic Voyage" performed with her brother Frank. This great feat will be performed at the matinee to-day, this evening, and to-morrow evening in conjunction with a great programme of acts and specialties by the ever-popular Billy Emerson, Harry Rickards the London character actor, Ben Cotton, Billy Arlington and others.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—In spite of the attraction of the Carnival Ball, there was a crowded house last night to enjoy the play of "The Streets of New York" with Frank Mayo in the character of Badger. The splendid manner in which this piece has been put on the stage by the management of the California Theatre has had a good deal to do with its success. The scene representing Union Square is one of the finest things of the kind ever accomplished, and the fire scene is extremely realistic. "The Streets of New York" will be played at the matinee to-day, and this evening for the last time.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—A lively first part, a good selection of acts, and a well acted after-piece afford abundant entertainment to visitors to this house. "The Flower of Connemara" with Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson, Johnny Tuers, Miss Maggie Brewer and others in the cast is quite a success.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—Professor Miller. There are thousands of objects of interest at these gardens, and even a wet afternoon may be pleasantly spent in the Museum and Pavilion. On Saturday and Sunday Prof. Miller the Australian Hercules and champion of broadsword, single stick and boxing, will appear with the new troupe comprising Little May, the Sheridan Brothers, Robbie Burns and the gymnaste Luproil and Carlson.

Benefit to Madame Buislay.

On Sunday next an entertainment will be given at the City Gardens to Madame Buislay, widow of Ernest Buislay, the proprietors Messrs. Schneider & Gramm having tendered the Gardens free of charge. Madame Buislay is left with four children to support, and is in delicate health. The public will respond.

IMPORTANT ART SALE.—Next Friday Norton Bush will offer at Messrs. H. M. Newhall & Co's. rooms, about sixty tropical, Californian and Eastern pictures. Many of the works are veritable gems. The N. Y. Herald, Post, Frank Leslie's Weekly and other papers have spoken of this artist in the most flattering terms. The pictures will remain open to public inspection from Monday to the day of sale.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangesberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

NOTES.—On Friday evening next that funny fat fellow, Billy Rice, will have his benefit at the Opera House. He is determined to get up the best bill of the season, if he has to lose flesh in doing it. The programme will shortly appear in FIGARO.

On Monday "Mons. Alphonse" one of the recent sensations of Paris and still later of New York, will be presented at Maguire's New Theatre. The scene painters have been busily engaged for some time past and the play will be produced in splendid style. It deals with the social question of the day, is perfectly moral, but suggests the idea that our social ethics may not, perhaps, be absolutely perfect.

Miss Alice Harrison intends to come to San Francisco soon.

On November 2d Mrs. Agnes Booth, well-known to the frequenters of Maguire's Opera House on Washington street, as Miss Agnes Perry, will appear at the California Theatre. She was always a pleasing actress and has achieved quite a reputation in Boston and other Eastern cities. We are sure she will receive a cordial welcome from the San Francisco public on making her reappearance after many years in this city.

The Florences will commence an engagement at the California Theatre during the latter part of November.

The Installation Ball of the Olympic Club will take place at their hall at the corner of Howard and New Montgomery streets on Friday evening October 30th.

The Carnival Ball at the Pavilion last night was a great success. The floor was crowded with ladies and gentlemen in costume, and it is estimated that there must have been at least 8000 spectators in the galleries. For further particulars we refer our readers to the Morning Call which has surpassed itself in its report. When a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well, and the Call has certainly outstripped all competitors.

Bunker's Club-House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are far superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, at the Academy of Music a very good season of Italian Opera is being given. Marchetti's grand opera of "Ruy Blas" was presented on the 14th. On the 19th Mlle. Albani was to make her debut in "Lucia di Lammermoor"..... Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams were the recipient of a complimentary farewell benefit at Booth's on the 16th. On the 15th Miss Charlotte Cushman commenced an engagement in 'Henry VIII"..... At Wallack's, the attraction was "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," with J. H. Montague in the leading role....."The Sphinx' continued to draw large houses at Union Square Theatre.....The Mercury of the 12th says: After a career of unexampled good fortune throughout the United States, the popular Vokes family will give one farewell matinee at Daly's Fifth Avenue Theatre this evening. On this occasion Jessie, Victoria, Rosina Fred, and Fawdon will present for the last time in America their original success of the "Belles of the Kitchen."..... At the benefit given to the widow and children of late Mark Smith at Booth's, Miss Violetta Colville, the young American prima donna, who has been so many years studying in Italy, made her appearance. A New York paper says: The last act of "Lucia" was selected for her entree, and although she is au fait in "Linda," "Traviata," "Elisire di Amore" and other works, for some unexplained reason she passed through the trying ordeal of the "mad scene," which presented the debutante at a very great disadvantage. She was supported by Signori de Bfratelli, Scolara and Hall, and the chorus and orchestra of the Strakosch Italian opera, under the masterly baton of Max Maretzek. Miss Colville is young, of fair complexion and medium height, and is possessed of a sympathetic voice of fine compass, great purity of tone, and remarkably flexible. Her histronic acquirements and excellent method indicate careful study and dramatic genius. Her reception was one of the most spontaneously hearty ever heard in an American theatre, and long before the termination of her scena the stage was literally strewed with flowers. Miss Colville, although a little nervous, surpassed general anticipation and may be congratulated on having achieved a genuine triumph.....The bill at the Fifth Avenue Theatre is "The Critic," and Longfellow's beautiful poem, "The Hanging of the Crane," illustrated by tableaux. ....At the Lyceum, Miss Adelaide Neilson made her reappearance on the 19th, as Beatrice in 'Much Ado about Nothing," supported by J. T. Barnes, an English actor; G. B. Waldron is included in the support..... Of the Park Theatre and John T. Raymond as Col. Mulberry Sellers, the saying is still there's millions in it. FIGARO prophesied when this play was produced at the California Theatre, that John T. Raymond's fortune was in it. FIGARO, which we have heard it observed, is "the only dramatic authority on the Pacific coast," was right as usual.....At Niblo's the Rommelsburg and Schrotter Sisters have been added to the attractions of "The Deluge".....At Steinway Hall on the 14th Frederic Maccabe commenced a season with his entertainment entitled "Bygone Dull Care." The Tribune of the following morning says: In kind the entertainment offered by Mr Frederic Maccabe is not new. Mr. Sam Cowell, Mr Arthur Sketchley, Mr W H Lingard, Mr Tony Pastor, Mr Sol Russell, Mr Leon, Mr E D Davies and others, have given, in this city, either in whole or in part, performances of the sort that was submitted last evening, in Steinway Hall by Mr Maccabe. But in quality this artist's work possesses points of novelty and excellence that deserve to be recognized as peculiar and unusual. They chiefly arise out of his somewhat uncommonly refined individuality, but also they proceed from his somewhat exceptional talents and skill. Mr Maccabe is a slender, middle-aged gentleman, whose countenance is fresh, youthful, cheerful and frank, whose bearing is easy, and whose manners are simple and attractive. A tone of boyish ingenuousness pervades his whole personality and conduct. The suggested nature beneath his art is that of a sensitive, refined, and gentle person. The caliber of intellect that is suggested, however, is not strong, nor does the artist appear to possess depth of feeling. For the pathos that made Cowell's humor bring the tears and the smile at the same instant the spectator waits in vain; nor is there beneath Mr. Maccabe's fun a much stronger thread of suggested thought than may be traced through the songs and monologues of the Free and Easy. Mr. Maccabe's superiority is in texture. He does with native sweetness and spontaneous grace what many others have done coarsely and clumsily. This is a potent charm; and, when combined with fine animal spirits, good taste, and technical proficiency, it goes far to win good-will, and conquer upon the threshold. The victory is secured by Mr. Maccabe's remarkable imitative powers, and by his extraordinary ventriloquism. He is a good actor. He showed this in his sketch of a stupid old gentleman making an after-dinner speech, in his excellent copy of the London street-singer, with the gin voice and the barking cough. As art, this latter impersonation had but one defect: in copying life it copied some of its vulgarities—and thus substituted the photograph for the painting. A more ideal artist would omitted the coarse traits without sacrificing the mirth, and would have elevated the whole delineation by just a touch of the pathos appertaining to such a type and condition of human wretchedness. Mr. Maccabe's ventriloquism is somewhat better than that of Mr. Davies—which is saying much—but part of its superiority consists in the fact that it is unpretending, instead of being allied, as in the case of Mr. Davies, with commonness of personality and egregious self-conceit. Mr. Maccabe's changes of costume are made with astonishing rapidity, and his pianoplaying is rapid, dashing and even brilliant..... No changes of any consequence have occurred at Bryant's, Tony Pastor's, the San Francisco Minstrels, Metropolitan Theatre or Theatre Comique since our last summary.....At the Bowery the drama of "Kit Carson," introducing the Warm Spring Indians was the attraction.

Mrs. Lander is playing at the Royal Opera House Toronto.

Indianapolis critics are in ecstacies over the Richelieu of Mr. Lawrence Barrett

Mr. Jefferson is acting in Milwaukee, at the Academy of Music.

Mr. F. S. Chanfrau appeared at the Park Theatre, Brooklyn, on the 19th.

Anthony Nish, musical director of Moore & Burgess' Minstrels, London, Eng., died in that city Oct. 9. [So states a cable telegram received by Mr. G. W. Moore, now in this city, on Oct. 10.—ED. CLIPPER.] He made his start in the profession with Perham's Minstrels, and was subsequently connected with various other companies. In 1867, in company with Mr. Ocker, he managed a minstrel company in Melbourne, Australia. He had been connected with Moore & Burgess's Minstrels as leader of the orchestra and musical director for a number of years.

J. L. Davis and his performing dogs; Johnny Reese, Ella La Rue, and Billy Cavana appeared at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., on Oct. 5.

Fayette Welch, at present engaged at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo., challenges any person to a trial of skill in beating two tambourines.

The Hussey constellation perform at Syracuse, 19, two weeks; Portland, Me., Nov. 16, three weeks; Fall River, Mass., Dec. 21, two weeks.

Ilma Di Murska gave a concert at the Brooklyn, N. Y., Academy on Oct. 8, and, as it rained hard that night, the attendance scarcely paid expenses.

Delehanty and Hengler are to commence an engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., Oct. 26

Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, who is one of the most accomplished personators of old women now on the stage, still retains her position, which she has held since the foundation of the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Mrs. E. L. Davenport also joins the company shortly, to supply Miss Morant's place.

The last New York Mercury received says: O'Donnell and Moore, two city bill-posters, were sued during the past week by the management of the Union Square for $3,500 as damages for posting over the bills of that theatre.

Thomas Macdonough, of Bidwell & Macdonough's "Black Crook," now playing at Rio Janeiro, has shipped to New York 12,000 bags of coffee, purchased with the first week's receipts.

The New York Mercury says:

Manager Maguire has been in town of late seeking novelties for theatres in San Francisco.

Manager Maguire has not been out of San Francisco for many months. Some confidence man must have taken his name in vain.

John McCullough commenced an engagement at Baltimore on the 19th.

A Mrs. Goodwyn, of Alabama, a granddaughter of ex-President Tyler, and also of Cooper the tragedian, talks of going on the stage: She gave a reading at Baltimore 5th to a very small audience. She was impoverished by the war.

The New York Mercury says:

An absurd theory has long prevailed among a small and ostentatiously pious portion of the community that Sunday entertainments of the most elevated character were alike debasing and injurious to morality and religion. This theory has been refuted by the constantly increasing number of sacred concerts, and the practical benefit afforded in familiarizing all classes of society with the higher standard of music, which has aptly been termed the language of the angels. The Strackosch Italian opera, under the admirable conduct of Mr. S. Behrens, have made a move in the right direction, by inaugurating a successful series of entertainments at the Grand Opera House on the 4th. It is generally believed that the present Sunday concert experiment will develop into full blooming opera, as is the custom in the most Catholic cities of the old world.

"The Sphinx," adapted by George Dion expressly for Wood's Museum, Philadelphia, was produced Oct. 12 for the first time in that city, Miss Annie Ward Tiffany sustaining the principal character. She made quite a success in it, and was thrilling in the death agony.

The Vokes Family left for England 14th.

Mlle. Marietta Ravel was to have appeared at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, 12th, for a week, but has fallen suddenly ill, and remains in New York city.

J. K. Emmet, Brooklyn Theatre, 12th, two weeks; Chestnut, Philadelphia, 16th, two weeks.

The veteran Maggie Mitchell, Pittsfield, 23d; Oswego, N. Y., 31st.

At the Opera House, Albany, N. Y., E. L. Davenport closed a fairly successful engagement on Oct. 10. He has given his well-known impersonations of St. Mars, Hamlet, Sir Giles Overreach, Othello, Richelieu and Richard III with his customarily artistic excellence and power.

At Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Miss Louise Sylvester, Mlle. Alexandrina, Miss Lou Sandford, and McCullough and McGarvey made their appearance on Oct. 5. Miss Sylvester was very happy in her personation of five parts in the protean drama of "Nip."

Lotta concluded a successful engagement of four weeks at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 10th inst. During her closing week "Musette" was played the first three evenings, being followed on the 8th by the protean drama of "The Little Detective."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

More About Maccabe.

We knew that Frederick Maccabe would, when he came to America, make a prodigious hit, just as we knew J. L. Toole, an equal favorite in London, would fail here. The Spirit of the Times speaks as follows of the great protean actor:—

"It is rarely that so entertaining a performer as Mr. Maccabe appears in the world of amusement; and it is still rarer that nature endows any one man with the ability to entertain an audience single-handed so thoroughly as Mr. Maccabe does. His entertainment comprises songs, personations of a wide and varied range of characters, ventriloquism, instrumental music, and a constant, running fire of witty and pungent sayings. He is an artist of remarkable ability, and an actor of no mean order. His changes are rapid beyond precedent, and his individuality is sunk so often and so completely that we cannot but bestow upon him the highest encomiums. He appears in a full dress suit, and in a few modest words outlines his performance. He is soft of voice and prepossessing in appearance. He is thoroughly English in his conversation, and is a blonde. Before the audience he dons a wig, whiskers and moustache, and hastily making some slight changes in his apparel, disguises his identity absolutely, and looks, walks, and talks like Mr. Henry Russell. This sketch is followed by another totally different assumption of character, in every way as remarkable. His make-up is made instantaneously, and when he reappears it is almost impossible to believe that it is the same man. In less than thirty seconds he reappears once more as a full-dressed lady of fashion, and again is one mystified by his artistic performance. Each character is totally dissimilar from its predecessor, and each equally perfect in manner, tone, walk and action. The lady-killer is a most amusing, although a somewhat exaggerated picture of many gentlemen in fashionable society. His ventriloquisms, without the aid of puppets to deceive the eye, or moustachios to conceal the movements of the lips, are the best exhibitions of the art ever seen in New York, and knock E. D. Davies higher than a kite. But the most complete and absolute representation of character in his troubadour of the present time—a London street singer with a bad cold. This brought down the house, and settled the question of his success in America. No character essayed by him resembles another in any way, and if a finished actor, with different personal characteristics, had appeared in every sketch, it could not have been more perfect. He sings a lively and talking song in every character, accompanying himself generally upon the piano, and talking in a witty and happy vein throughout. Maccabe is an artist, and as such the Spirit welcomes him and predicts for him a great success. He is a whole theatre in himself, and no one should fail to see him."

A few thousand dollars await Mr. Maccabe in San Francisco. He had better come and get them.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Dear! Dear!

We are really grieved. Sheridan must be uneasy if his shade can revisit the pale glimpses of the moon and interview Boston lunatics. One of these writes for the Courier, over the signature of "Jay Bee," (funny!) and really gets up very good notices of modern dramas. "The School for Scandal," however has excited his ire and he thus sets the rest of the world right:

"Last year in London there was a rage for the production of old pieces, 'The School for Scandal' heading the list with its unprecedented run of over three hundred nights. The managers who were adventurous enough to bring out new dramas lost money, and those who revived the old ones throve apace. The past triumphed over the present, and for the time Robertson played second fiddle to Sheridan. We have just caught the contagion on this side the Atlantic, and bag wigs, satin knee-breeches and silk stockings seemed destined for the incoming season to take precedence of claw-hammer coats, lavender kids and spring-bottom pantaloons.

The gilded sin of the French adultery drama is supplanted by the classic smut of the good old English comedy.

It seems to be the generally accepted opinion among English-speaking people that "The School for Scandal" is the best comedy in the language. If the sole aim of the comedy be to exhibit the weaknesses and follies of human nature, through the dramatic medium of knaves, hypocrites, rakes, slanderers and fools, this opinion is undoubtedly the correct one. The most important personages we meet with in Sheridan's comedy certainly belong to these classes, and they ventilate their peculiarities in dialogue which is a miracal of literary smartness.

Charles Surface is a heartless rake which the author's thin veneering of high spirits and good fellowship cannot disguise. Joseph is a designing scoundrel, and to make matters worse, an exceedingly clumsy one. He really has not sufficient motive for his action, and as a motiveless villain he lacks that flavor and gust of iniquity which can alone make such fellows enjoyable. Sir Peter, the most human character in the whole piece, is a fond old fool whom we would sympathize profoundly with were he not such an ass as to forgive his wife. Sir Oliver is the conventional blusterer, with whom the English stage has been familiar since the days of Wycherly and Vanbrugh. Crabtree and Sir Crabtree and Sir Benjamin are a couple of back-biters, who would be offensive if they were not clever. Marie is an insipid nobody, and Mrs. Candour and Lady Sneerwell are a couple of tea-drinking tabbies whom we are half inclined to pardon the stabbing of reputations, they seem to enjoy it so intensely.

And these are the personages wherewith the much vaunted best comedy in the language is constructed.

That there are such people in the world and plenty of them, we all know full well, but that humanity is composed entirely of such individuals I am strongly inclined to doubt.

And yet, Sheridan, it appears, would have us think so.

There is an element of heartlessness which pervades this piece throughout, an utter lack of sympathy with the deeper and nobler feelings of human nature, which the brilliance of dialogue, so far from excusing, only serves to intensify. It is the splendid raillery of a highly gifted man of the world, who cares for nothing, who hopes for nothing, and worse than all, believes in nothing. We are amused in seeing it for it possesses to the fullest the qualities of brevity, bouyancy and brightness, yet none the less do we arise unsatisfied and with a lower opinion of human nature than when we sat down. Sheridan seems to forget that although there is a delightful sufficiency of rapscallions and scapegraces in the world, there is also a fair proportion of heroes and martyrs. And no faithful picture of civilized society in any age can be complete without a liberal admixture of the good with the bad."

We would suggest to Jay Bee that there is not one character in the old fashioned comedy of "The School for Scandal" who has not his or her living counterpart to-day. Perhaps this may account for the "continued success" of the play.

Never backs Down.

Max Adeler says: The Morning Argus, down at our place is scrupulously careful of the honor of journalism. When it makes any assertion it never takes it back under any circumstances. The other day it announced that a certain Mr. Stebbin had been eaten in the woods by Squire Hoover's pigs. The next day Stebbin called at the office to say that the whole story was false; such a thing had never occurred, and he wanted a contradiction published. The reporter assumed a solemn look, and assured Stebbins that when the Argus said a thing, that thing was so; and besides, that he had been over to see the pigs, and they looked as though they had eaten a man named Stebbins, and there was nobody named Stebbins around there, so he must have been eaten, and all the circumstantial evidence was so strong not another line upon the subject would be published. Then Stebbins threatened violence and subsequently the reporter agreed to put in a paragraph to the effect that persons who had any objections to eating any member of the Stebbins family need not on that account decline to buy sausages of Hoover, and that was as far as he could conscientiously go. It is perfectly clear that if men are to be permitted to stultify a free press with their foolery, our liberties are in danger.

Off for England.

The New York Spirit of the Times says:

Mr. Owen Marlowe, an actor who some few years ago was regarded as the very beau ideal of the stage fop and the Hawtrea par excellence in this country, has left for England to find a place in some English theatre. Latterly he has not exhibited the same amount of talent as in bygone days. Perhaps a change of scene and association will imbue him with fresh life and inspire him to new triumphs. Mr. Marlowe is a polished and refined gentleman, and we wish him success in his new field.

We have very little doubt but that Mr. Marlowe will be heartily welcomed back to the English stage, and will, at once secure a good position. There are not too many such gentlemanly actors on the stage on either side of the Atlantic.

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
"Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T,'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Opera House.

A new programme will be performed at this house to-night. The first part will end with the descriptive finale "The Freshman's Class," by Billy Emerson, J. R. Kemble and Ben Cotton. After this, Harry Rickards will sing some of his most admired character and motto songs, Ernest Linden, the burlesque prima donna will appear. "The Three Doves" will be performed by Billy Arlington Billy Rice and Ben Cotton. Billy Emerson will present several of his inimitable characteristicus, the screaming farce of "The Fellow that Looks Like Me" will be played, and the evening's entertainment will terminate with the marvelous feat entitled "The Leap for Life" by Lottie and Frank.

California Theatre.

To-night Frank Mayo will enter upon the last week of his very successful engagement at this house. The play of "Griffith Gaunt" will be presented with Mr. Mayo as the hero, Miss Bella Pateman as Kate, T. W. Keene as Neville, Henry Edwards as Tom Leicester, Nelson Decker as Father Leonard, Miss Bella Chapman as Mercy, Miss Kitty Wilton as Caroline, Mrs. C. B. Saunders as Dame Vint, and a generally strong cast. It is seldom that a play is produced which brings so many of the California Theatre company on the stage together. Generally there are so many off the stage disengaged as are required for the production of the play. This pleasant reunion of the company will, we are sure, be appreciated by the public. "Griffith Gaunt" will only be played to-night and to-morrow night.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night "M. Alphonse," translated from the French by Celia Logan, will be produced at this house. For some weeks past the scene painters have been at work on this play, and the result of their labors will be apparent this evening. Their work has been concentrated on the beautiful scene in which the whole of the action of the play takes place. Miss Zoe Vane will appear as Mme. Raymonde Montaiglin, Miss Sydney Cowell as Mme. Guichard, Fay Templeton as the child Mlle. Adrienne, James A. Herne as Jean Marc de Montaiglin the old sea captain, J. O. Barrow as Dieudonne the notary, and Wilkie as Reme. With such a juvenile genius as Fay Templeton, to play Adrienne, "M. Alphonse," cannot fail to be a success. George T. Evans has written a new overture for the play.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Toers and John Kelly in "The Two Dentists," Miss Maggie Brower, Frank Mortimore and Harry Devoy in "The Fellow That Looks Like Me," Hughey Robinson in local hits and many other attractions are offered at this house.

Billy Rice's Benefit.

Billy Rice will take his benefit on Friday. In addition to the performance by Emerson's Minstrels the following volunteers will appear: Mestayer & White in double song and dance, Frank R. Clifton on the horizontal bar, Sam Martin the original one leg song and dance man, and Sheridan Brothers in an artistic clog dance.

Promenade Concert.

To-morrow evening, the First Regiment of Infantry, N. G. C., Col. W. H. L. Barnes, commanding, will give a grand promenade concert at the Mechanics' Pavilion. There will be a carefully formed orchestra of fifty pieces conducted by George T. Evans. A feature of the programme will be the grand march from "Tannhauser." After the concert, dance-music will be played and those who wish to go through the giddy mazes of the waltz and all that sort of thing, can do so. During the evening the regiment will be reviewed by the Commander-in Chief and their officers.

IMPORTANT ART SALE.—Next Friday Norton Bush will offer at Messrs. H. M. Newhall & Co's. rooms, about sixty tropical, Californian and Eastern pictures. Many of the works are veritable gems. The N. Y. Herald, Post, Frank Leslie's Weekly and other papers have spoken of this artist in the most flattering terms. The picture will remain open to public inspection from Monday to the day of sale.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

Mrs. Agnes Booth and Mr. Joseph Wheelock, who are to be the next attraction at the California Theatre, arrived overland last night.

Mr. J. B. Booth, an old time resident of San Francisco, also arrived overland last night. Everybody will be happy to clasp "Jun" by the hand, and will rejoice to find him as healthy and hearty as ever.

We shall probably have an equestrian season at the Palace Pavilion next week. It is full time. It is three months since we have had a circus in town.

Family Oyster Rooms.

It is fashionable for ladies, now-a-days, to go to Joe Giusti's new Family Oyster Rooms, 105 California Market, for their meals: Joe, with natural gallantry, saves for them his finest oysters, the fattest quails and the choicest chops and steaks. Open night and day. 9-bi

Would not Stand It.

The Reese River Reveille says: The following story is related of Justice Scott, the bright judicial mind who presides over the destinies of the Justice's Court at Battle Mountain. A short time since, an English passenger on one of the trains was fleeced by some three card monte sharps, and went before Scott for the purpose of making a complaint. Before the complaint could be drawn up, however, the monte men returned the property to the passenger, who wishing to continue his journey, refused to make a complaint. Scott insisted that he must make the complaint, and when he declined, addressed him as follows: "I'll have you know, sir, that no subject of Great Britain or any of the crowned heads of Europe shall browbeat this Court with impunity; I fine you fifty dollars, sir, for contempt of Court." The Britisher paid the money and went his way musing on the uncertainties of American justice.

Who is He?

Who is the explanatory Sacramentan thus referred to in the following paragraph from the Detroit Free Press: "A Detroit lady who has been in California for some months past, started for home the other day, and one of her relatives went to the telegraph office in Sacramento and notified the husband in Detroit, saying: 'Your wife starts this morning.' So far, so good; but he did not have the money to pay for the dispatch, and feeling a little cheap over it, he added to the telegram: 'I haven't paid for this dispatch—left my money at home; will make it up all right the next time I write you.' The twenty-one extra words made a bill which caused the Detroiter to turn pale." Will the Sacramentan explain—just for the fun of the thing?

Titled Darkies.

A letter writer in the South says you can not go on a cotton plantation in Alabama now without hearing the commands: "Senator, start right smart to your cotton picking;" "Judge, you go and bring my horse around;" or, "Colonel, have a shoe put on that mule right along."

As Near as she Could Define It.

They say that a member of one of the Eastern Legislatures recently wrote home to his wife to know what his religion was, and that she wrote back that he had better call it Protestant, and let it go at that.

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part, and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys, Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 217 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required.

What Cheer Laundry.

Raising a Church Subscription.

Woodland must be a horrid sort of place, not long ago they got up a lottery to build a lot of public halls and endow charities, and there was never any distribution of the prizes made. Now the Woodland Democrat says: A "committee" at Davisville started out last week with a paper and pencil to solicit subscriptions for the ostensible purpose of building, at that place, a church of the Latter Day Saints. In one hour "the amounts set opposite our names" footed up seventeen hundred and forty dollars. The next morning the committee went on a collecting tour. Calling on Fred. Schultz they demanded $200. "What's that for?" said Fred., "I only subscribed two dollars and you've raised it by adding two naughts." The pious committee compromised the matter by agreeing to erase Fred's name from the paper if he would "treat" the crowd. It transpired that the whole list had been "raised" in a similar manner with similar results in collecting until, as Fred asserts, "the committee got gloriously demoralized and didn't have money enough left to buy a cow bell."

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Gorville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by its present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-6

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10-4

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Clothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Clothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 1-x

These be Facts.

The Stockton Leader, edited by Laura de Force Gordon, says:

The editor of the Oakland Transcript has again manifested his usual stupidity, in commenting upon the killing of Major Larkyns by C. J. Muybridge, for alleged criminal intimacy with the latter's wife. He says: * * * "What we contend is this: That the woman is as guilty as the man, and should meet with the same punishment. It is generally the woman who makes the first advance—certainly no man ever approached a woman unless some sign was hung out." Now if that isn't a little "cheekier" than anything we have heard advanced lately! We don't know what sort of a "sign" has answered the purpose of attracting the Transcript man, but for ordinary male mortals a feminine wardrobe upon a passably attractive looking body has been sufficient to insure the approach of beetle-headed boobys—true sons of Adam, every one of them, for six thousand years, for aught we know. The first to make advances, indeed! Why there isn't a passable-looking female under twenty-five who can travel alone by stage-coach, rail, or steamer, across the continent, without having every egotistical male animal of asinine nature (and such are everywhere plentiful) believe she was cunningly casting her net to catch them, if she treated them with the common civility of a lady who chanced to be their compagnon du voyage. Pshaw! Patter such stuff to babes, and adult fools!

In Themselves the Fault.

Avoid people who have no faith in their kind. They are dangerous to deal with. A thorough knowledge of their own bad hearts is at the bottom of their disgust of others. Taking it for granted that everybody with whom they come in business contact is bent on overreaching them, their object is to spike the enemy's artillery by being the first to overreach. Candor is lost upon them. They consider it refined hypocrisy. Favors they look upon as cunningly devised lures, intended to lure them into a trap, and while receiving them willingly, chuckle inwardly at the thought that they are old birds, and cannot be caught by any such devices. These creatures think they understand human nature. Poor wretches, of all the thousand springs of human action they know but one, and that the worst—selfishness. Let them stop that spring in their own moral machinery, if they can. Let them do it for their own sakes, for they can never know how much of good there is in the world until they do.

Remedies for Rheumatism.

Judge Pitman has suffered a good deal from rheumatism lately, and he was surprised to find not only how many positive cures for the disease exist, but how diverse people's views are upon the subject. When he first mentioned the fact of his suffering to old Squills, the druggist, Squills assured him that there is only one thing on this earth that will cure rheumatism, and that is Biles' Liniment. The judge purchased eight bottles, and he was just finishing up the last, when Partridge happened to come in, and ascertaining what the judge was doing, he expressed astonishment that a man of Pitman's sense should fool with such a remedy as that, when all the world knew that the only sure thing for rheumatism was a mixture of vinegar and turpentine. So the judge bought a couple of jugs of the stuff and applied it. It made his leg as raw as a November morning, and upon complaining of the fact to Magruder, the latter said he could have very little sympathy with the sufferings of a man who would try such an experiment, when all intelligent people were aware that a simple mustard plaster would cure the worst case of rheumatism ever heard of. Then the judge applied a mustard plaster to his raw leg that night, and suffered eight hours of inconceivable torture until morning, when Cooley came in to borrow the axe, and upon hearing the judge's story of his anguish, said he didn't like to be hard on a man who was in trouble, but really to put a mustard plaster on such a leg, in the face of the fact that electricity was the only true remedy for rheumatism that had ever been discovered, did look to him a little like insanity. Then Cooley brought in a battery that he owned and told the judge to turn the handle whenever he wanted a shock and he would be all right in a couple of days. The judge got his hired man to work the crank, and just as he was taking a shock that made him howl with pain and set his leg to aching worse than Napoleon Bonaparte ached for glory, Dr. Hopper called, and when he found what the judge was doing he smiled a sad kind of a smile, and said that the superstitious faith of uninformed persons in the curative power of electricity had always been a source of painful surprise to him, and particularly the belief that it would cure rheumatism, when science had revealed the fact that absolutely the only thing that ever touched that disease was cold water applied with bandages. So the judge applied cold water, and he was just beginning to realize that it made his rheumatism worse, when he met Dr. Brown in the street and told him what Hopper had said. Dr. Brown laughed sardonically and observed that if it were only possible to suppress the quacks in this world the medical profession might hope to do some good for suffering humanity. He had thought that nothing Hopper could do would astonish him, but he must say that for even such an ass to advise the application of cold water, when the entire faculty had agreed that hot water was the single substance that touched rheumatism anywhere, was simply amazing. Then the judge went home, got into the bath tub and turned the water on his leg. An hour afterward he was in bed with no skin on the injured member. When he got well, he procured a butcher-knife and a cross-cut saw and hacked his leg off; now he says he is convinced that a man had better poison himself at once than to accept advice from his friends when he is sick.

The Head of the Family.

A gentleman who purchased a box of peaches at the Central Market, recently, looked around for a boy who would carry them home, and presently he found a ragged lad seated on a box eating the last remnant of a pear. The man asked him if he would not like to earn ten cents by carrying the box to such a number and street, and the boy promptly replied that he wouldn't. "Why?" queried the man. "Why?" echoed the boy, "because dad died the other day and now I'm the head of the family, and how'd I look lugging peaches around?"

Oysters.

In strolling round the other night,
To look at 'Frisco by gas light,
Our careless feet, by chance did stray
To where a fountain's ceaseless play
Of sparkling waters, made a screen
Through which a sweet bouquet was seen;
While mossy stone and pearly shell,
O'er which the waters softly fell,
Made that window seem to be
Some fairy grotto of the sea.
Stop," said my friend, "let's go in here
It looks so nice—and try their cheer."
"All right," I said, "I must agree
That this place suits me to a 'T,'"
No sooner had we found a seat
Than at our side a waiter neat
Made his appearance, asked our wish—
Said they had almost any dish
That we might name. We found it true,
And cooked magnificently, too;
All kinds of oysters, juicy, fat,
Cooked every style; just think of that,
And if your mouth don't water, then
You're different from other men.
They'd clams and crabs and terrapins;
In fact, we found they had within
That cosy place all kinds of game,
Fish, flesh or fowl which we could name,
While every dish was, I am sure,
Prepared to tempt an epicure.
The ladies, too, have found, 'twould seem,
That they have here the best ice cream;
So here they flock, the little sinners,
To get what they call "such nice dinners."
Whoever doubts this let him rush
To three hundred thirty-seven Bush,
And there this truth he'll find made plain:
Who goes there once will go again.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

A very effective performance of the thrilling play of "Griffith Gaunt," was given last night to a good house. Frank Mayo as the jealous Cumberland squire, did some capital acting, not firing down the character too much, but representing the brutal side of the man's nature in all its deformity. Miss Pateman gave a charming representation of Kate, and was repeatedly applauded. Mr. Mayo and Miss Pateman were called before the curtain at the end of the third act. T. W. Keene filled the role of Neville well, Henry Edwards did an excellent bit of character acting as Tom Leicester, and Nelson Decker gave an admirable personation of Brother Leocard, carefully avoiding any drawl in his enunciation, which some actors think necessary when performing clerical characters, and bringing out the fine points of the part with much skill. Miss Ella Wiltor, who is so charming in sympathetic parts, played that of the vindictive Caroline, in a style which astonished the audience, and made her usually pleasant countenance appear as hard and unrelenting as that of Medusa. Miss Belle Chapman as Mercy, Mrr. C. R. Saunders as Dame Vint, William Barry as Paul Carrick, and the other artists engaged in the representation, played their respective parts well. The play was handsomely mounted and was most successfully presented. It will be repeated this evening.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Dumas' play of "M. Alphonse," translated by Celia Logan, was very successfully produced at this theatre last night. The action of the play takes place in one scene, representing the drawing room in the villa of Jean Marc de Montaiglin with conservatory above. This, as presented at Maguire's New Theatre last night, was one of the most beautiful sets ever seen on the California stage, and did infinite credit to M. Straur, the scenic artist, Gulliver and assistants, and S. Bostwick, who provide the properties. The furniture was pretty and appropriate, and the conservatory, with real flowers, hanging baskets, and canary birds in cages, presented a very attractive appearance. At the back of the stage is a balcony on which is a statue, and beneath is seen the ocean. J. A. Herne, the experienced stage manager, has spared no pains to put this piece on the stage in a manner worthy of it, and has been aided in every way by the management, who have provided money liberally. Miss Celia Logan has made a faithful translation of the play, has not attempted an "adaptation," and has consequently done her share of the work well. A version of this play was presented in New York, in which the so-called naughtiness was toned down until very little of the original spirit was left in the play. We have before published the plot, but as all may not be familiar with it, we briefly sketch it: Jean Marc de Montaiglio (J. A. Herne), an elderly sea captain, has married Raymonde (Miss Alice Vane), who, deceived and abandoned by a scamp Octave, known sometimes as M. Alphonse (Thomas Whiffen), becomes the mother of a child. Octave being about to marry, Mme. Guichard (Miss Sidney Cowell), wishes to get the child Adrienne (Fay Templeton), off his hands and proposes that Mademoiselle Raymonde de Montaiglin shall take care of it. He tells M. Montaiglin that he, being about to marry, wishes to find a home for the child of his bachelorhood. The good-hearted Commander gives Octave a little lecture and then tells him to bring the child. Adrienne has been trained not to recognize her mother when any one is present, and this affords Fay Templeton an opportunity for some clever acting of which she fully avails herself. No sooner is Adrienne established in her new home than Mme Guichard who is intensely jealous arrives and creates a scene, the result is that Mme. Raymonde de Montaiglin confess to her husband that the child is hers. Montaiglin, who loves his wife dearly, comforts and sustains her, and to shield her from the world's censure and keep Adrienne with her mother, makes a formal declaration that the child is his natural offspring. Mme. Guichard attempts to obtain the child by similar means. In the end Adrienne stays with her mother and the kind-hearted Commander, the wretched Octave is unmasked and is rejected by Mme. Guichard, and all the good people are happy. Miss Alice Vane did some good acting as Mme. Raymonde. Fay Templeton made every point in the part of Adrienne with the skill of a veteran actress, Jas. A. Herne gave a splendid rendition of the role of the noble-hearted Montaiglin; Thomas Whiffen, who is a very clever light comedian, and a most valuable addition to the company at Maguire's New Theatre, acted the part of Octave capitally never making him for a minute a hero, but always letting the audience appreciate the meanness of his nature. Miss Sydney Cowell as the fast, vulgar Mme. Guichard, acted with much spirit, and rattled off her lines in the most vivacious manner. J. O. Barrow, as the notary, was gentlemanly and natural, and J. Wilkes was good in both make-up and acting in the role of the old sailor Remy. "M. Alphonse," pure and unadulterated, will, we think, have a run in San Francisco. The moral of it is "Charity." This used to be reckoned the chief of the Christian virtues, but too many Christians, now-a-days, consider it a very dangerous thing. For such there is a sermon in "M. Alphonse."

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"The Fellow That Looks Like Me" by Miss Maggie Brewer, Frank Mortimore and Harry Devoy. "The Two Dentists" by Johnny Tuers and John Kelly, "The Flower of Connamara," in which Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson, Miss Maggie Brewer and others appear, will form a portion of the entertainment this evening.

Billy Rice's Benefit.

Billy Rice will take his benefit on Friday. In addition to the performance by Emerson's Minstrels the following volunteers will appear: Mestayer & White in double song and dance, Frank R. Clifton on the horizontal bar, Sam Martin the original one leg song and dance man, and Sheridan Brothers in an artistic clog dance.

IMPORTANT ART SALE.—Next Friday Norton Bush will offer at Messrs. H. M. Newhall & Co's. rooms, about sixty tropical, Californian and Eastern pictures. Many of the works are veritable gems. The N. Y. Herald, Post, Frank Leslie's Weekly and other papers have spoken of this artist in the most flattering terms. The picture will remain open to public inspection from Monday to the day of sale.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United

Opera House.

There was as a matter of course a crowded house last night. The record never varies, rain or shine. The performance was excellent. Billy Emerson, J. R. Kemble and Ben Cotton appeared to capital advantage in the first part finale, Harry Rickards sang some of his best songs in his best style. Ernest Linden appeared as the burlesque queen of song, and Billy Arlington, Billy Rice and Ben Cotton sent the audience into fits of laughter by the manner in which they performed a grotesque act entitled "The Three Doves." Billy Emerson presented some of his most amusing characterizations, the act of 'The Fellow That Looks Like Me" was performed in good style, and the performance ended with the thrilling act entitled "The Leap for Life," performed by Lottie and Frank, who are the sensation performers of the day.

Promenade Concert.

This evening the First Regiment of Infantry, N. G. C., Col. W. H. L. Barnes, commanding, will give a grand promenade concert at the Mechanics' Pavilion. There will be a carefully formed orchestra of fifty pieces conducted by George T. Evens. A feature of the programme will be the grand march from "Tannhauser." After the concert, dance-music will be played and those who wish to go through the giddy mazes of the waltz and all that sort of thing, can do so. During the evening the regiment will be reviewed by the Commander-in Chief and their officers.

Woodward's Gardens.

On Saturday and Sunday next there will be a grand concert by Wetterman's orchestra, an assaut d'armes between Captain Martin and Professor Miller, the best swordsmen on the Coast, and a number of other entertainments

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys, Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Colville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. B. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if required. B

LA DAME AUX CAMILIAS.

BY T. B. ALDRICH.

I think that was the play;
The house was packed from pit to dome
With the gallant and the gay,
Who had come to see the tragedy;
And while the hours away.

There was the ruined spendthrift,
And beauty in her prime;
There was the grave Historian,
And there the man of Rhyme.
And the surly Critic, front to front,
To see the play of crime.

And there was pompous Ignorance,
And Vice in flowers and lace,
Sir Croesus and Sir Pandarus,
And the music played apace;
But of all that crowd I only saw
A single, single face.

That girl whom I had known
In the Summers long ago,
When her breath was like the new-mown hay,
Or the sweetest flowers that grow;
When her heart was light and her soul was white
As the Winter's driven snow.

And there she sat with her great brown eyes—
They wore a troubled look;
And I read the history of her life
As it were an open book;
And saw her soul, like a slimy thing,
In the bottom of a brook.

There she sat in her rustling silk,
With diamonds on her wrist,
And on her brow a gleaming thread
Of pearl and a nethyst.
"A cheat, a gilded grief!" I said,
And my eyes were filled with mist.

I could not see the players play;
I heard the music moan;
It moaned like a dismal Autumn wind,
That dies in the woods alone;
And when it stopped I heard it still,—
A mournful monotone!

What if the Count were true or false?
I did not care, not I;
What if Camille for Armand died?
I did not see her die.
There sat a woman opposite
With pitcous look and eye

The great green curtain fell on all,
On laugh, and wine and woe,
Just as death some day will fall
'Twixt us and life, I know!
The play was done, the bitter play,
And the people turned to go.

And did they see the tragedy?
They saw the painted scene:
They saw Armand, the jealous fool,
And the sick Parisian queen;
But they did not see the tragedy—
The one I saw, I mean.

They did not see that cold-cut face,
That furtive look of care;
Or, seeing her jewels only said,
"The lady's rich and fair."
But I tell you 'twas the Play of Life,
And that woman played Despair!

This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10 Q

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Jones & Dunbar's.

W. G. Jones and J. W. Dunbar having purchased the Saloon under the Russ House, would be pleased to see all their friends and the public generally at their symposium. The saloon has been entirely re-decorated and re-furnished. 8-x

Decidedly an Ass

A man sent a note to a rich neighbor, with whom he was on friendly terms, to borrow an ass for a few hours. The worthy old man was no scholar, and happened to have a guest sitting with him at the time, to whom he did not wish to expose his ignorance. Opening the note, and pretending to read it, he reflected a moment, and turned to the servant: "Very good," said he, "tell your master I'll come myself presently."

Fleecing the Flock.

A religious body having resolved to build a new church, the pastor went about begging very zealously, accepting not only the widow's but the child's mite. In the school one Sabbath, while instructing the children, he compared himself to a shepherd and then inquired what the latter did with his flock. One bright-eyed little fellow promptly replied, "He shears them."

Laying a Railroad.

The Credit Mobilier has been outdone in Arkansas. A railroad company in that State, in order to realize the State aid, built a section of ten miles, drew the bonds thereon, took up the rails and relaid them on the second section, then drew another instalment of bonds, and so on until its whole quota of bonds had been drawn and no road built. That's smart.

We Wish he May Get Her.

A gentleman in Florida is desirous of obtaining a wife, who must have "a cow, a good feather bed, comfortable linens, and five hundred dollars in good genuine greenbacks. She must also understand the whole art of tending children, and must have been through the small-pox and measles."

Strong in Piety.

A Cleveland youth of rather fast proclivities fell in love with a parson's daughter, and, as a clincher to his claims, said to the reverend gentleman: "I go my bottom dollar on pionsness, and I will pray you for stamps on the spot."

Very Trying.

An English clergyman exclaimed, in a company of his fellow-preachers, "Ah, well, there is only one thing in our ministrations more trying to me than preaching." "Indeed!" they said, "and what may that be?" "Hearing any one else preach," he replied.

Cause for Thankfulness.

The celebrated Chesterfield is said to have died with a witticism on his lips. When told that he was dying by inches, he thanked heaven that he was not so tall by a foot and a half as Sir Thomas Robinson.

Georgia "Poetry."

A little thieving is a dangerous part, but stealing largely is a noble art; 'tis mean to rob a henroost of a hen, but stealing thousands makes us a gentlemen—said a Georgia poet.

The Irish Language.

The only church where sermons are preached in Irish in this country is at Elmira, Ill. A priest from Canada preaches a sermon in English, and, after a short intermission, repeats it in Irish.

Unkind.

At a meeting of Congregational ministers, one gentleman, who stated that he had been Eastward with his "superintendant," was interrupted by a brother clergyman, who asked if he meant his wife.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-x

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the professian and all spicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

Photographic.

Edouart & Cobb, 504 Kearny street, produce Pastel Paintings which are superior to either Oil or Water Colors. Enlargements in all styles, general photographic work guaranteed. 9-BH.

Morse's Palace of Art.

Visitors should not fail to visit Morse's Gallery, 417 Montgomery street. The finest and most perfectly finished pictures are taken by Mr. Morse of any place in the world. 8-x

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 218 Sutter street, near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. r

Dr. Aborn.

Oculist, Aurist, Catarrh, throat and lung physician, corner Post and Kearny streets. Entrance on Post street. Office hours 10 1-2 A. M. to 3 P. M., 6 to 7 P M. 8-q

USE MANNING'S SALAD DRESSING—best and cheapest in town—at Oyster House 672 Howard street, near Third. 5-x

The Latest New York Play.

Mr. Bronson Howard's latest play, "Moorcroft," was produced at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, and was a failure, if we are to believe the following from the Herald of the following day, which says:

"In the first scene we are presented to an honorable specimen of the chivalrous South who tries to sell his brother as a slave and afterwards to murder him, the last filial act being rendered impossible by a stab inflicted by the intended victim. This incident brings down the curtain in the first act. It may be well to point out here that the new play in underlying plot is as old as Mr. Boucicault's Quadroon, only the victim of the slave laws in the present case is presented as a man instead of a woman. Mr. Howard takes occasion to acknowledge his obligation to Mr. John Hay for the idea of his play, but he forgot apparently that the 'Quadroon' was produced some years ago, and that its interest hinged on the infamous Slave law, which exposed fine and cultured persons of color to the danger of being sold into slavery. In so far as it touches on the Dred Scott decision we believe the point has been illustrated in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' in a still more intensely dramatic manner than the author has attempted. Thus we see that of the new drama it cannot lay claim to much originality so far as the invention of the underlying, life-giving idea is concerned. It, however, differs sufficiently in treatment to justify the author is claiming it as his own, and we do not think that any rival will be likely to dispute his claim. The play is divided into four acts. The second has little or no connection with the main plot, and the fourth is little more than an exhibition of millinery, which is very pretty, but appeals more to the eye than to the mind. However, upholstery and wedding costumes have become by prescription so important a part of the modern drama that we have well nigh lost the right to protest. And as dramatic authors have lost the power of writing natural or graceful dialogue it is but justice that the costumers should come to his aid to educate us through the eye, since the authors can no longer inform our minds. It would be difficult to speak justly of the dialogue of Mr. Bronson's play. There is not a sparkle in it all. The comedy is the dreariest rubbish that even the modern comedy has produced, and were it not somewhat relieved by an occasional fratricide it would be unbearable. Indeed the comedy may be said to have no existence in this piece, for whenever it is introduced it descends into the regions of low farce or burlesque. Miss Davenport, who does not properly belong to the main plot of the play, by one of those gymnastic tricks of the authors of modern society plays was thrust into prominence in the second act as a young American lady—one of that peculiar type that at the seaside dresses for a morning's stroll on the beach as if she were going to the opera. We were under the impression that the shoddy people who are guilty of this class of outrage against good taste were an outcome of civil war. If this be so, it is somewhat of an anachronism to send of the class to Newport, in 1858. It is also rather funny to see a gentleman "tipping" the servant with fifty cents stamps in the same year. But so that the morning costumes are rich enough we suppose that such trifles must be passed over as mere matters of detail. Some of the incidents in this play require to be challenged as showing either a lamentable ignorance on the part of the author or a most reprehensible lack of morality on the part of the society he sketches.

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate. G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-x

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance Try them. n

Family Oyster Rooms.

It is fashionable for ladies, now-a-days, to go to Joe Gaustil's new Family Oyster Rooms, 105 California Market, for their meals: Joe, with natural gallantry, saves for them his finest oysters, the fattest quails and the choicest chops and steaks. Open night and day. 9-bi

The Journalistic Mania.

Max Adeler says:

I believe I have never reported to the public the case of Colonel Bangs, the editor of The Morning Argus. Bangs became a journalist because he couldn't help it. Shortly after he was born it was discovered that the supply of nourishment afforded by the maternal fount was insufficient, and the doctor ordered that the baby should be fed upon goat's milk. This was procured from a goat that was owned by an Irishwoman, who lived in the rear of the office of The Weekly Startler, and fed her goat chiefly upon the exchanges which came to that journal. The consequence was, that young Bangs was fed entirely upon milk that was formed from digested newspapers, and he throve on it, although when the Irishwoman mixed the Democratic journals carelessly with the Whig papers, they disagreed after they were eaten, and the milk gave the baby the colic. Old Bangs intended the boy to be a minister; but as soon as he was old enough to take notice, he cried for every newspaper he happened to see; and no sooner did he learn how to write than he began to slash off editorials upon the "Impending Crisis," etc. He ran away from school four times to enter a newspaper office as a devil, and finally, when old Bangs put him in the House of Refuge, he started a weekly in there, and called it The House of Refuge Record; and one day he slid over the wall, and went down to the Era office, where he changed his name to Whangs, and began his career on that paper with an article on "Our Reformatory Institutions for the Young." Then old Bangs surrendered to what seemed to be a combination of manifest destiny and goat's milk, and permitted him to pursue his profession. The colonel says he has the instinct so strong, that if he should fall into the crater of Vesuvius, his first thought on striking bottom would be to write somebody to ask for a dead-head pass to come out with. But you would hardly believe this story if you ever read the Argus. I often suspect, when I am looking over that sheet, that the nurse used to mix the goat's milk with an unfair proportion of water.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

A numerous audience enjoyed the second performance of "M. Alphonse" last night. The excellent manner in which the play was put on the stage, the strong situations in the second act, the admirable acting of J. A. Herne, Fay Templeton and Miss Alice Vane, and the general perfection which characterized the production of the play were the subject of general remark. "M. Alphonse" will be repeated every evening until further notice.

Opera House.

Miss Lottie and her brother Frank in their "Leap for Life" continue a great feature of the performance at this house. Billy Emerson appears nightly in his best specialties, Rickard in character songs, Ernest Linden in burlesque vocalisms, and Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble, Ben Cotton, Billy Arlington and others cause much fun in amusing acts.

California Theatre.

"Griffith Gaunt" was performed again last night. To-night Mr. Mayo will appear in his own dramatization of Wilkie Collins' novel "Man and Wife." This will be kept on the stage for two nights only. The full cast is published on our first page. Friday evening is set apart for Mr. Mayo's benefit. "The Marble Heart" will be played.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"The Sublime and the Ridiculous," "The Two Dentists," and "The Fellow that Looks Like Me," are the acts to be performed to-night by Johnny Tuers, Miss Maggie Brewer, Frank Mortimore and others. The performance will end with "The Flower of Connamara."

Billy Rice's Benefit.

Billy Rice will take his benefit on Friday. In addition to the performance by Emerson's Minstrels the following volunteers will appear: Messieyer & White in double song and dance, Frank R. Clifton on the horizontal bar, Sam Martin the original one leg song and dance man, and Sheridan Brothers in an artistic clog dance.

Promenade Concert.

The Promenade Concert and Review of the First Regiment at the Mechanics' Pavilion last night, proved quite a success. There was an immense attendance, and the music and the military evolutions were much admired by all present.

IMPORTANT ART SALE.—Next Friday Norton Bush will offer at Messrs. H. M. Newhall & Co's. rooms, about sixty tropical, Californian and Eastern pictures. Many of the works are veritable gems. The N. Y. Herald, Post, Frank Leslie's Weekly and other papers have spoken of this artist in the most flattering terms. The picture will remain open to public inspection from Monday to the day of sale.

Woodward's Gardens.

On Saturday and Sunday next there will be a grand concert by Wetterman's orchestra, an assaut d'armes between Captain Martin and Professor Miller, the best swordsmen on the Coast, and a number of other entertainments.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Notes.

Fay Templeton will be the recipient of complimentary farewell benefit, at Maguire's New Theatre, on Friday evening.

"M. Alphonse" will be withdrawn at the close of the week to make way for the engagement of Miss Adele Leighton, who will appear at Maguire's New Theatre, on Monday evening in the new play of "Lady Madge."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 8-oj

Conforming with the Times.

MESSRS. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old es ablished and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10-9

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

THE GIRL OF THE PERIOD.

She is finished in her manners,
Tho' her education's poor.
She has polished off the former
By a long, ex cessive tour;
While the latter, under "Madame"
Of the foreign sounding name,
Was so stylishly conducted
No one had the heart to blame,

Since she left the classic temple,
With her stock of foreign lore,
She has never seen the volumes
On the shelf behind the door;
But she reads the daily papers,
When she finds a moment's time
For the personals and weddings
Have an interest sublime.

She is gifted with endurance
That an Amazon might prize,
And can dance from night to morning,
When the stars have left the skies,
She is fond of foreign phrases,
Culled from Spanish or from German,
And everything is "splendid,"
From a ribbon to a sermon.

Feminine Vagaries.

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget them all

The new Fall bonnets will soon be felt.

How to find a girl out—Call when she isn't in.

A poor sewing girl at Indianapolis has fallen heir to $88,000, and the man for whom she made shirts at twenty cents each wants to make her his darling.

Breach of promise. "Did my client enter into a positive agreement to marry you?" "Not exactly," she replied; but he courted me a good deal, and he told my sister that he intended to marry into our family.

The only patch-working woman that ever got her deserts was an Ohio wife, whose husband walked off with her 15,000-piece quilt, remarking that it would save his paying six shillings for an army blanket for the horse.

Another English bar-maid is in luck. She is the fiancee of a young nobleman, whose relatives say he shall never wed the girl while they are alive. He is plucky and says he shall, and preparations for the wedding day have began.

"Put me in the same room," says an old philosopher, "with a number of young girls, and I will tell you, when the postman knocks—merely watching the looks of some and the actions of others—how many of them are in love."

The polonaise, like the Schleswig-Holstein question, is still among those unexplained matters that so puzzle our intelligent generation. That it is fashionable is something we can understand; that it must go out is something unexplainable.

Miss Helibron, the new prima donna, is said to blush like a "school girl." This must be a comparison derived from English examples, as American school girls find it such a trouble to blush that they have very sensibly abandoned the business.

Mrs. Helen Dunbar of Buffalo has been sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor in the Erie county penitentiary for kidnapping her own child. The woman had become dissolute, and the custody of the child had been given to its grandmother, from whom it was stolen.

Hats encircled with haloes, loaded with jet, graceful with plumes, and other little accessories, no matter how quiet the wearer, do still suggest a fair amount of ponderosity. The flowers are arranged in bunches, the plumes overlap or crowd each other, and halo brims are a fixed fact.

Coifure descends, lower and lower until, at present writing, it does not ornament the head, but disfigures the neck and shoulders instead. This is a most absurd, and rather untidy fashion also. How any lady who prizes her dress or figure can tolerate it is another one of the mysteries.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Go Not Surer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions, Club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. B. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 5 P.M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. References given if

A Mysterious House.

Max Adeler remarks: If anybody is looking out for lodgings in Philadelphia, to be occupied during the Centennial Exhibition, I would advise him to hunt up the place mentioned in the following advertisement, which I cut from a Philadelphia paper:

"The upper part of a house to let, containing three rooms, a cellar, a kitchen, and a back yard."

I recommend this place because I can imagine nothing more interesting than a cellar on the third floor, and a back yard which can be reached only through the fourth story window. I am going around to see that house the next time I visit Philadelphia, so that I can grasp the phenomenon better. I suppose they have the garret about eighty feet below the front pavement. The only explanation of the mystery that occurs to me is, that somebody has turned the house upside down, and stood it upon its roof, while the back yard, having adhered to the foundation wall, remains suspended in the air. It is going to be very entertaining to the hired girls who have to hang out the wash on the under side of that yard. They had better practice for awhile on the flying trapeze.

A Soul for Music.

The New York Dispatch says: A young lady who is a connoisseur in music asked a gentleman who called on her the other evening if he had heard the new opera called "Ruy Blas." "No," answered the young man, "but I've heard the Mulligan Guards, and I think it's bully. There ain't so much sentiment and agony in it as in some operas I've seen, but it's very touching." He wasn't invited to call again when he bade good-by that evening.

Insure Your Life.

This is another reason why you should get your life insured. During the recent unpleasantness in New Orleans, the Secretary of an insurance company, in command of a platoon of revolutionists, struck up the gun of one of his men who had drawn a bead on one of Gen. Longstreet's officers. "D—n it," shouted he, "don't shoot that man. We've got a policy on him."

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Literary Men.

Scribner's, for October, contains a long article on the subject of Literary Labor and and its Reward, from which we make the following extract:

"Every literary man by virtue of his constitution, owes a duty to his generation and his time; and if, comprehending that duty, he performs it well, he has no stint of honor. There is no man around who gathers so much interest, admiration, affection, and respect as around him who charms, teaches, and inspires by his literary work. The young man who boasted that he once saw a railroad train passing, in one car of which sat Charles Dickens, and who felt exalted by the thought that though he had never looked upon his face, he had seen the car that held him, illustrates the the enthusiastic affection in which eminent literary men are held. They are kings by right. Their kingdom may not be strictly of this world of titles, and dignities, and palaces, and lands, but it is a veritable kingdom, which holds only loyal subjects. The literary man who would not rather be Walter Scott than the Napoleon whom he described, or Thackeray than the Emperor William, or Charles Dickens than the Prince of Wales, or Mrs. Browning than the Queen of England, or Washington Irving than General Jackson, or William Cullen Bryant than General U. S. Grant, is a disgrace to his craft, undeserving of any literary reward, and incapable of winning one."

J. L. Toole's Speech.

At his benefit at Wallack's Theatre recently Mr. J. L. Toole, the London comedian, delivered quite a lengthy speech in front of the curtain, filled with flashes of merriment that set the audience in a roar. The opening of this witty production we give below:—

"In this country, where speech-making appears to be an attribute of the infant in the cradle, it is a matter of extreme difficulty for a young man unaccustomed to public speaking to make impromptu address. It is a received axiom in mathematics that a rolling stone gathers no moss; but, ladies and gentlemen, I am a living converse of that proposition, for in my case The. Moss has gathered in the stone that has rolled across the Atlantic. As you know, I have been here some time, and would stay longer, but

A dog of the house of Montague moves ma
—SHAKESPEARE.

and I am therefore compelled to Wallack away to the fresh fields and verdant pastures of Brooklyn. Thence I purpose making an extended tour to Newark by way of Harlem, Hoboken, and Hunter's Point. It is also my intention to pop across to San Francisco and other little villages in the immediate vicinity of New York, but as a young woman who serenaded me last night at two o'clock in the morning sang, under my window, "He will return; I know him well: he will not leave me here to die." I opened the window and told her "I would."

Mr. Toole will probably be better appreciated in the cosmopolitan city of San Francisco than in any other in the United States.

Getting One's Hair Cut.

M. Quad relates how he had his hair cut: He said I had better have my hair cut, at the same time running his hand up and down my neck, over my ears and around the crown of my head.

I said I guessed I wouldn't; I would come in next day; I was in a hurry.

"Pretty long," he continued, feeling of my head again.

I said I always wore my hair long, and he shut up for a minute or two while he lathered my face and strapped his razor. Then he drew a deep sigh and whispered:

"Guess you'd better have it cut."

I replied that I never had my hair cut—always wore it hanging down to my boots, but he looked so sad and disappointed that I felt ashamed of myself. He might be a man with a large family depending on him, and perhaps his very bread depended on my having my hair cut. Perhaps he had his house and lot mortgaged, and the last payment was due that day, and if I didn't get my hair cut his family would be turned out of doors. After a little time I meekly remarked that he may cut away.

The smile which covered his face was reward enough for a poor man like me. He threw an apron around me, dug his fingers down behind my collar, gave my head seven or eight preparatory knocks, and then commenced—snip! snip! comb! brush! snip!

He ordered me to sit up a little straighter. Then he ordered me to hold my head to the left. Then he ran an old brass-pointed comb through my hair, plowing furrows in scalp, and then he remarked that I had a good deal of dandruff in my hair.

"It's a base lie!" I exclaimed, for I knew he was getting around to ask about a shampoo.

He made no reply—that is, no direct reply—but as an indirect reply he snipped off a piece of my ear. He said he didn't mean to do it; and in another indirect way he complimented me with having more ears than hair.

He finally neared the end—not the end of the hair but the end of his job. He cuffed my head to the right, ran his hand down my neck and his old shears over my ear as last finishing strokes, and then he paused. I knew what was coming. He ran his hand over my head, jumped back and shouted:

"Grashus!"

He thought I would be startled but I knew his tricks. I sat perfectly still, and he said to himself:

"Dandruff—I guess there is!"

I wasn't going to let him shampoo me, but there was something so sad and melancholy in his voice as he whispered that word "dandruff" that I felt my heart throb with pity.

I got down and told him to go ahead with his old soapsuds, and he went. He bent me over the sink, dashed on water, rubbed on soap, twisted my hair up and down, filled my eyes and ears, enveloped my head in a crash towel, and then said:

"You look a thousand dollars better."

He knew my mouth was full of suds and my eyes full of soap bubbles so that I couldn't reply, and he went on:

"There! I'll warrant you feel a million dollars better."

He mopped me off, drew that old brass bound comb over my tender scalp, rapped me with the brush, and softly whispered:

"You look like a new man—forty-five cents, if you please."

Bad for the Hub.

Boston has a prohibitory law and claims to be the brains and the paragon of morality in all the country. Yet it is the drunkenest city in the world. With a population of 250,000 and a stringent prohibitory law, it sustains 3,300 places where liquor is publicly sold, or about one liquor store for every 75 inhabitants, while New York, without any such law, is content with supporting only one such place to every 215 of its inhabitants The arrests for drunkenness during the year ending July 1, 1874, were 11,000 more in Boston than in Brooklyn, although the latter city has double the population of the former. All this goes to show that, in spite of its professed sobriety and unctuous protestations of superior morality, Boston is the drunkenest city in the Union.

Unpretty.

The Boston Courier, a very proper paper, says:—

We dislike abbreviations so heartily—in all journalistic work especially, save the commercial department—that when a printer gets himself into a fix by cutting short an important word, we are almost willing to laugh at his discomfiture—oftentimes quite willing, sometimes unable to refrain from so doing, as in the following case: The books of a Sunday School library connected with the Baptist church in Damariscotta, Maine, are embellished with labels bearing this legend: "Number 842, Dam'a Baptis Sunday School."

A Good Thing.

The Bulletin concluded a notice of the failure of Morgan & Sons thus:

"It is probably a good thing for them that the crisis has come, as it will enable the firm to get on a better basis for the future."

And then when they get on a better basis they can fail again, and get on a still better basis. Failing has often been the foundation of success in California, but it is necessary to "fail" for a large sum, or people will call you a swindler.

The Bohemian.

The second number of this literary satirical, illustrated weekly, published by Daniel O'Connell, made its appearance on Saturday. It is a decided improvement on the first number in as much as its contents are more varied, its paragraphs more pungent, and its general make-up better. The Alta gave the Bohemian a rap, and the Bohemian, in the last issue, hits back in such a style that the Alta is speechless.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

Opera House.

The first part with its descriptive finale "The Freshman's Class" is very lively. Rickard's style of singing is becoming as popular here as it was in Australia. Billy Arlington, Billy Rice, and Ben Cotton have made a great hit in "The Three Doves," Billy Emerson appears nightly in some of his best characterizations, and the incomparable Lottie and the daring Frank, perform their wonderful act entitled "The Leap for Life" amidst thunders of applause.

California Theatre.

The production of Frank Mayo's own dramatization of Wilkie Collins' "Man and Wife," at this house, drew a large audience last night. Mr. Mayo has made a strong play out of the novel, and as Geoffrey Delamayn, does some splendid acting. Miss Bella Pateman as Annie Sylvester, last night surpassed herself and received a most enthusiastic call at the close of the third act. Robert Pateman as Sir Patrick, Nelson Decker as Julian, T. W. Keene as Mr. Arnold Brinkworth and J. P. Burnett as Mr. Samuel Bishopriggs, all did well. Miss Jennie Lee as Blanche, did some capital acting and Miss Ellie Wilton made a good deal out of the character of Mrs. Glennan. "Man and Wife" will be played again to-night. To-morrow evening Mr. Mayo will take his farewell benefit and appear as Phidias and Raphael in "The Marble Heart." This will be the only night on which it will be played.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Just when the nights of "M. Alphonse" are numbered, the intelligent public of San Francisco, discover that this remarkable play, excellently mounted and admirably acted, is worthy of their attention. The first two nights the audiences were small; last night at an early hour a steady stream of people set in towards Maguire's New Theatre, and the house soon presented a comfortable appearance. To-night there will certainly be a large audience. To-morrow evening Fay Templeton will take her farewell benefit.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Miss Maggie Brewer, Johnny Toers, Frank Mortimore and others present a rare selection of Ethiopian farces at this house every night. The full programme is published on our first page. Extra attractions are offered for this evening.

Billy Rice's Benefit.

Billy Rice will take his benefit on Friday. In addition to the performance by Emerson's Minstrels the following volunteers will appear: Messrs. Sayer & White in double song and dance, Frank R. Clifton on the horizontal bar, Sam Martin the original one leg song and dance man, and Sheridan Brothers in an artistic clog dance.

IMPORTANT ART SALE.—Next Friday Norton Bush will offer at Messrs. H. M. Newhall & Co's. rooms, about sixty tropical, Californian and Eastern pictures. Many of the works are veritable gems. The N. Y. Herald, Post, Frank Leslie's Weekly and other papers have spoken of this artist in the most flattering terms. The picture will remain open to public inspection from Monday to the day of sale.

Woodward's Gardens.

On Saturday and Sunday next there will be a grand concert by Wetterman's orchestra, an assaut d'armes between Captain Martin and Professor Miller, the best swordsmen on the Coast, and a number of other entertainments.

ANATOMICAL MUSEUM.—One of the most complete collections of the kind in the United States, comprising hundreds of costly and beautiful wax models, is daily on view (to gentlemen only) at the Museum on Montgomery street. An hour may be profitably spent here.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc. printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well known Printing House was established by he present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

WHEN YOU'RE DOWN.

When legions of "friends" always bless us,
When golden success lights our way,
How they smile as they softly address us,
So cordial, good-humored and gay.
But O, when the sun of prosperity
Hath set—then how quickly they frown,
And cry out in tones of severity,
"Kick the man, don't you see he is down?"

What though you knew not a sorrow,
Your heart was as open as day,
And your "friends," when they wanted to borrow,
You would oblige and never ask them to "pay;"
What though not a soul you had slighted,
As you meandered about through the town,
Your "friends" become very near sighted,
And don't seem to see you when down.

When you're "up" you are loudly exalted,
And traders all sing out your praise,
When you're down you have greatly defaulted,
And they really don't fancy your ways.
Your title was "top" when you'd money,
So sings every sucker and clown,
But now, 'tis exceedingly funny,
Things are altered because you are down.

O give me the heart that forever
Is free from the world's selfish rust,
And the soul whose high noble endeavor
Is to raise fallen man from the dust,
And when in adversity's ocean
A victim is likely to drown,
A hail to the man whose devotion
Will lift up a man when he's "down."

Improved Sustenance.

The New York Mercury says: Teaching the "young idea how to shoot" is an old story now, in this country; but teaching us "how to cook" is something comparatively new and decidedly practical. How to pull a trigger is something of which no man ought to feel himself ignorant when his "motherland" appeals to him for defense; on the other hand, no women ought to feel herself incompetent to cook an inviting and a wholesome dinner, when the domestic exigency demands it. Bullets are very well in their way, but beef and mutton are indispensable, and they are in a bad way who can only get them in a condition of cookery which renders visits to the doctor or the apothecary inevitable. The art of cooking, in this sense, is directly opposed to that of medical chemistry; and when we consider that it is either food or physic with poor humanity, we may perceive the importance of so preparing every dish as not to render it, at least, a prelude to the doctor. "God sends meat, but the devil sends cooks," says the proverb, and hence it is but natural that food, however nutritious, if erroneously tortured into the reverse in the kitchen, plays the "old scratch" with our digestion. We hail with philanthropic interest, therefore, the introduction of cooking-schools amongst us, and we trust that every good housewife will discover, by-and-by, how much human nature itself can be improved by improving the style in which to administer its daily sustenance.

A Gentleman.

It is common in our day to speak of gentlemen of position, gentleman of means, gentlemen of the press, commercial and sporting gentlemen, etc. It was not in this vague sense that the word was used by James I., who, when his nurse entreated him to make her son a gentleman, replied that he could make him a lord, but that it was out of his power to make him a gentleman.

Euphemistic.

"Ben. Billings stole some cattle and then lied about it, so his friends took him out and performed a surgical operation on him from which he never recovered," is the way the death of a Nebraska man is recorded in a local paper.

THE RIDER OF THAD STEVENS is getting in condition by eating Eastern oysters and fresh fish for brain food, fine steaks and eggs for nerve and muscle, at Frank Johnson's, corner Clay and Leidesdorff streets.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Night to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club and Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co. 707 Market street, near Third, because they

Max Adeler's Opinion.

I never admired Captain Kidd very much. I didn't know the man personally, but I have always understood that he never went to Sunday School, and that he could have plugged Mount Etna with the bung of a beer barrel easier than he could have said the catechism. It is therefore with surprise—mingled of course with pain—that I perceive that Rev. J. S. C. Abbott has recently written a "Life of Captain Kidd," as one of his series of "Pioneers and Patriots of America." This seems to me to be injudicious. Captain Kidd was the kind of a patriot whom a man would hardly like to meet in a dark alley in a lonesome neighborhood, and this is not the case with any other of our pet patriots. If I should have met General Washington in the middle of Sahara, armed with a shot-gun and hungry, while I had nothing about me but a loaf of bread and a limp sausage, I would have looked him in the eye without the quiver of a muscle. But if Kidd was a patriot, George W. was a reprehensible old pirate; and now the question arises, whether it is just right for Mr. Abbott to instruct the youth of this country that a man who scuttles ships, and slits throats, and forces people to walk the plank, and gouges the valuables out of trunks and buries his booty around in the earth in such a way that posterity can't find any of it, is pretty certain to have the clergy put him up before the universe as a patriot. I don't think it is. Captain Kidd displayed his patriotism precisely as I would do if I should knock President Grant on the head and filch his watch, and I really don't think such an act would entitle me to the gratitude and affection of unborn millions of Americans.

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebrity, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly. 10 Q

How it did not Work.

How Mr. Levings played draw poker on the Fourth is told by the Kansas City Times: "Mr. Levings had played the game some with another old man, wherein he had been always beaten, and for some time past his study by day and his meditation by night had been how to get even. On the 3d of July a friend told him how it could be done. He and the friend were to sit down to a little game with the old man; when the friend had a full he was to telegraph to the merchant by rubbing his right ear softly, and so on through all the changes of the game. The scheme seemed feasible, and the merchant devoted the entire day to learning the telegraphic signs which were to bring confusion upon the old man and wealth to his own pocket. On the morning of the Fourth he sauntered into the old man's place with such a sweet smile as those only can wear who have an approving conscience or four aces. His quiet comforter and friend was sitting in the back part of the room, as innocent as the flowers of May; and on being invited to take a hand seemed surprised and reluctant, but finally consented. Then the old man wanted to be let in. The merchant demurred at first but finally agreed. Soon the private telegraph was put in operation, but, through the signals were given correctly and read apparently with ease, they didn't correspond with the facts. Several games were lost in trying to get the hang of it, and at last the merchant, being about $60 out said he never liked to play poker on the Fourth of July—it always seemed to him like breaking the Sabbath—and left the room, giving his telegraphic friend a look as he passed that would have melted the heat of a stone. A few moments after the 'old man' and the telegraphic poker player were seen dividing about $60 into moieties."

Johnny's Composition on Cats.

This is not a essy on the cat, which would be one, but on cats, which is sevrel, for cats is never by theirself only when they sleeps, and they don't do that no different from other animals, but they is alone wen they cetches a mouse, except the mouse. We had a old cat as cot a mouse and didn't kill it, but only hurt it inside. Then she laid it down, and laid down by it, and shut her eyes, and forgot; but when it had crold away a bit she rememberd. Then father he said heed be blode, and the way he kict the cat was crewil as you ever see. Then the baby, wich was a-settin' on the flore, lookt up and said Agin.

Cats can look in the dark better than day times, tho' they isn't so much to see. Tha is 'couse their eys is like lanterns, but doge look best with a bras coler. Billy he says if doge has colers with their owers' names onto it they don't get mad. He says that's law.

Cats wich has kitins is better than the other kind, 'cause it's good fun to drownd 'em in bags. My sisters young man says wen you want to drownd kitins if you will apple eye to the Socity for prefention' cruilty to animels yo hen git rose water.

Did you ever here the cats a-hollern' in the night, and a spittin'? I have, lots, and I tel you it makes a feller afraid if he isn't a-sleepin' with his sister. Biron says cats is awful yet lovely in their strength, and the is mentioned by sevrel.

Dejazet's Benefit.

Speaking of the benefit to Dejazet, the veteran French actress, in Paris, recently, a correspondent of the Arcadian says:—

When she comes upon the stage all the world rises to greet her, and there are heard such shouts of applause, seen such waving of handkerchiefs as never was seen before. How she acts! With what life! with what spirit! All the world is enchanted. Isabella, ex-Queen of Spain, is in tears—emotion, perhaps. Perhaps her Majesty thinks rightly that, do what she may, she will never be able to wear tights at seventy-seven and leap about like a lad of seventeen. Her Spanish Majesty weighs tons and tons! Flowers rain upon the stage. Modian Carvalho carries them to the great old actress, who is now weeping bitterly herself. Hortense Schneider, Grand Duchess of Gerolstein, plays a soubrette's part, Madame Judic's idea. Both are applauded to the echo. The curtain falls. It rises again. It falls. It rises again. It falls again. It Jack-in-boxes about. Dejazet!" cries all the world. "Dejazet for ever and ever! Vive Dejazet!" Such excitement! such enthusiasm! For fully ten minutes after the piece no one knows what they are about. Madame de Mouchy is waving her veil instead of her handkerchief, and Isabella of Spain is actually standing up applauding till her hands must ache. I honor her Majesty for this—brava! Christine Nilsson is beside herself with enthusiasm, and claps her hands as heartily as one. But everything except eternity must end, so does this ovation.

A Question About Ariosto.

An Eastern humorist says: The young gentleman who writes to me from Rutland, Vt., to ask, "Was Ariosto an Italian or a Spaniard?" has a very creditable thirst for knowledge? Of course the answer to the question depends to some extent upon where Ariosto was born, and who his parents were. If, for instance, Ariosto's birth occurred at Mauch Chunk, Pa., he could hardly be considered a Spaniard, while if the place of his nativity was Hoboken, N. J., there would be a manifest impropriety in regarding him as an Italian, particularly if his mother came originally from Oshkosh and his father from Tuskaloosa. And there would be hardly any doubt that he could not be designated as a Spaniard if he was born of an Irish mother and a Hindoo father on board of an American vessel sailing under the English flag, or in a Norwegian balloon, eight thousand feet high, of Esquimaux parents. And I should hesitate to regard him as an Italian if his father was a Piute Indian, his mother a squaw, and his birthplace Omaha. Under the circumstances, therefore, the nationality of Ariosto would seem to be somewhat clouded with doubt, and as I know of nobody who was present when he was born, it will perhaps be better to write to Ariosto himself—he was present when he was born, I believe—and to lay the matter before him. He is in the spirit land somewhere, and the letter might be sent through a medium.

Christian Sarcasm.

The staid New York Observer is responsible for the story that Mr. Stone, a well known and excellent Christian gentleman, belonging to one of the Murray Hill churches in New York city, was up in the country in the summer, and learning that an evening prayer-meeting was in progress at the village church, walked in and took a seat in the back part of the room. The brother in the chair conducting the meeting, observing the stranger, left his seat and going to Mr. Stone said to him:

"What is your name?"

"My name is Stone."

"Where are you from?"

"I am from the city of New York."

"Are you one of the Lord's people?"

"I hope that I am," answered Mr. Stone, with becoming humility.

The leader satisfied with the answers to his catechism, returned to his elevated seat, and at the end of the hymn arose and said: "Will Brother Stone of New York, favor us with a few remarks?"

Mr. Stone, willing to do what he could, and having often been told to do in the country as he would in the city, rose and made a few practical observations to the best of his ability. No sooner had he sat down than the leader rose and said: "Will Brother Stone of New York, ask the Lord to bless his feeble remarks?"

Undismayed by this commentary on his speech, Mr. Stone offered prayer, and the meeting proceeded as usual.

Mrs. Jipe's Healthy Work.

Mrs. Jipes, of Geary Point, Ill., after sawing a cord of wood, digging five bushels of potatoes, milking twenty cows, carrying ten tubs of water, and doing a washing of ten dozen pieces, incidentally mentioned being tired. Mr. Jipes read to her from a newspaper: "I believe that nothing would tend so effectually to get rid of these creations of weariness, and that overstimulation of the emotions, as a fair shair of healthy work directed toward a definite object." Just here a can of Royal Baking Powder struck him in the abdomen. Following this came a stove lid, three pan-cakes, a rotten tomato, salt-cellar, bowl of buttermilk and all the dough for Thursday's baking. It was evident she considered her lord a "definite object," and the fair share of work directed toward him was a little healthier than he would have desired.

Politics and Religion.

Politics resemble religion: attempting to divest either of ceremony is the most certain method of bringing either into contempt. The weak must have their inducements to admiration as well as the wise; and it is the business of a sensible government to impress all ranks with a sense of subordination, whether this be effected by a diamond or a virtuous edict, a sumptuary law or a glass necklace.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

California Theatre.

To night Frank Mayo, who is so well appreciated by the San Francisco public, will take her farewell benefit and appear in the dual role of Phidias and Raphael. Barton Hill, of whom the public have seen too little of late, will make his reappearance on this occasion as Diogenes and Volage, Marco will be played by Miss B. la Paterno, Marie by Miss Ellie Wilton, and altogether the cast will be a very strong one. This interesting play will be repeated at the matinee to-morrow In the evening Mr. Mayo will make his last appearance in the romantic drama of "The Three Guardsmen."

Maguire's New Theatre.

"M. Alphonse" has made a hit. At first the public seemed indifferent to it, but when they learned how admirably it was acted, and how splendidly it was mounted the audiences increased. To-night that bright little star, Fay Templeton, whose impersonation of Adrienne is one of the best bits of child acting ever seen on any stage, will take her farewell benefit. "M. Alphonse" will be played. "M. Alphonse" will also form the entertainment at the matinee to morrow.

Opera House.

A very attractive bill will be performed to night when the humorous Billy Rice will take his benefit. The beneficiary will deliver his wonderfully learned lecture on "Astronomy and Stocks," Rickards will appear in his parlor entertainment. Billy Rice, Billy Arlington and Ben Cotton in "The Three Doves," Billy Emerson in some of his best specialities, the Sheridan Brothers in a double clog dance, Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble, J. F. Woodward's Gardens.

On Saturday and Sunday next there will be a grand concert by Wetterman's orchestra, an assaut d'armes between Captain Martin and Professor Miller, the best swordsmen on the Coast, and a number of other entertainments.

TWO BABIES.

BY FANNY BARROW.

Little winsome baby Fay
Like a snow-white rosebud lay
In her mother's arms all day.

Alice, dancing, up and down—
Rosy, saucy, dimpling, brown—
Breaks her playthings, tears her gown.

O the eyes of little Fay!
Solemn, sweet, and dream-like they,
Telling my true love always.

Alice's eyes are wildly bright.
Full of frank and fearless light,
Scarcely will they close at night.

Fay so gently shows her love,
Cooing, nestling like a dove,
She your very heart would move.

Alice, with a lightened strain,
Hugs with tiny might and main—
Kisses, laughs—and hugs again.

Wit hing each in her own way,
Alice and the little Fay,
One so gentle, one so gay.

Heavenly Father, give these flowers
Summer days and rainbow showers,
Let the clouds and storms be ours.

How She Turned Presbyterian.

Mrs. Magruder will probably leave Dr Hopkins' church and go hereafter to the Presbyterian meeting-house. Dr. Hopkins last week had a frightful boil on his leg, and he experienced very severe pain when he tried to walk. While he was sitting in his studio on Friday, Mrs. Magruder called and was ushered into the parlor. The servant went up the back stairs to tell the doctor, who was on his way down the front stairs to get a drink of water. It hurt him so much to walk down the steps that he concluded to slide down the bannister on his stomach, and so, after looking carefully over the landing to satisfy himself that nobody was about, he mounted the bannister and began to descend. The stairs ran past the parlor door, and Mrs. Magruder was amused to see the clergyman descending with great rapidity, and in that singular fashion. It seems that the servant placed a coal-scuttle by the newelpost while she went for the doctor, and as he descended with awful velocity, he alighted in the coal-scuttle and fell to the floor. Without being aware of the presence of the visitor he leaped up in a rage, exclaiming: "Hang that woman!" he gave the scuttle a kick which sent it whirling into the parlor, where it brought up in Mrs. Magruder's lap. Of course she thought the demonstration and ejaculation were intended for her and, after rising to her feet and shaking her umbrella at her pastor, she shouted: "If you kick another coal-scuttle at me, I'll punch the stuffin' out of you with this umbrella." She emerged from the front door with the conviction that Presbyterianism was the only religion for her.

"If I Had Only Bought a Lot."

There are hundreds of people in San Francisco who utter the above regretful words. If they had only bought a lot when land was cheap in San Francisco they would be rich now. We call the attention of these and others who can profit by their experience, to the fact that lots can now be bought cheap and on credit, in Berkeley, the University town of the State. Morris Dore & Co., will on Friday, November 6 h, sell 260 lots in the Antuseli Tract. Berkeley will become as large a town as Oakland, in less time than it has taken for the last named town to assume its present dimensions. Verbum sap.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute, After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co., 707 Market street, near Third, because they get better goods for the same price than any other dealer. 7-

An Insurance Agent's Policy.

Browne, the entertaining Boston correspondent of the Danbury News has the following in his last weeks' screed:—

They are telling a funny story just now about Harry McGlennan of the Boston Theatre, or rather he is telling it of himself. It seems that one morning he was called down stairs before breakfast to see an affable and fluent stranger who poured forth an entertaining story concerning his intention of buying the next house to Mr. McGlennan's, his inability to find the agent and secure the key, and his desire to examine Mr. McGlennan's house, which was precisely similar. His request was granted and he was escorted over the house, and talked with the fluency of John B. Gough. By the time he had inspected the whole mansion, Mr. McGlennan felt as if he had known him for years, and invited him to breakfast. He accepted and talked of everything and nothing until he apparently by accident fell upon the subject of furniture. Then he smiled in a deprecating fashion and asked as a Yankee always asks before being stupendously impertinent, if it would be a fair question to inquire the price of some of the articles that he saw around him, with a view to estimating the cost of furnishing the house next door. Mr. McGlennan answered him, and then that unprincipled man looked him in the face and asked, "Are you insured?" This is about the place at which the novelist of the day would write, "Let the curtain fall," but it is enough to say that if you want to get a breakfast from Harry McGlennan now, you had better not begin by making any remarks about intending to buy the house next door.

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

AMUSEMENTS, Etc.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—Little Fay Templeton had, as she richly deserved, a good benefit last night. Her performance of the character of Adrienne, in the thrilling play of "M. Alphonse," is a perfect study. It is not often that a play of this kind receives so brilliant a representation as that accorded to it at Maguire's New Theatre and the public have realized this fact. "M. Alphonse" will be played at the matinee to-day, to-night and to-morrow night and we trust that Manager Maguire may be able to put off the engagement of Miss Adele Leighton until the public have had another week of this charming play.

OPERA HOUSE.—There was an immense crowd present last night when the genial Billy Rice took his benefit. The bill was a good one, and was admirably rendered in every respect. At the matinee to-day, to-night and to-morrow night, the programme which has proved so popular during the week will be performed. Billy Emerson, Harry Rickards, Ben Cotton, Billy Rice and all the stars will appear.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—Frank Mayo had capital house for his benefit last night, when he appeared as Pinditat and Raphael Duchatelet, in "The Marble Heart." He played it in excellent style and was rewarded with much applause. The characters of Diogenese and Ferdinand Volage have seldom been better filled than they were last night by Barton Hill. In the latter character he was a perfect realization of the merry, good-hearted careless Bohemian who laughs at the follies of the world and comforts himself with the thought that he is outside of the ring. Miss Bella Pateman gave a powerful rendition of the cold-hearted mercenary Mlle. Marco and Miss Ellis Wilton was charmingly sympathetic as her antithesis, the loving, unselfish Marie. The play was well mounted and will played; it will be repeated at the matinee to-day. To-night Mr. Mayo will terminate his highly successful engagement appearing as D'Artagan, in "The Three Guardsmen," Porthos will be played by Henry Edwards, and Miss Bella Pateman will assume the character of Ann of Austria.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—A great Saturday night bill has been prepared at this popular place of amusement for the million. Amusing acts, lively songs and attractive dances, will follow one another in rapid succession. All the old favorites will appear this evening.

BERKELEY.—Take a trip across the Bay on Sunday to the new town of Berkeley, just to the North of Oakland, and see for yourself the natural advantages the locality possesses for a future city. The new steamer of the Berkeley Ferry Company makes four trips a day, and everyone will find the trip a most pleasant one. Fare 15 Cents. Time table in our advertising columns.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—New Novelties. On Saturday and Sunday next there will be a grand concert by Wetterman's orchestra, an assaut d'armes between Captain Martin and Professor Miller, the best swordsmen on the Coast, and a number of other entertainments.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain Railroad.

NOTES.—By the Australian steamer we have received papers from which we take the following notes of dramatic matters:—"The Australian Sketcher," published in Melbourne, has an admirable illustration representing J. C. Williamson and Miss Maggie Moore as John Stofel and Lizzie Stofel in "Struck Oil." This paper speaks of these two California favorites as follows: Whatever Mr. Williamson may do with other characters in which he has yet to appear, he has stamped himself in this of Stofel, as an actor, not only of singular natural ability, but as conscientiously careful in working out subordinate details, which, of little importance in themselves, are of the greatest value in communicating characteristic effect.

Mrs. Williamson (whose stage name is Miss Maggie Moore) has seized upon the public favour with a firmness of which we have no previous parallel. To say that she is popular only faintly describes the effect she has produced. Everybody seems to have been inventing terms of approbation with which to express the pleasure she communicates to those who have the opportunity of enjoying her fresh and entirely natural acting. She gives herself completely up to the requirements of the situation. She seems to forget everything but the endeavor to make the character tell, and she does this in the most legitimate manner—namely, by giving herself completely up to the impulses which properly belong to it. Her acting, therefore, is distinguished by a degree of force and well-regulated earnestness of which we have not had many examples. No doubt it was wise of her to open in a kind of character not commonly effected by actresses, as it removed her from the likelihood of comparisons. But if even these had been made, they could hardly have been other than to her advantage. Her humor is inexhaustible, and it is that sort of humor whose effect is helped by contrast with the most genuine tenderness. The audience laugh and cry at the same moment, because she laughs and cries with them, and there is no possibility of thinking other than of the character she is working out.

Miss Amy Stone, H. F. Stone, Willie Simms, and W. C. Dudley who have played a highly successful engagement under the management of Miss Fanny Morgan Phelps, will arrive in San Francisco, by the steamer due on Monday.

The Illustrated Australian contains pictures of J. C. Williamson and Miss Maggie Moore, and is equally favorable in its comments on their performance. The cartoon in the Melbourne Punch of August 27th, represents "Thalia the House of Comedy," received by J. C. Williamson, who as John Stofel, prescribes his magic oil.

May Howard has made quite a hit in Sydney in "The Wandering Heir."

Mrs. Bates is resting in Sydney.

Bloodin and the Carandini Troupe are also in Sydney.

The following notes we have received from J. H. McCabe, the theatrical agent: Andrea Torning who was reported dead, is alive and well. He was long a resident of San Francisco, is one of our exempt firemen, and well known and liked by them and

The Girards are in Sydney. Russell Girard has been very sick, but is now convalescent.

Charles Weightman, the Man Fish, is exhibiting his phenomenal powers in Sydney. He may join the Girards and go with them to India, at the termination of their Australian engagements. Sutton, Kelly and Rockfeller, are doing a good business in Sydney.

Billy Rice was presented by his professional associates with a solitaire ring on the occasion of his benefit last night. The receipts of the house amounted to $971. Billy will get still fatter.

On Monday next Mrs. Agnes Booth, so long a favorite member of the old Maguire's Opera House company, will make her reappearance before the public of San Francisco at the California Theatre as Juliet, in Shakespeare's play of "Romeo and Juliet." Joseph Wheelock, an actor who is highly spoken of by the Eastern papers will play Romeo. We are sure that Mrs. Agnes Booth, (the Miss Agnes Perry of old times), will receive as hearty a welcome as was accorded to Frank Mayo, with whom she has so often appeared on the San Francisco stage.

That particularly erudite individual who writes "Footlight Flashes" for the Chronicle every Sunday, and also misleads the public as to the merit of the plays produced at the theatres made a nice mess of it on Sunday last and on the following Tuesday in attempting to impart information concerning "M. Alphonse." On Sunday, he said "Mr Thomas Whiffen is to appear as the lover Octave, first played in New York by Fechter." On Tuesday he criticised Mr. Whiffen's characterization of the part as not being equal to Fechter's, not so romantic, and so on. This individual assumes to be so perfect in his encyclopedic knowledge and so ready with original casts of plays that we feel inclined to reproduce for his benefit the original casts of "M. Alphonse" in Paris, at the Theatre Gymnase Dramatique, Paris, November 26th, 1873, and at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, April 21, 1874. Here they are:

	FRENCH.	ENGLISH.
Montaiglin	Payol	Charles Fisher
Octave	Frederic Achard	George Clarke
Remy	Martin	Frank Hardenberg
Dieudonne	D'Albert	James Lewis
Raymonde	Blanche Pierson	Ada Dyas
Mme Guichard	Alphonsine	Fanny Davenport
Adrienne	Lody	Bijou Heson

Of course Charles Fechter never played Octave in his life, and we doubt very much whether he would care about assuming the role. If Mr. Whiffen was grieved at learning from such an authority as the Chronicle's critic that his rendition of the role of Octave was not equal to that of Fechter, he may comfort himself with the fact that Fechter never played it. We may remark en passant that Mr. Whiffen played the part correctly, as that of a miserable hound always fearing a kick, knowing his own meanness, ready to make friends with anyone, cringing before his betters, and ready to bully the unfortunate woman over whom circumstances had given him power. Such is Octave, and as such he is represented by Mr. Whiffen.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

A New York paper says: Mr. Vandenhoff, who is to play Cardinal Wolsey this week, at Booth's Theatre, New York, played the same character with Miss Cushman at the Haymarket Theatre, London, in 1854. Macbeth he played at the old Park Theatre as early as 1852, and at the Astor Place Opera House, in 1855.

Still, this does not make Mr. Vandenhoff's performance a remarkable one, for the gentleman is nothing more than a moderately good actor.

Little Nell played in Lancaster, Pa., on the 27th.

Miss Katherine Rogers Randolph appeared in Albany on the 19th.

Janauschek opened in Cincinnati on the 26th.

Lotta appeared at Buffalo on the 26th.

Miss Ella Werner on the 19th produced her new drama, "Mixed" written by Fred. G. Maeder, at the National Theatre, Washington.

John McCullough opened at Ford's Grand Opera House, Baltimore, on the 9th in "Virginius." On Tuesday he appeared in "Othello," on Wednesday in "Richelieu," on Thursday and Saturday in "Richard III." and on Friday in "Jack Cade." The Bulletin, in welcoming him back to the Baltimore stage, said: Next week we are to have Mr. John McCullough, who to-day divides with Booth the honors of the tragic stage. It is a long time, comparatively, since Mr. McCullough appeared before a Baltimore audience, but there are not a few who recollect him, and who will gladly welcome him to our boards again. Forrest, with whom he played so often, and who held him in such high regard, finds to-day no one who so fitly follows in his footsteps as John McCullough. With a splendid physical presence, more refined, however, and graceful than that of Forrest, he combines much of the robust, vigorous method of that great artist with the subtler skill and culture that we find in Booth. While in this way he may hold qualities common to both he is the imitator of neither. His individuality is all his own, and it is the growth of a free-born native talent that a century of teaching or study most profound could never confer. John McCullough is John McCullough, one of the finest actors that our country has produced, and who will contribute to the drama one of its most honored and worthy names.

John Brougham commenced an engagement at the Howard Atheneum, Boston, on the 19th, appearing in "The Lottery of Life."

Jolly John Nash had a dinner given him at the New York Restaurant, High Holborn, London, prior to his departure for New York. He arrived on the 15th, and opened at the Theatre Comique on the 19th.

Walter Bray, one of the best of negro minstrel artists, commenced a four weeks' engagement at Tony Pastor's on the 26th, at the termination of which he joins Moore and Burgess' Minstrels, in London.

Walsingham, the New York correspondent of the Baltimore Bulletin, says in a letter dated October 14th:

Chandos Fulton is having the run of good luck he deserves. Not only does he share in the management of the Park Theatre turn out to have "millions in it," but his new play, "Amita," is played with abundant success in San Francisco. Bravo, C. F.!

It is strange we have not heard of the play of "Amita" and its abundant success. This thing has been keep very quiet. "Amita" has not to our knowledge been produced at any of the theatres here.

The Australian correspondent of the New York Spirit of the Times, speaking of the success of J. C. Williamson and Miss Maggie Moore says: Miss Maggie Moore took the house by something like storm. To describe her justly would be to exhaust the vocabulary of praise. I had heard she had been one of the pets of the theatrical world in California, and I can well believe it. Her acting is distinguished by a total absence of affectation, and yet it is quite as entirely free from over-demonstrativeness. A pretty little Dutch girl, full of affection and pleasant archness, is before you, and you find it impossible to think of her as anybody else. There is no longer any such person as Mrs. Williamson or Miss Maggie Moore, it is Lizzie Stoefel, the old shoemaker's daughter, full of love and fun, quaint in her costume, dainty in her manner, and yet homely as a shoemaker's daughter. She sparkles with innocent mirthfulness, and yet her heart is like a cup of hot spiced wine in its warmth and cheeriness. To say that the audience were delighted with her is very imperfectly to state the effect she produced upon them. She fascinated them, as a bright pure-eyed child often fascinates you by its innocence and simplicity and the utter absence of all consciousness of the effect it is producing.

At the Boston Museum on Monday, October 26, Tom Taylor's new play of "Arkwright's Wife," had its first representation in this country. On the same evening the Warren farce of "Done on Both Sides," was revived.

Mr. Charles Pope has been playing in "Samson" at St. Louis. The translation of the famous Italian drama is the work of Mr. W. D. Howells, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, and the Republican thus speaks of it:

"The translation * * * is a solid literary work. As a stage play it furnishes every motive of action, strongly stimulates the dramatic movement, is clothed in admirable language which often soars to sublime heights, and is at every point and passage artistic. The translator has closely followed and forcibly rendered all the original text, and has in addition introduced several passages paraphrased from Bible story which are not in the Italian play. These interpolations were made for an artistic purpose, which they accomplished. They soften and sweeten, as it were, the character of Delilah, and give her a more commanding stage situation, necessary for dramatic effect. In short, they fortify Delilah in a stronger position, and warm up sympathy for the siren of Sorek. This design was happily conceived and ably executed by the author. It was the idea of a dramatist, and proclaims that Mr Howells is not only qualified to translate and adapt a play, but amply able to write an original acting drama.

E. L. Davenport, Edwin Adams and Clara Morris have been secured to play together in April next in Shakspereau plays.

Mrs. Scott Siddons will sail for America per Steamer Oceanic on the 23d inst.

Mr. W. Holston, formerly of Wallack's Theatre, goes with an English company to Calcutta.

Maggie Mitchell plays in Oswego, 31st.

Miss Ada Gray appeared in her new play "The Adventures," at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, 19th.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence, were billed in Minneapolis for the 20th and 21st.

Little Nell played in Lancaster, Pa., the 27th.

Miss Katharine Rogers Randolph, was at Albany on the 19th.

The St. Paul Dispatch of the 17th, mentioning the appearance of Miss Olive Logan in one of her own plays says: Of others of the company who had parts last evening in which dramatic talent could be shown, Mr. Sam. Piercy was one whom all the audience will agree is probably a good actor. His imitation of intoxication and his disguise as the bookman, were excellent, while his personation of the book-worm was detestably perfect, for it is an abominably wearisome character.

The New York Courier says of Miss Charlotte Cushman who has just taken her farewell of the New York stage, and who will take her final farewell of the boards in San Francisco: Charlotte Cushman represents the grand and heroic type of art. Adelaide Neilson brings to us the pretty interpretation of poetical character. Clara Morris is the living embodiment of the feverish, impassioned drama of to-day.

Each of these three women fills a niche in the dramatic gallery essentially her own. Neither could intrude upon the other's domain. Charlotte Cushman, it is true, has, in her day, covered all this ground, but that day has passed now, and she remains to us the grand exemplar of the purely heroic and intellectual. Time was, though, when she could give all the needed energy of voice and action to lighter parts; as witness her Romeo, Mr. Simpson, and the like, and even now, in the lecture room, she possesses, as no other woman does, the power of delineating many phases of character.

The public will take leave of her regretfully. There is a tender reverence for her name that time cannot efface, and, even though we may miss her from the stage, her memory will linger with us always.

Miss Lotta will soon go abroad to remain several years.

Olive Logan says Mr. Sikes is writing a play for her in which she will wear a calico gown and a blue check apron.

Celia Logan has a baby.

The title of Boucicault's new Irish drama is "Conn na Seachran." It will deal with the present time, and its action will take place in the wildest parts of Sligo.

Miss Clara Morris will soon attempt the part of Lady Macbeth. This will show whether she has the stuff in her of which the actresses of an elder day were composed.

At Booth's Theatre the receipts for the Mark Smith benefit were $2 200. At Wallack's the sum realised was $900. Mr. Toole played at both places and at Newark on the evening of the same day.

Stuart Robson and Charles R. Thorne have played a fine engagement at the Chestnut Theatre, Philadelphia, supported by Miss Rose Eyting and other members of the Union Square Theatre, New York.

The California, the Union, the Pacific, and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicious table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. n

Where can I get a feast?

But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old-fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Might to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-r

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

A new drama called the "White Cockade" has been produced by Tom Taylor at Croyden, England.

Mr. Byron's new comedy for the Strand, London, is called "Old Sailors."

Taglioni's last benefit, in 1844, produced 25,000 francs. Jules Janin expressed his contempt for this sum and a penurious public by saying it was hardly money enough to buy a bushel of charcoal with which to commit suicide.

Mrs. Mary Gladstone is at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, Ireland.

Mrs. Kate Bateman is at present at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, Scotland.

The comic opera by Johann Strauss, which is now in rehearsal at the Gaite Theatre, Paris, will be entitled "The Forty Thieves." It was originally brought out in Vienna at the Theatre an der Wied (the cradle of "Zauberflote" and "Fidelio") in March or April, 1861, 1871, under the name of "Indigo and die Vierzig Rauber."

Miss Kate Stanley is travelling through England, and appearing, with a full company, in "Cattarina," an opera comique, written expressly for her.

Mario Maffi ran used to dine for half an hour in her dressing room previous to going before the public. Dressed as Desdemona or Arsace, she ate mutton cutlets sent in from a neighboring Cafe Anglais, and invariably washed them down with half a bottle of rare Santenne. She would then light a cigarette, which she would not throw away till she was called.

Rossini Stoltz, who created the part of the heroine at the Grand Opera in 'La Favorita," was found chatting behind the scenes with those around her. She was one of the most fearless artists that ever was upon the stage. Stage fright was something totally unknown to her, and she would break off her conversation to advance, with the utmost self-possession, toward the front.

SELF-MADE MEN.

How often do we hear a man say, when speaking of his business, that he has more than he can attend to. With few rare exceptions, no one has ever built up a business that he can not attend to. Sometimes one will commence a small business, that, by some fortuitous circumstances—such as a good locality, or the want of some energetic man in that line in the same location, etc., and will find that his business has gone far ahead of his expectations, then he is apt to be satisfied with what comes to him without much effort on his part and talk about having more than he can attend to.

Did one ever hear of Stewart, of Vanderbilt, or Scott, or in fact any of the self-made men of America, ever using the above-named phrase? On the contrary, all, or nearly all of this class of people commenced business in a small way, commensurate with their capital, and by constant application built up their business little by little until they became known to the whole mercantile world.

A large business cannot be built up in a day or a week, but by energy, fair dealing and moderate prices, it can be done in a short time. As a case in point, we will refer to Mr. P. Beamish, a merchant of this city, who, a few years since commenced business on a small scale, but with the determination of increasing that business as much as he could. It was early a principle with Mr. B. to buy for CASH and sell for CASH so that he had no bad debts to counteract the profits on his sales particular attention was given to the fitting and making of White Shirts so that he soon became known throughout the city by the quality of his work, his low prices, etc.

One other point, Mr. B. has always been careful in and that is, to GUARANTEE all of his goods to be as represented. His stock consists of probably the best selected and most complete lines of Gents Furnishing Goods, White Shirts, etc., etc., on this coast. Mr. Beamish early recognized the fact that Market street was destined to become in time, the principal thoroughfare of the city, and being of that view, he took a lease of the store on the corner of Market and Third street (Nucleus building). It was not long before he had more business than he could accommodate—in the store he then occupied. So he leased the large store adjoining fronting on Market street, and stocked it with one of the most complete assortments of Gents' Ready Made Clothing to be found in this city. Mr. Beamish did not enlarge his business until his capital justified him in doing so, and result was that when he went into the wholesale market as a cash buyer, he not only obtained the latest and most desirable styles but he purchased at a low figure, and as he sells for cash, he, of course, has no outstanding debts, and can afford to sell his goods at a small profit. A visit to his store will convince every purchaser that the goods he sells cannot be bought elsewhere of equal quality at the same figure. This is one of the great secrets of his success. Mr. Beamish remarked to us that he had all sizes of over one hundred different styles of men's and boys. Linen Shirts constantly on hand in store, besides which he keeps employed a large number of practical shirt makers and experienced cutters to fit and make to order at his manufactory.

It is fashionable for ladies, now-a-days, to go to Joe Giusti's new Family Oyster Rooms, 105 California Market, for their meals. Joe, with natural gallantry, saves for them his finest oysters, the faitest quails and the choicest chops and steaks. Open night and day. 9-bf

California Theatre.

There was a goodly gathering of old Californians last night to greet the favorite actress, Mrs. Agnes Booth, who made her appearance after an absence of many years. "Romeo and Juliet" was the play, Mrs. Booth performing the part of Juliet, and Mr. Joseph Wheelock, an actor new to the San Francisco stage, that of Romeo. The old favorite and new comer, each received a hearty greeting. Mrs. Booth presented a very smooth impersonation of Juliet, making her points very quietly and effectively, in the first two acts and in the latter act displaying an amount of power for which the audience were scarcely prepared. Mrs. Booth is as handsome as she formerly was pretty, her features are less mobile than formerly, her action is more studied, there is more art, less impulse. Joseph Wheelock, who appeared as Romeo, has a handsome, intelligent face, a deliciously melodious voice, and a pleasing stage presence. He presented a less spooney Romeo than is generally seen on the stage, and availed himself to the utmost of every opportunity afforded him to represent Romeo as a good deal of a man in spite of being so much in love. An instance of this was the fight with Tybalt, which he carried out with so much spirit as to win a most enthusiastic call at the very commencement of the act. Barton Hill is the best of Mercutios, Mrs. Judah, unapproachable as the nurse, Robert Pateman a capital Peter, the play is splendidly mounted, Mrs. Booth's dresses are beautiful. Under these circumstances "Romeo and Juliet" should draw a good house to-night and again to-morrow night.

Opera House.

The new programme at this house is attractive as any of the preceeding ones which have drawn crowded houses for weeks past. The first finale at present is a very beautiful allegorical representation in which Miss Jennie Sherman takes the role of the goddess of Liberty, and appears to good advantage. Miss Lottie performs her marvellous feat on the flying trapeze, Billy Emerson appears in his most brilliant specialties, the laughable act entitled "The Three Doves" in which Billy Arlington, Billy Rice and Ben Cotton coo so sweetly, is retained on the bill, Rickards presents his character songs, and "Tricks and Trials" end the evening's entertainment.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night and every night until further notice Miss Adele Leighton will appear in J. H. Le Roy's play of "Lady Madge," dramatized from Gibbon's novel entitled "For the King." The novel is a capital one, and Mr. Le Roy has proved himself an adept at transferring novels to the stage by his adaptation of "The New Magdalen." Miss Leighton, some time ago, made a very successful debut and has since then been studying for the stage with close application. J. A. Herne will appear in the strong part of Sir Malcom Oliphant, Thomas Whiffen as Colonel Strong, George Giddens as Dr. Fairlie, Miss Sydney Cowell as Agnes Murray, and J. S. Lindsay, J. O. Barrow, Miss Ada Deaves and others are included in the cast.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Among the acts to be performed to-night are "Independence and Assurance," "Inside and Outside Servants" and a challenge dance by Frank Mortimore, John Kelly and Johnny Tuers.

Woodward's Gardens.

The Sunday Concerts by Wetterman's Grand Orchestra, are a great feature at these gardens. On Saturday and Sunday next Professor Miller and J. Monahan will give an illustration of the art of self-defense. Milo will appear in his wonderful performance on the velocipede, the Australian Hercules will perform some of his most stupendous feats, and a new variety troupe will appear.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

Medical Wonder

Cures rheumatism, billious pains, neuralgia, catarrh, and minor aches and pains. All Drug-

Severe on Miss Neilson.

The engagement of Miss Adelaide Neilson in New York has proved a failure. Evidently the public are tired of what is now termed "her pretty face and general incompetency." Wilkes' Spirit says:

"Miss Adelaide Neilson reappeared in this city on Monday evening at the Lyceum Theatre as Beatrice, in "Much Ado About Nothing," supported by Mr. J. H. Barnes as Benedict, and a "snap" company, remarkable for its general incompetency. Miss Neilson, with her stereotyped smile, rattled through her lines like any other walking lady, and displayed some fine dresses and magnificent diamonds. Her most sanguine friends were completely disappointed, and her Beatrice is conceded on every hand to be a failure. The management appreciating this, changed the bill after three representations. Miss Neilson appeared on Thursday evening as Juliet. Her career as a playing star has ended. A doll face, unaccompanied by talent, will never usurp the dominion of art, and pretty intruders are banished when their blandishments have become familiar to every person about town. Miss Neilson owes her past financial success to the gratuitous puffing of our good-natured critics, whose pens were pressed into service by a brother journalist. She came to us in a flood of "lime light," out of which she cannot emerge without demonstrating her incompetency. Our contemporaries have very generally come at last to this conclusion. Our leading daily tells us that she excited laughter when she should have awakened enthusiasm. Mr. J. H. Barnes, the English tenor, who made his American debut as Benedict, possesses a fine figure. His powers are limited and this role utterly beyond them. He knew his lines and read them without embarrassament. He did not give to them, however, their full meaning, and they fell flat. Mr. Barnes, in a word, is a very ordinary actor, who has yet to learn much ere he essays leading business. In London he supported J. S. Clarke in farces, and we should fancy him good in such parts, but we cannot commend in any degree his personation of Benedict. Mr. Vining Bowers as Dogberry, and Mr. Rosine as Verges, alone in the entire cast are entitled to commendation. They understood their roles thoroughly and acted them judiciously."

A Slight Mistake.

Some time since a party of ladies and gentlemen went on a tour of inspection through Durham Castle. The "lions" were shown to them by an elderly female of sour, solemn, and dignified aspect. In the course of their peregrinations, they came to the celebrated tapestry for which the castle is so famed.

"These," said the guide, in true showman style, flavored with a dash of piety to suit the subject, and pointing to several groups of figures upon the tapestry—"These represent scenes in the life of Jacob."

"Oh, yes—how pretty!" said a young lady; and, with a laugh, pointing to two figures in somewhat close proximity, she continued, "I suppose that is Jacob kissing Rachel?"

"No, madam," responded the indignant guide, with crushing indignation, "that is Jacob wrestling with the angel."

The men haw-hawed, the young lady subsided, and offered no further expostulatory remarks, but groaned under a sense of unworthiness during the rest of the visit.

New Type.

The type with which the present number of FIGARO is printed, is the extra hard metal variety from the foundry of Messrs. Miller and Richard, Edinburgh and London. The leading newspapers of Great Britain, are printed from this type, and all the heavy English publishing houses use it. Read, Brand & Co., 310 and 312, Clay street are the agents for this city.

A Cool One.

Fougerays, a Parisian journalist, remarkable for an apparent indifference to everything, was black-balled at a club. He inquired why, and was told that many gentlemen had opposed him because they thought him too cold. "Ah!" he said, "that would be reasonable if I had come before them as a dish of soup."

Johnny on the Rat.

The rat should ot to foller cats in books, wich ain't so in cellers. The rat eats chees wen he can git some that's good, but dutch nocks him. There was a man bated a steel trap with dutch chees, and pretty soon he began to fine ded rats evry mornin.' At the end of a weak there was ded rats evry were, but the trap had never been sprang. Then he found out the rats was starved 'cause they had worn their teeth off nawin the trap, and couldn't take their meels. They thought the trap was the bate and the dutch was the trap.

You know who told me that about the dutch. Wen he comes to see my sister he asks me how I'm gettin' on with my composition, and then he tels me things wich I may put in it, and my sister she says shaw what a fib, and I mussent bleeve a word he says, and looks in his eys with her'n, but he ain't a bit afrade. Her'n are black, but his'n is gray, and so is rats.

Rats is long tails, and if you berry a ded un with his tail a-stickin' out it would be a vine. Rats is killed by tairiers, which is put into a pit were the rats has been cetched and let out. If it wasn't for those tairiers, there would be to many rats for anybody to live. The black-and-tan is finest to look at, but the rats licks 'em like smoke.

I asked my father if ferrits was good for rats, and he says yes, that's what they live on wen they can't get vegittibles; but he was reading the newspaper, and mother she says wen a man is readin' a newspaper they never knows nothin.' My uncle Ned he spoke up and said that was the best fraim of mine to read the papers. Newspapers tore up little makes good nessed for rats, and the puffs wich wimmen puts in their hare is called rats too, but not the bitin' kind.

Bishep Hatto was et by rats, evry little tiny bit up, and serve him mity well right, too; but they don't now 'cause their is more bisheps than there is rats.

Rats is row-dents, and rat-cetchers is row-dentists, my sister's young man ses.

A Libel.

A Chicago paper has the cheek to publish the following:

"Do they whip people in Delaware, ma?" inquired a young hopeful of his maternal relative.

"Yes, my child; criminals; Delaware is the only State in the Union that clings to the whipping-post, that relic of a barbarous age."

"What do the poor fellows do after they have been whipped?"

"They take Horace Greeley's advice and 'go west,' my child. Then they start a 'shoddy' newspaper and do the public printing; you see a whipping makes them smart."

Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. FIGARO IN A NEW DRESS.

We have no particular liking for show. An old coat is more comfortable than a new one, old boots fit more easily than new ones, but everything wears out in time so that it becomes imperatively necessary to replace it. FIGARO wore its old dress for a considerable time. Somewhere about eight million papers have been printed from the type which we now lay aside. FIGARO looks brighter in its new dress, and will, perhaps, move a little more freely in foreign parts, now it presents such a pleasant appearance. FIGARO'S motto has always been, in an old coat or a new one, "Here, there and everywhere."

Well! Well!

We thought the San Jose people would always turn out to see a free show. The San Jose Mercury however, speaking of the recent eclipse of the moon says: The eclipse of the moon did not draw as large a house as was anticipated. When the first shade began to appear along the edge of our satellite, the sidewalks were pretty well filled with spectators, but the business of obscuration was too slow for them, and those who had no particular business down town, went home, and the others returned to their billiards and seven-up, letting Luna play out her cast to a beggarly account of empty boxes.

Lost Chances.

There are any number of people in San Francisco who spend time in bemoaning chances which they have lost. There are chances enough remaining for clear-headed far-sighted men. Maurice Dore & Co will offer such an opportunity on Friday next of buying lots in the Antisell Tract at Berkeley. The terms of sale are twenty per cent cash, balance within two years. Berkely is only 45 minutes from San Francisco, and will in a very short time be a formidable rival to Oakland. A free stage at present connects four times a day with the Berkely Ferry for the purpose of taking visitors to the tract.

Snubbing the Choir.

One Sunday, after the choir at Oberlin had sung without distinctly pronouncing the words, President Finney, in his prayer, alluded to the choir as follows: "O, Lord, we have sung an anthem to thy praise. Thou knowest the words, but we do not. We do pray Thee that those who thus led us may open their mouths that we may join in Thy praise. May they not sing to be heard of men. May they not mock Thee and offend Thy people, or the House of God by making a display of themselves."

It is pleasing to learn that after service the tenor put a head on Mr. Finney.

Virtuous Indignation.

The papers which were most active in thrusting Oleomargarine on the public are now foremost in the attack on its inventor. FIGARO pronounced Oleomargarine a forgery from the beginning, and cares very little whether or not Mr. Paraf, the distinguished apothecary, committed any other forgeries. There is no swindle too barefaced for the daily papers of San Francisco to support, provided that money is to be made by it.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 c

The Old Mint Restaurant.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. COUNTRY JOURNALISM.

Since writing a paragraph on this subject, which appears elsewhere, we have read an editorial on the same subject in this morning's Chronicle. The lesson which it seeks to draw from the death of the Benicia Tribune seems to be that since the establishment of railroads, a paper in a country town is unnecessary. Inferentially the inhabitants ought to subscribe for the "Chronicle" and let their local organ die. The fact of the matter is that there is not a paper in San Francisco that will assist in any way to build up an interior town. On the other hand a bright editor properly sustained by the inhabitants can MAKE a town. Does anyone pretend to deny that the amusing nonsense published by Bailey, has had an effect on the prosperity of Danbury? Danbury is known to a great many as the place where "The Danbury News" is published. Not long ago a man worth considerably over a million in money and land, pulled a Kansas paper out of his pocket, and pointing to the name at the head of the column said: "I depend entirely on that man to make the property I own in this place valuable." A country paper might be as pleasing to the inhabitants of San Mateo, San Jose, Grass Valley, Marysville, Placerville, Los Angeles, or other interior towns as one filled with the scandal of the metropolis can be. The natural advantages of the surrounding country afford as pleasing a text as a murder in a dive, or the latest discoveries of fraud among city officials. The country newspaper is a great advertisement for the town in which it is published, and it is to the interest of every inhabitant to contribute to its support.

San Francisco Communists.

Yesterday's Examiner contained two tems in immediate contiguity, which would seem to prove that the idea of communism in property, at least, as regards whiskey and oysters, is not without its adherents in this city. The first tells how Mr. McDonough went into a saloon, took a drink, and on being asked by the barkeeper for pay, struck him oxer the head with a stick. The next relates how Charles Henry went into a restaurant, eat some oysters, and on being requested to deposit a monetary equivalent pulled out a pistol and shot twice at the proprietor. This sort of thing is discouraging to saloon keepers and restarateurs. Is it the beginning of a communistic crusade?

The Search for Truth.

"Yaller Moses," a colored divine, in Virginia, thus concludes one of his recent discourses: "But yar must likewise 'sarch de Scriptures.' Lew Marshall tell Bob White, las' Sunday, 'How can we sarch Scriptures when we done got no Bible, and dunno how to read?" Yes, I hear 'im as so. I reckon you think 'Yallar Moses' is gwine to sarch de Scriptures for de whole congregation. No, old Moses can't make yer good; he can only tell you how ter make yerselfs good. But ebery brudder, ebery sister can sarch for hisself and trace truth from her mazy lair, and drag her howlin' to de light ob day."

An Absurd Crusade.

A quartette of singers two male and two female went prowling round Dupont street on Sunday night singing psalms, and preaching to the inmates of the houses. Their efforts were not appreciated. These fanatics if they have the means and are really in earnest in their endeavors to do good should cease their misdirected efforts. Let them get up a nice little tea party, have some good music and some pleasant people and then go out into the dark lanes and alleys and ask these victims of circumstances to come and have a good time with them. After tea a little sensible talk and calm discussion would not be out of order.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "Th Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos o the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Mind Reading.

Everyone is aware that we have five senses. It appears that in some people there is a sixth sense. The Oregonian, Portland, speaking of an exhibition of the power of "mind-reading," given by Professor Rice in the museum, on the 20th, says:

He was subjected to many very difficult tests by various persons in the audience, and in every instance gave the correct answer. The mode of testing the Professor's wonderful powers is to select some object and fix your mind firmly upon it; the Professor then places the two first fingers of your right hand upon his forehead, and moves directly to the object which engages your attention and places your hand in contact with it. Perhaps the most difficult test to which the Professor was subjected last night was in the case of a gentleman in the audience who selected a nail in the wall as the subject of his thought. After many individual tests the Professor proposed that a committee of three retire from the room and agree upon some object. The committee selected a Chinese sword, hanging upon the walls of the Museum-room—the Professor meanwhile remaining in the lecture-room. One of the committee was then subjected to the Professor's manipulations, and to the surprise of the committee and audience was led directly to the object. This evening the Professor will illustrate his powers in another direction, by writing on a blackboard any word or sentence upon which the auditor may fix his mind. We can cheerfully recommend our readers to attend upon this occasion as they will be amply repaid by the illustrations of the Professor's wonderful gift.

Professor Rice will shortly give an exhibition in San Francisco.

A Comic Paper.

The Cincinnati correspondent of Rowell's American Newspaper Reporter says:

The Giglampz, a comic weekly, started not long ago in this city, has ended its existence after a wearisome cruise. The first edition is said to have cost $60, and the whole receipts from it were only $1 77. No wonder they lost heart.

Occident's Time.

Occident is decidedly improving in public displays of speed. His time on Saturday in the second heat was 2:18, and proves him, under Doble's management, a horse of Budd-ing promise.

Good Advice.

What Budd Doble said to "Occident," "young lady, go East?" And she is goin in the Spring.

Saying Grace.

The Danbury News man thus contrasts the modes of saying grace before meals in Old England and New England:

"There is an accompaniment to each meal which strikes a stranger most forcibly. It is their way of saying grace. They are the rudenest people in this respect that I ever saw, and have a way of firing off their gratitude which is most startling. The text is something like this: 'For what we are about to receive make us truly thankful,' and this, by some families, is slid in most unexpectedly, and it has come so rapidly and so abruptly, that I have occasionally missed it entirely, hearing only the word 'about' preceded and followed by a subdued whistling, there being no abatement in the work of the table at the time tended to make the impression the less distinct. The giving of thanks, where it is the custom, at the end of the meal, has frequently cut off a mouthful of food, so swift and unostentatious has been its coming; and the conversation and happy laughter flowed along with scarcely a break in its current, and those who were about to finish did so, nd everybody felt contented and looked edified.

This is quite in contrast to our New England fashion of doing grace which froze the gravy, irretrievably damaged the mutton, and imbued the greater part of the guests with the gloomiest forebodings; in which the African and South Sea Islander were looked after and secured beyond harm; and all political cabals were taken under the fifth rib, completely dumbfounded, and their evil machinations scattered to the four winds of heaven. It was a fine performance, and a good thing for humanity at large, but it made the dinner look sick.

I think I like the English extreme the best, but both can be bettered. And never will be.

The Judgment of Solomon.

The Danbury News says:

Sometimes a good rule does not work. Two women came before Alderman Dobbs in our village the other day to settle a dispute about a child. Mrs. Murphy claimed the boy as her's, while Mrs. Doolan insisted that it was her's. As the Alderman could not obtain any decisive evidence bearing upon the case, it occurred to him to try the plan onced used in a similar case by Solomon. He sent out to the kitchen and got carving-knife, and then placing the boy on the desk, he said to the women, while he sharpened his knife on his boot, "I'm going to cut this yer youngster in half and Mrs. Murphy take the body, while Mrs. Doolan goes home with the legs." It was a clever idea, but it failed. Mrs. Murphy stepped up to him, and doubling up a fist that looked like an underdone leg of mutton, she shook it close to his nose and said, "Ef ye do ye shpalpeen oi'll murther ye with me own hand;" and Mrs. Doolan seized him by the hair, threw him to the ground and exclaimed while she brandished the knife over his prostrate body, "Gimme the legs! Be me soul, oi've a mind to kill ye and ate ye." Then Squire Dobbs adjourned the case, and while Mrs. Doolan retired with the boy, he went out to hunt up a Bible commentary in order to ascertain if their was not something about Solomon's proceedings that he didn't understand.

Washing Returned in One Day.

And we never disappoint, at the What Cheer

Chivalry.

The Washington Critic thus bewails the decline of chivalry. We think the following must have "offended subscribers:"

Would it be impossible for the men of honor and integrity to combine in order to stem the downward tendency of our civilization? What has become of the exalted sense of justice, the delicacy of sentiment, the refinement of manner, the dignity of bearing, the chivalric deference to woman that used to be recorded as traits of the American gentleman's character? Why is it that we are met on all sides with coarseness of speech and rudeness of manner—that integrity of word and action are so rare—that to be law-honest seems sufficient for most men, and society demands no more of them—that the sentiment of honor is derided as the caprice of a barbarous age, and chivalric devotion to woman laughed at as an improbability?

Our papers are filled with a daily record of what were once exceptional and heinous crimes. Officers of the law, whose duty it is to punish these, are themselves too often participants in them. Governments are iniquitous, corporations corrupt, and all public and business life permeated with deceit and fraud. The age is eaten up with avarice. Tweed, a representative man, speaks for more "statesmen" than himself in his reply to the interviewer. "I'm on the make. Put that down, sure; I put my hand as deep into the public purse as I can get it, and pull it out as full as it will hold. Them's my principles. I stick to my friends. That's me." Here is a strong type of the age in which we live, with a virtue of sticking to his friends which most of his imitators do not possess.

This coarse spirit of greed peers at you weazen-faced, or bullies you with its "stand-and-deliver" look where wherever you go. It smokes, it chews, it drinks, it spits, it cheats, it swears, it pushes itself into the highest and best places in the land till there are neither high nor best places left. Facilis descensus Averni. We have gone down the inclined plane of political and social degradation till it is now as rare as it once was common to see a true American gentleman.

Is the race extinct? We hope and trust it is not. We believe it is only hidden in obscurity, shrinking from contact with the rudeness and coarseness of the porcupine humanity whose unappeased appetite keeps it ever on the rush to the front.

* * * * * * * *

We know that this ancient institution of chivalry is among the dead things of the past; but is there to be no resurrection of the virtues it inculcated? Are mere coarse, physical, beastly people to dominate society and ride rough-shod over all the finer feelings and sensibilities of those who think that there is something better than shoddy and worthier than lucre?

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "Th Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos o the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Opera House.

Lottie and Frank, Billy Emerson, Rickards, Billy Arlington, Billy Rice, Ben Cotton and a host of others will appear to-night in a programme which for variety and excellence has not been surpassed for some time. No wonder the Opera House is always crowded.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Miss Adele Leighton, appeared at this house last night, in J. H. Leroy's new play entitled "Lady Madge," founded on C. Gibbon's novel entitled For the King. Miss Leighton acquitted herself very creditably reading the long speeches of her part with considerable elocutionary effect. The play is one of stirring interest, but it is much too talky. To-night, and after another rehearsal and some cutting, it will play more smoothly. J. A. Herne as Sir Malcom Oliphant and J. S. Lindsay as Strathsay, did some good acting in their respective roles.

California Theatre.

"Romeo and Juliet" will be played for the last time to-night To-morrow evening Sheridan Knowles fine play "The Hunchback" will be produced, with Agnes Booth in the role of Julia, and a generally strong cast.

On Friday evening, Rickards, the London comic and character vocalist, who has became a great favorite here as he was in London, and afterwards in Australia, will be the recipient of a complimentary benefit at the Opera House. The Emerson Minstrels and Lottie, Katie and Frank will appear, and the beneficiary will sing some of his best songs, including "Browne the Tragedian."

Vivian.

Charles Vivian and Company performed on Monday and Tuesday evenings at San Jose, to splendid business. He was in town this morning, looking as bright as a new pin. He gives a performance at Redwood to-night, and intends to take the next steamer for Eureka, and play a season there, and in the towns on Humboldt Bay. After which he will return to San Francisco for a professional season.

Woodward's Gardens.

The Sunday Concerts by Wetterman's Grand Orchestra, are a great feature at these gardens. On Saturday and Sunday next Professor Miller and J. THE ACORN.

An acorn swung
On an oak-tree bough;
So long had it hung,
It would fain fall now
To the kindly earth,
That its germ within
Might burst into birth,
And its life begin.

And the Autumn came
With its burning hand;
And each leaf grew a flame,
And each bough a brand,
And a worm came up
And began to eat
Through the hard, dry cup
To the acorn sweet.

And the acorn thought,
"I soon shall see now
The life I have sought
When I fall from the bough;
For the worm gnaws through
Each tendon slight
That about me grew,
And bound me tight."

And with dying day
Came the zephyr's sound;
And the acorn lay
Next morn on the ground;
But its germ was gone
By the worm's sharp teeth;
And the ground it had won
Was its grave in death.

Not Without Care.

The Duke of Brunswick, who died a short time ago, was known as the possessor of the finest collection of diamonds in the world. That he had to take extraordinary care of his possessions the demolition of his Paris house shows. The house was situated on the Avenue Friedland, and had to be unbuttoned like a series of coats to be entered. At the front gate was a metal button, which on being pressed set a number of bells jangling furiously. Admitted into the garden the visitor found himself excluded from the house. Another button had to be pressed and the visitor found himself in an unfurnished hall. There was no staircase communicating with the rooms where the duke slept. More buttons had to be pressed and at last the visitor was seated in an arm chair and raised by a hydraulic lift apparently to the living rooms of the noble diamond owner. The walls of the bed-room were iron-clad, and by touching a button a panel in the wall was removed and entrance gained. The Duke de Treviso has bought this diamond castle and has stipulated that all the treasures discovered in it shall belong to him. He is now pulling it down. After reading the account of the house in which the Duke of Brunswick kept his treasures, one feels that it isn't a pleasant thing to have the reputation of being a great diamond owner. There are so many people in the world who are anxious to become diamond proprietors, and who aren't over particular how they get possession of them, that the owner isn't the soundest sleeper nor the freest man from care in the world.

A New York Nuisance.

A New York paper complains of a nuisance not common in San Francisco. We have only one of the breed here, and "it" is a dramatic critic: It's pleasant to sit in a theatre and have a fellow with his girl in front, especially if the fellow is one of those who imagines his girl is an idiot and deaf. After every speech he repeats it somewhat in this style: Benedick has made the remark, "Now, you speak like the blind man; 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post." Our youth says, "That feller sez that the other's blind, and that he's goin' to smash the lamp-post." We've never sat behind a young man of this sort that we didn't have an inclination to throw our arms about his neck and hug him till he was strangled, and get our teeth entangled in his ear.

A Man of few Words.

"I did not come here gentlemen with the intention of making a speech, and am consequently wholly unprepared to do honor to the occasion. You must therefore excuse me if I confine myself to a few brief observations." Such were his remarks as they hoisted him upon the table at a recent political meeting, and after he had talked for an hour and three quarters, it took three of his most abled bodied constituents thirteen minutes hard work, with dray pins to convince him that he had said enough.

The Country Skool Mom.

Josh Billings thus describes her: She is invariably just about twenty-three years and six months old, and remains rite thare for a term ov years.

She wears her hair either kut short or hanging around in ringlets, and iz as precise in all things az one ov Fairbank's improved platform scales.

She never laffs out loud, and seldum even smiles, but when she does, she does it accordin' to the rules laid down by Murray for speaking out and pronouncing the inglish language korrecktly.

She is the very essence ov dubble extrackted propriety, and would rather be four years behind the fashions, in her dress and bonnet, than to spel a word wrong, or parse a sentence inkorrecktly.

She keeps a scrap book and an album, and would prefer rather to hav the autograff ov sum milk-and-water poet, than the name ov sum good man to a sixty days note.

The country skool mom seldum dies an old maid; she gets married generally to sum man who haz but little edukashun, and he thinks (as he ought to) that there aint another such a larnt woman as his wife on the face of the earth.

With all her precise phoolishness, her pompous knolledge, her sikly sentimentalism, and her allmost allwuss mistaking manner for matter, I respekt the country skool mom; she taught me mi letters, she waz pashunt when i waz stupid, she soothed me when i wuz frackshus, and she often (good soul) give me a titbit from her luncheon of noon-time.

May kind Heaven strew sum kind ov happiness in her pathway, for she iz paid poorly, worked hardly and the stepmother to everyboddy's children; she never receives from the world ennything better than the most formal respekt.

Too Bad.

A poet-ridden newspaper says: The Indian Summer is here. We have sad occasion to know. We have already received twenty-four poems headed "Indian Summer," and there are a good many more lunatics to be heard from. The youth who pockets the proceeds of our waste basket says: "I don't see what you'm down on them ere poicks for. If it warn't for them it wouldn't be worth selling the torn paper. You ought to encourage them. They and the paper makers, and the ink sellers, and —me!" That youth didn't think of our suffering when we were reading about hazy skies, and blood-red sunsets, and leafless trees, and moaning winds, and drear winter's dread approach. However, we guess we can stand it as long as the poets can.

To Exterminate Vermin.

Mix white loaf sugar and fresh eggs and place where the vermin can get at it. Rats, mice, roaches, croton bugs, etc., will devour it with avidity. Keep feeding them regularly, and by and by they will get so fond of the mixture that they won't eat anything else. They will starve first. Then let them starve.

Curious Religious Belief.

The Courier Journal says: "It is the prevailing belief in Pennsylvania that no dead man can get into heaven unless he takes with him a copy of the Philadelphia Ledger, with his obituary poem marked with a red and blue pencil."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the mort fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since 3-cj

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Sardou's New Drama.

The Paris correspondent of the New York Spirit of the Times says:

Sardou read his new grand drama of "La Haine" (Hatred) to the company and managers of the Gaite the other day, and such was the effect produced that at the end Lafontaine (who is to play the hero) and Offenbach himself both rapturously embraced him. I think had I been in Sardou's place I should have remarked, "Thanks for the compliment, gentlemen; but allow me to suggest that hereafter you appoint Mesdames Angele and Perret" (the Venus and Diana of Orphee) "as your substitutes in making such demonstrations." "La Haine" is said to be the finest work that Sardou has given to the stage since his chef d'œuvre of "Patrie," and will be the only really new piece from his pen which will be produced in Paris this Winter; his "Pres St. Gervais," now in rehearsal at the Varieties, being a rearrangement of an old play of his performed several years ago. The cast of "La Haine" is to be perfectly phenomenal in its excellence, for not only is Lafontaine to appear as the hero, but Lia Felix and Marie Laurent are to perform the two leading female characters—a cast which could only be paralleled by us in engaging Edwin Booth, Clara Morris and Charlotte Cushman to appear together in a single play.

Can this be True?

The New York correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, speaking of the theatres, says: Most all of the managers have adopted the plan of having a sort of ink-slingers' sample room, where, between the acts, the critics go and strengthen their opinions, and weaken their legs on free drinks. It's funny to watch 'em of a first night. They are coldly, clammily critical through the first act. Then they go out and return more disposed to unbend like the miserable ordinary spectator who has paid his money for a seat and sits and coughs in it. A second rush is made at the next fall of the curtain, and when they file back there's a promising beam in the eye and a satisfied smile about the mouth, the remains of lots of smiles outside.

Happy Thought.

"What is the matter with you, my friend?" inquired a judge, who had called to see his sick neighbor. "Vell, I don't know, chudge — dey say it ish de cout — but vy should I have de cout? I lives blain; I I don't eat doo much nor drink doo much; vy should I have the cout?" "Perhaps," suggested the judge, "it is hereditary?" "Vell," replied the invalid, with the look of a man who has suddenly been enlightened on a difficult subject. "Vell, I guess it ish hereditary; I remember my wife's uncle had de cout."

Severe on the Old Man.

Baggs got up too early one morning, and began to scold the servant girl. His little six-year old, who had been listening attentively during the conversation, broke in with, "Father, stop scolding, you needn't think that Jane is your wife."

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 c

"THE CHURCH" QUAKING.

The "Interior" a religious paper says:

Christ was austere on occasions, as well as kindly. He suited his course to the wants of the emergency in such a way as to leave no doubt that truth, justice, continence, honesty, and the kindred moralities, were regarded by Him as integral parts of a religious character. One especial reason why the moralities should be observed, is the fact that the leading assailants of Christianity are men of good repute. The Church cannot afford to tolerate moral laxity. Once the names of Voltaire and Paine stood for infidelity, and they were men of known looseness of morals. How strong the contrast herein between them and Jonathan Edwards, Baxter, Bunyan, and the other great lights of their day! But now the leading skeptics are Prof. Tyndall, Herbert Spencer, Dr. Buchner, and Prof. Huxley, and, going back a little, Mill, Comte, Kant, and Theodore Parker. In a moral point of view, their reputations are good. Never was there such need as now that the Church should exemplify the ethics of the Bible. Infidelity will prevail in proportion as sentimentalism is accepted as a substitute for principle.

It is pretty rough on "the Church," its antagonists at present being men of "good reputation." "The Church" will really have to begin to make a showing of solid virtue. "The leading assailants of Christianity are men of good repute." This is a remarkable profession. A great many members of a great many churches are men of good repute, but they are not good men. Is it simply the respectability, the high standing in society, of the assailants of Christianity that has frightened "the Church!" Voltaire was worshipped by the people living in his vicinity. His purse was ever open to distress, and he never was averse to making the good priests of the Catholic Church his almoners. As individuals he respected them, when they talked theology to him he quarrelled with them. This idea of "the Church" acknowledging that a man who attacks the Church may be a man "of good reputation" is a new one. Is reputation a cardinal virtue? We have known a bad man set to work deliberately to establish a reputation in order to trade on it. We have known many good men and good women of original ideas, who never succeeded in establishing a reputation until they were dead. Socrates was termed "a corrupter of the Athenian youth." Another, whom "the Church" pretends to follow, was accused of associating with men and women of no reputation. This reputation is the veriest humbug ever known. It is a marketable commodity now-a-days. It is better for a man to be able to feel that he is a man, not a sneak, a coward, a time-server, than to have the best "reputation" in the world. Nine tenths of the men of San Francisco who have the best "reputation," will never enter the Kingdom of Heaven, they are most faithful representatives of the Scribes and Pharisees mentioned in the New Testament. It is not the reputation of these "infidels" that should make "the Church" quake so much as their inflexible honesty of purpose. The truth is mighty, and shall prevail.

"Convey, the Wise it Call."

The New York Spirit of the Times says: Quite a little "row" was created in St. Louis last week, over the play of "Led Astray," the contending parties being Mrs. F. B. Conway and William Horace Lingard. Mrs. Conway applied for an injunction to restrain the Lingard Combination from playing "Led Astray," as she had the exclusive right to perform it throughout the United States, except in the cities of New York, San Francisco and Chicago. Judge Treat refused to grant the injunction, on the ground that Boucicault was merely a translator, and not an author. He alluded to the case of Mrs. Stowe, who failed to get a copyright for her works in German. The Judge ruled that the only right of the author was as to the form in which the thoughts were expressed, therefore there could be no copyright for a translation. The affair reflects no great credit upon the great dramatic plagiarist of the nineteenth century, who steals the work of other men's brains and then proclaims and sells them as his own.

Un Dernier Resort.

Not many years ago there lived a sweep in a certain Somersetshire village, who had two mischievous boys. One day the boys insulted the parish clergyman, and the angry divine went to the father, whom he accosted with: "What do you intend to do with those boys of yours, John?" "Well, sir," replied the sweep, with a wicked twinkle of the eye, "there's the oldest of 'em's a fine, sharp boy, I'm gwyne to make a sweep o' he. But the youngest is a dull, stupid sort o' lad. I don't really know what I can do wi' he, 'cept I make a parson o' 'm."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 617 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Dr. Doherty.

His devoted his study more particularly to

To-morrow.

"There is a tide in the affairs of man which taken at the flood leads on to fortune." To-morrow, an opportunity will be offered to many to establish the basis of a fortune. At 12 o'clock, Maurice Dore & Co., will put up at action at their new salesrooms, 260 lots of the Antisell Tract at Berkeley. The terms of sale are twenty per cent. cash, the balance within two years. In two years time, Berkeley will be a flourishing town, and the lots will have increased amazingly in value.

LOVE'S QUEEN.

BY WILLIAM WINTER.

He loves not well whose love is bold!
I would not have thee come too much,
The sun's gold would not seem pure gold
Unless the sun were in the sky;
To take him thence and chain him near
Would make his beauty disappear.

He keeps his state—do thou keep thine,
And shine upon me from afar!
So shall I bask in light divine,
That falls from love's own guiding star;
So shall thy eminence be high,
And so my passion shall not die.

But all my life shall reach its hands
Of lofty longing toward thy face,
And be as one who speechless stands
In rapture at some perfect grace.
My love, my hope, my all shall be
To look to heaven and look to thee.

Thine eyes shall be the heavenly lights;
Thy voice shall be the Summer breeze;
What time it sways, in moonlit nights,
The murmuring tops of leafy trees;
And I will touch thy beauteous form
In June's red roses, rich and warm.

But thou thyself shalt not come down
From that pure region far above;
But keep thy throne and wear thy crown,
Queen of my heart and queen of love!
A monarch in thy realm complete,
And I a monarch—at thy feet!

The New System.
The machine actress, says a writer in the Arcadian, is a result of unlimited vanity and the meretricious system of "coaching" by well-worn theatrical hacks that has of late come into vogue. A woman used to be content to accept a comparatively subordinate position on the stage when she began her theatrical career; she studied her profession practically, and if she attained the position to which she aspired, it was because she was eminently fitted for it. But money and Morant have done away with all this, and we are oppressed with a swarm of Grangers, Darlings and Fosters who are as little calculated to adorn the stage as half the critics are to judge of their merits. There is Ethel even, the most successful of her class, who took her diploma at the Union League Club Theatre, was voted tedious by clear-headed people at the beginning, and was never able to rise to the frothy surface of popular favor until she happened to float passively into the lascivious current of the French drama. It wasn't her fault that she made a hit. If the lady Mr. Daly originally intended to play the part of Frou-Frou had not been prevented from doing so, we should have gone on wishing, whenever we saw Ethel, that somebody would stick a pin in her and wake her up just once. The part itself was what aroused the popular enthusiasm, though Ethel got all the credit for it, and she was at once elevated to the position of a theatrical idol.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Rather Awkward.
At a fashionable dinner party the guests had just seated themselves at table, and were rapidly helping themselves to the oysters, plates containing a dozen of which had been placed between every two persons, when the hostess began to talk to the gentleman next to her of his sons, one of whom he had lost through accident. "You still have six left, however," she said, in a voice of condolence. "Yes," replied the gentleman, with an exquisite smile, thinking that the oysters were referred to; "but four belong to my neighbor."

Madame Dejazet's Benefit.
We take further particulars concerning the great benefit given in Paris to the veteran Mme. Dejazet, from the correspondence of the New York Spirit of the Times: The house was crowded in every part, and as high as 1,000 francs (two hundred dollars) was given in many instances for a box; while M. de Villemesant, the editor of the Figaro, paid for his box with a settlement of a hundred francs per month upon Mme. Dejazet for the term of her natural life. Among the noted persons present were the Duke and Duchess Decazes, the Duke and Duchess de Mouchez, the Prince de Sagan, the ex-Queen of Spain and her son Prince Alphonso, Sir Richard Wallace, the Prussian Ambassador, Connt von Moltke, the Baron and Baronness de Rothschild, Mme. Christine Nilsson, and a host of other celebrities, social, dramatic, and literary. During the entre'acts, Mme. Schneider, Colombier, Montaland, Silly, and Van Ghell, and Mlle. Marie Legault sold lottery tickets in the "foyer." Mme. Schneider, the irrepressible, brought in the most money of any them, and no wonder, for she adopted a style of solicitation which sounded somewhat of highway robbery. Stationed in the lobby, she would accost every gentleman that passed, seizing the recalcitrant ones by the collar and forcing them to stop, when she would then, without ceremony, plunge her hand into the breast pocket of each one's coat, and taking possession of the pocket-book therein, she would proceed to help herself to a portion of its contents. If it contained two hundred francs, she would take one hundred and fifty; if five hundred francs, she would take three hundred and so on. If any person consented to purchase tickets of her (their price was five francs), and did not give her the exact amount, they never received a penny of change. When she had exhausted the lobbies and the "foyer," she made a raid on her acquaintances in the orchestra stalls, and succeeded in reaping a goodly harvest there. She handed over to the Dejazet fund, therefore, a sum of over three thousand francs, while pretty, modest little Marie Legault only brought in four hundred francs. The benefit, exclusive of the proceeds of the lottery, produced a sum of sixty thousand francs ($12,000), on the interest of which, added to the Government pension of four hundred dollars a year which she already enjoys, the aged actress can finish her days in peace and comfort.

Reasoning from Analogy.
In a certain family a pair of twins made their appearance, and were shown to their little sister of four years. It happened that whenever a rather prolific cat of the household had kittens, the prettiest was saved and the rest were drowned. When the twins were shown the child by their happy father, she looked at them earnestly, and at length, putting her little finger-tip on the cheek of one of them, looked up and said, with all seriousness possible, "Papa, I think we'll save this one."

Punishment Enough.
An Alsatian woman goes to confess:—"Father, I have committed a great sin." "Well!" "I dare not say it; it is too grievous." "Come, come, courage." "I have married a Prussian." "Keep him, my daughter. That's your penance."

Managers
Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

How to put Children to Bed.

Fanny Fern was not a very brilliant writer, but she said many good things. Speaking of how children should be put to bed, she says: Not with reproof for any of that day's sins of omission or commission. Take any time but bedtime for that. If you ever heard a little creature sighing or sobbing in its sleep, you could never do this. Seal their closing eyelids with a kiss and a blessing. The time will come when, all too soon, they will lay their heads upon their pillows lacking both. Let them, then, at least have this sweet memory of a happy childhood, of which no future sorrow or trouble can rob them. Give them their rosy youth. Nor need this involve wild license. The judicious parent will not so mistake my meaning. If you have ever met the man, or the woman, whose eyes have suddenly filled when a little child has crept trustingly to its mother's breast, you may have seen one in whose childhood's home "dignity" and "severity" stood where love and pity should have been. Too much indulgence has ruined thousands of children, too much love not one.

An Indignant Tenor.

An extraordinary incident, says the London Echo of Oct. 8, occurred last night in the theatre at Manchester. Mr. Sims Reeves was playing Capt. Macheath in "The Beggars' Opera," and the piece proceeded pretty smoothly down to the end of the third act. At this point, when the associates of Capt. Macheath should rush on the stage and triumphantly announce his reprieve, the supers were not forthcoming. Mr. Reeves advanced to the footlights, and attributing the hitch to Mr. Henry's mismanagement, said he was never so disgraced in his life. He waited quietly until the supers, one by one, had come on the stage, and then said to the audience, who cheered him loudly, "Ladies and gentlemen, you should call for the manager." This was done amid great uproar, but Mr. Henry did not appear. Mr. Reeves then said, "We will not finish the opera," whereupon the audience dispersed in the greatest disorder, and freely expressed disapprobation of the management.

A Pathetic Appeal.

At a late Assize, in Ireland, two men were condemned to be hanged. On receiving their sentence, one of them addressed the judge, and said he had two favors to ask of him, "What are they?" inquired his lordship. "Plase your honor," said Pat, "will you let me hang this man before I am hanged myself?" "What is the other request?" said the Judge. "Why, plase your honor, will you let my wife hang me, for she will do it more tenderly than the hangman—and then what she will receive for the job will help the poor crature to pay her rent."

A Transparent Falsehood.

Spilkins came down town this morning with his eyes terribly bloodshot. His explanation was that he had been trying on last winter's overcoat, in which Mrs. S. had thoughtlessly sprinkled cayenne pepper, to keep the moths out. Too thin, Spilkins.

What Cheer Laundry.

THE BEST ORGAN PLAYER IN THE COUNTRY.

We had a visit, yesterday, from the best organ player in the country. He wanted a notice. He was willing, he said, to play the organ at the California Theatre, at the Opera House, Maguire's New Theatre or at Buckley's Varieties. All he wanted was a chance to display his talent. We suggested that there was a difficulty. Neither of the places of amusement which he mentioned had an organ. Then he said "I provides mine own organ—I haf got him in mine pocket;" and out of his right-hand vest pocket he drew a mouth organ or patent harmonicon? He played "The Watch on the Rhine," "When the Swallows Homeward Fly," "God Save the Queen," "Yankee Doodle," "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning," and "The Marseillaise." He said "I knows dem all, and I haf no prejudice, There ain't no man on this zide of der Golorado Mountains gan beat me." We remarked that we preferred music made by means of a comb and a piece of brown paper to that evolved from the mouth harmonicon, and then he said he would play some more. We said he shouldn't. He didn't. We looked at him in such a serious manner that he put his organ back into his vest pocket, and he went out. As he was going down stairs, we, with our usual benevolence cried: "Go to the Alta office."

Jonah vs. the Whale.

An Eastern paper is responsible for the following:

Unbelievers have often told us that the story of the prophet swallowed by a great fish was an absurdity. They say that, being so long in the stomach of the monster, the minister would have been digested. We have no difficulty in this matter. Jonah was a most unwilling guest of the whale. He wanted to get out. However much he may have liked fish, he did not want it three times a day and all the time. So he kept up a fidget and a struggle and a turning, and gave the whale no time to assimilate him. The man knew that if he was ever to get out he must be in perpetual motion. We know men that are so lethargic that they would have given the matter up so quietly that in a few hours they would have gone into flukes and fishbones, blowholes and blubber. Now we see men all around us who have been swallowed by monstrous misfortunes. Some of them sit down on a piece of whalebone and give up. They say—

"No use! I will never get my money, or restore my good name, or recover my health."

They float out to sea and are never heard of. Others, the moment they go down the throat of some great difficulty, begin immediately to plan for egress. They make a rapid estimate of the length of the vertebrate, and come to the conclusion how far they are in. They dig up enough spermaceti out of the darkness to make a light, and keep turning this way and that, till the first you know they are out. Determination to get well has much to do with recovered invalidism. Firm will to defeat bankruptcy decides financial deliverance. Never surrender to misfortune or discouragement. You can, if you are spry enough, make it as uncomfortable for the whale, as the whale can make it uncomfortable for you. There will be some place where you can brace your foot against his ribs and some long upper tooth around which you may take a hold, and he will be as glad to get rid of you for a tenant as you are to get rid of him for a landlord. There is a way out, if you are determined to find it. All our sympathies are with the plaintiff in the suit of Jonah vs. Leviathan.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

California Theatre.

"The Hunchback" was performed last night to a good house, in spite of the rain. Mrs. Agnes Booth, though suffering severely from indisposition, gave a pleasing impersonation of Julia. Mr. Wheelock as Sir Thomas Clifford, gave a quiet and easy rendition of the role, Henry Edwards was of course excellent as Master Walter, and Miss Bella Pateman as Helen, made quite a success. This evening, "Much Ado About Nothing" will be played with Mrs. Booth as Beatrice, and Joseph Wheelock as Benedick. "The Lady of Lyons" will form the matinee entertainment to-morrow.

Opera House.

To-night a bill of extra attractions will be presented for the benefit of the popular character vocalist Rickards. Emerson's Minstrels, Lottie, Katie, Frank and others will appear, and the beneficiary will present some of his most admired impersonations, and sing some of his best songs. The selections from his repertoire will comprise "I'm so Volatile," "The Gal Wot I Calls Mine," "The Mad Butcher," "Take it Bob," "The Fancy Fair," and, by general desire "Browne the Tragedian." The usual matinee will be given to-morrow.

Maguire's New Theatre.

J. H. LeRoy's adaptation of "Lady Madge" with its stirring incidents and strong situations, now runs very well, and draws much applause. It will be played to-night and also at the matinee to-morrow.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Hughey Robinson in the comic act of "Taking the Pledge," Frank Mortimore, J. Kelly and Johnny Tuers in the "Challenge Dance," Ned Buckley and Harry Devoy in "Impudence and Assurance" and a host of other attractive features will be presented to-night.

Mercantile Library Hall.

The complimentary Concert tendered to Miss Cora Bailey, pupil of Professor Speranza, by her friends and pupils of his Italian Musical Institute, comes off this (Friday) evening. The programme consists of sixteen pieces to be given by the pupils of the Institute.

The Sunday Concerts by Wetterman's Grand Orchestra, are a great feature at these gardens. On Saturday and Sunday next Professor Miller and J. Monahan will give an illustration of the art of self-defense. Milo will appear in his wonderful performance on the velocipede, the Australian Hercules will perform some of his most stupendous feats, and a new variety troupe will appear.

THE MAY QUEEN.

BY BRET HARTE.

If you're waking, call me early, call me early, mother dear,
And see that my room is warm, mother, and the fire is burning clear;
And tallow my nose once more, mother, once more ere you go away,
For I'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I'm to be Queen o' the May.

It froze so hard last night, mother, that really I couldn't break
The ice in my little pitcher, mother, till I thought the poker to take;
You'll find it there on the hearth, mother—but, oh, let that hot brick stay,
For I'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I'm to be Queen o' the May.

I shall put on my AQUA-SCUTEM outside my seal-skin coat,
And two or three yards of flannel, dear, will go around my throat;
And you'll see that the boneset-tea, mother, is drawn while your child's away,
For I'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I'm to be Queen o' the May.

Little Effie shall go with me, if her nose is fit to be seen;
And you shall be there, too, dear mother, to see me made the Queen,
Provided the doctor 'll let you; and, if it don't rain instead,
Little Johnny is to take me a part of the way on his sled.

So, if you're waking, call me early, call me early, mother dear,
For to-morrow may be the chilliest day of all the glad New Year;
For to-day is the thirtieth, mother, and bless'd if your child can say,
If she ain't an April Fool, mother, instead of a Queen o' the May.

A Matrimonial Complication.

A pretty little matrimonial complication is reported from Madras. Mr. Green, a barrister, looking through some musty statute books, discovered that though a married man he might marry a Mussulman woman without incurring any legal penalty. Whether the desire to have a change of wives led to the discovery of the statute, or the discovery of the statute led to the desire to change wives, certain it is that within a short period Mr. Green took unto himself a Mussulman wife. Mrs. Green, unable to charge her spouse with bigamy, sued for a divorce, and obtained a decree and an order for £25 a month alimony. So far there was no confusion; but what did Mrs. Green do but take her revenge by at once marrying again? The astute Mr. Green, thereupon thought he had discovered an escape from the payment of the alimony, and he moved for an arrest of judgment on the ground that the decision was given in favor of Henrietta Green, and she is now Mrs. Gott; that there being no longer any Henrietta Green, therefore there should be no more payments. This point was still under consideration when it was announced that the fickle Mr. Green, having reconsidered, too late, the subject of his faith, had returned into the Christain fold. It will be necessary for these four people to ask themselves who and what they are. Lord Dundreary's muddle of relationship is simplicity itself compared with the genealogical puzzle produced by the first weak step of Mr. Green, and now involving Mrs. Green, Mrs. Musulman Green, Mr. Gott and Mrs. Gott, (late Green).

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Medical Wonder

Cures rheumatism, billious pains, neuralgia, [illegible]

Wasted Material.

Our San Francisco drunks seldom defend themselves in the Police Court, or if they do, their stories are never used to point a moral by the reporters. The Detroit Free Press sets an example in a record of drunks from which we make the following extracts: He said his name was Jacob Hauser, but there's nothing in a name down here. George Washington Christopher Columbus McDonough is no better when he gets before this court than Sandusky Sam or Cleveland Bob.

"You don't feel well this morning, I see," remarked his Honor as he took a square look at the prisoner.

"No; I'm pretty near gone," sighed Jacob.

"Is it consumption, asthma, insanity, or what?"

"Yes; I think so."

"Do you have pains in the head, hot flashes, a backache, cold sweats, a nervous feeling and a loss of appetite?"

"Yes; I do," replied Jacob, blowing his nose softly.

"Can't sleep nights—no ambition to run for office; don't care a cent whether school keeps or not?"

"Them's the symptoms," answered Jacob.

"Oh, well, you can go. If I should send you to the House of Correction and you should die there of Charles Sumner's ailment or of Napoleon's disease I'd never feel like buying another pound of Catawba grapes."

It was John Delaney, and he was drunk. He was found under a freight wagon, head pillowed on an old car-wheel, and he was tuning his volce as follows:

"Ten thousand mileth a-way,
I'm going to sail to-day—
I'm going to meet my own strue love
Down on Sla dusky Ba-a-a."

"Let's see!" mused his Honor, picking up his pen. "Twice ten is twenty, with one to carry; four is into twenty-four six times and one over, and three is into nothing no times and three over. I'll send you up for thirty days, Mr. Delaney."

"I can leave this town in fifteen minutes," said the prisoner.

"Can't help it—the sentence is recorded."

"I'll go in ten."

"Too late—too late."

"Dismast me and then steal my anchors if I can't go in five," begged the sailor.

"Beach him, Bijah," replied the court, and Bijah became a Beecher.

James White owned right up like a man. He said it was all nonsense for a man to claim that he was sober when the City Hall and the Opera House seemed to him to be nodding to each other, and the monument to be skipping around on one leg. Yes, he was drunk. He happened to come along where a man was selling new cider at five cents a glass, and he bought and drank three cents' worth, and it flew to his head. He was a man of family, respectable character, worked hard and if anybody ever again saw him drink three cents' worth of five cent cider he was willing to sit down on a buzz saw.

"It seems to me that you are in earnest," remarked his Honor. "Truth and veracity can be seen right in your eyes, and I believe it will be safe to let you go. But beware of cider in future. Shun it as you would a nomination for alderman. It looks nice, tastes good, but ah! it has sapped the foundation of many a noble structure and brought bitter ruin to many a happy hearthstone. Go, Mr. White, go forth into the great, wide world with the determination in your heart never to drink three cent cider or to have a large family or a respectable character again."

"He had a gloomy look,
And a tear was on his nose,
And rusty cow-hide boots
Exhibited his toes.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

An American appeared in the parquet of a London theatre with his coat and trowsers very much torn and disarranged. Some people thought he had been "sitting on the ragged edge of despair," but in reality he had fought with the door-keeper about leaving his overcoat in the lobby, as is customary.

Next to the production of "Hamlet," with Mr. Irving as the Prince of Denmark, the most important theatrical event of the present autumn in London will probably be the representation of a new work by W. S. Gilbert, which has already been put in rehearsal at the Prince of Wales' Theatre. Mr. Gilbert's new comedy, or comedietta, offers this peculiarity, that, consisting of two acts, it contains only two parts, one of which will be played by Mr. Hare, the other by Mrs. Bancroft, otherwise Miss Marie Wilton. This very original dramatist would seem to raise up for himself needless difficulties; as, for instance, in "Pygmallon and Galatea," the action of which is confined, through three not very short acts, to a single scene. But an author has a right to set obstacles in his own path on the condition of overcoming them; and this Mr. Gilbert generally contrives to do. The French stage possesses hundreds of "proverbes," in which the action is carried on throughout one moderately long scene, between two characters only; and it is, of course, possible that a skillful dramatist may be able to prolong the interest created in a first scene through a second. The thing, however, has not yet been done. It may safely be affirmed that at this moment no work exists in dramatic literature which, divided into two acts, comprises only two characters.

A new play by Tom Taylor, entitled "The White Cockade," has been successfully produced at the Theatre Royal, Croydon, England. It is a story of the Scotch Rebellion of 1715, and turns upon the successful attempt of Anne, daughter of Royland Errington, to prevent the execution of her father for high treason, by robbing Jock Aikenhead, the postman, of the death warrant. One feature of it is a hideous bit of realism in the exhibition of a man hanging in chains.

Rubenstein is still hard at work on his new opera, at his residence near St. Petersburg. It is to be produced the coming winter at Berlin.

Lucca will sing again in London during the season of 1875. She is under contract to Mr. Gye of the Royal Italian Opera.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, of the Haymarket Theatre, London, will probably visit New York next season.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 582 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. No. 209 Sutter street near Kearny. 8-bg

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles. *

Amusements, Etc.

OPERA HOUSE.—A splendid matinee performance will be given to-day. This evening extraordinary attractions will be offered. Billy Emerson will appear in some of his best characterizations, the amusing act of "The Three Doves" will be performed, and Harry Sefton the original Dancing Spider, and Miss Jennie Danvers, danseuse, will appear in their original specialty entitled "The Spider and the Fly," in which they are said to rival the Vokeses, the Majiltons and the Girards, as regards grotesqueness of action and quickness of motion. The same bill will be played to-morrow night.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—"Lady Madge," which now runs very smoothly, will be played at the matinee to-day and again this evening, with Miss Adele Leighton in the title role. The piece is handsomely mounted and every character in it is well filled. Mr. Le Roy has done his portion of the work well, the management have spared no expense, and Miss Leighton plays her part with conscientious attention to every detail. She needs, however, considerable experience before she will be fitted for the position of leading lady.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—Last night the play of "Much Ado About Nothing" was most successfully performed. Mrs. Agnes Booth played Beatrice capitally, exhibiting much of the spirit and archness which used to characterize her performances when she was a member of the "Old Drury" company. Joseph Wheelock's Benedick, was the best performance he has yet given, and Robert Pateman as Dogberry, surpassed himself. W. Barry gave an excellent impersonation of Verges, Miss Ellie Wilton was charmingly sympathetic, and looked particularly pretty as the wronged Hero, and the piece was generally well performed. At the matinee today "The Lady of Lyons" will be played, and this evening "The Hunchback" will be performed for the last time.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Johnny Tuers is the reigning favorite at this house. He appears nightly in his original specialties. Ned Buckley, Harry Devoy, Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson and a host of others present a great variety of amusing acts.

MERCANTILE LIBRARY HALL.—A very pleasant concert was given at this hall last night, complimentary to Miss Cora Bailey, a pupil of Prof. D. Speranza, by her friends and the pupils of the Italian Musical Institute. Miss Bailey has a soprano voice of good quality and uses it artistically. She was much applauded. Miss Susie Blumenberg, Miss Julie Shoemakers and other pupils of Prof Speranza acquitted themselves well.

FREE PICTURE EXHIBITION.—A very large and choice selection of works of art will be on public view on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to 12 M, the hour of sale, at H. M. Newhall & Co's rooms on Sansome street. There are 140 paintings in the collection from the studios of Miss Roberts, Miss Rockwell, Messrs. Baumgras, Bloomer, E. J. Bush, Coulter, Deakin, Denny, Fletcher, Frost, Hahn, Hart, Harrington, Thos. Hill, Edward Hill, Irwin, Jorgensen, Kipps, Lemon, Loomis, Marple, Nesjot, Prosch, Ross, Shed, Straus, Sutherland and Welch. A private view has convinced us that this is no lot of pictures painted for auction purposes, but a series of works ranging from medium to first-class, and superior to any ever got together in one sale. The public after inspection will agree with us. Art matters are looking up in this city.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—New Novelties The Sunday Concerts by Wetterman's Grand Orchestra, are a great feature at these gardens. On Saturday and Sunday next Professor Miller and J. Monahan will give an illustration of the art of self-defence. Milo will appear in his wonderful performance on the velocipede, the Australian Hercules will perform some of his most stupendous feats, and a new variety troupe will appear.

CITY GARDENS.—This popular resort will be re-opened on Sunday, under new management, with a company of acrobats and gymnasts from South America, who have gained great celebrity under the title of the "Marvels of Peru," their performances are said to excel anything every seen in this country. The Gardens since the rains look charming, and give to the toiler all the advantages of a trip into the country at a naminal expense, for the management have wisely placed the price of admission at 15 cents; this includes a ticket for the Dancing Pavilion, which will be open day and evening. Foot racing, sack racing and Atheletic sports for valuable prizes will take place.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining-rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain railroad.

NOTES.—J. M. Davies, t he ventriloquist leaves for Australia shortly. He is, as we have always maintained, one of the funniest monologue performers on the stage. This is due to his natural wit, which catches the masses, more than to his ventriloquial powers, which are not as extraordinary as those of Frederick Maccabe, concerning whom we have published several notices in FIGARO. Of this successful rival of the undoubtedly clever Davies the New York Clipper says:—"He next gave specimens of the art of ventriloquism, which, in point of skill, far surpassed any others hitherto witnessed in this city. He used no puppets to distract the attention of the audiences, neither did he wear a mustache or whiskers to conceal the movements of the facial muscles. He held imaginary conversations with a person under the table, one behind the drapery, and one on the roof; and also gave, in a most natural manner the imitation of a black-and-tan dog barking beneath the stage. During his performances his face was most of the time kept squarely toward the audience. At the close of this portion of the Maccabe was facing the audience, advancing slowly from the drapery to the footlights, and at the instant that the voice faded from hearing he spoke to the audience in his natural voice.

On Wednesday evening, November 14th, Alfred Wilkie, one of the best tenors who ever visited this coast, will take his farewell benefit. Mr. Wilkie has a good voice, that is undeniable. He has another advantage, he does not think he knows everything that can be known in the vocal line. He intends to go to Europe, place himself under the best masters there, and in two years he will return to San Francisco and give them a proof of what perfect cultivation of a fine organ can accomplish. The concert will be worthy of the occasion.

Miss Lena D[illegible] ... was ... were brilliant. "Miss ...my's Experiment' were her other pieces here—the first a ludicrous affair, well carried off by Miss Logan's elan—the second, one of the sweetest little one-act idyls ever played, and destined to live. It is said that Miss Logan intends to produce "Surf" in some of the larger towns on her route."

The most important news which we have met with for many years in our careful search for novelty in the dramatic columns of exchanges, is the following which we find in the New York Courier:

"Rena" and Mr. F. G. Maeder have received another new play, an original "American" play, from the prolific pen of J. J. McCloskey. The principal incidents embody the Emigrant's Life in America, starting from the shores of the "Ould Dart," landing at Castle Garden, adventures as a servant, strike on the Erie Railroad, railroad life, Watkin's Glenn, and a host of sensations interspersed. The play was the result of a bet made this season in the Grand Central Hotel, New York. Maeder accepted a bet offered by a leading American tragedian, that it was an impossibility to write an entirely original play. McCloskey, entering the vestibule at the moment, was badgered about it, and immediately shared the offer with Maeder. He started to write the play. He finished it, it is reported, in eight days. The play was at once accepted by Maeder for "Rena," in lieu of a play that he (Maeder) was writing for her.

There was no mention made of this in the Associated Press Dispatches of the Bulletin and Call, nor in the independant dispatches of the Alta, Chronicle and Post. Weston, (or whatever his name is, when he performs a feat of mere muscular endurance, has his feat telegraphed over the continent. J. J. McCloskey, the mental Hercules, writes a play in eight days!!!! The play is accepted by such an actress as Rena, (who the deuce, is Rena?) and the California press are silent about it. There is something wrong here. We don't know what it is.

Tom Taylor's play, "Arkwright's Wife," was produced at the Boston Museum on the 26th.

Mr. Charles Fechter and Lizzie Price commenced their season in New Orleans on Nov 2.

Joseph Murphy was the star of the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for the week commencing October 26th.

J. K. Emmet commenced an engagement at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 26th

Lewis Morrison and his wife, Rose Wood, are winning much fame in Harrisburg, Penn. The Patriot says:

The new society play entitled "Rose; or the Mystery of the Deserted House," written by Miss Celia Logan (sister to Olive Logan, the popular authoress) expressly for Miss Rose Wood and Mr. Lewis Morrison, was well received, and the fine points in it were frequently and properly applauded.

As Mr. Sherry, with characteristic liberality, has circulated a neat pamphlet, containing the plot of this finely conceived sensational drama broadcast over the city, it would be invidious in the writer of this to give it in detail. Suffice it to say that Miss Rose Wood, in the title role, completely charmed the audience from the beginning of the play to the end, giving ample evidence of her dramatic power. The lady is pretty, vivacious, natural and graceful in her movements on the stage. She is moreover winsome in her ways, has complete mastery over her feelings, and is devoid of the "mock agony" assumed by too many of her sex of the present day.

Mr. Lewis Morrison, the brilliant young tragedian, assumed the role of Robert Elwood, bringing out the character in all its interest, ably supporting the captivating and versatile Rose in all the varied characters she so truthfully performed.

The play and the players having successfully passed the ordeal of Harrisburg criticism (as exemplified above), we cannot imagine how it was we failed to see any merit in the former.

W. A. Mestayer commenced an engagement at the Front Street Theatre, Baltimore, October 19th, opening in the play of "The Hoodlum; or, Life in Frisco." Mr. Mestayer has played the character which gives the title to this role in many cities of the United States, and has received much applause. The character of Bill Hardhead, however, no more represents a Frisco hoodlum than it does a London cockney or a New York b'hoy. It resembles the latter more than anything else. We object to Mr. Mestayer going abroad and giving false ideas of our San Francisco civilization. We are sure that Mr. E. J. Buckley, legitimate actor though he be, could give a more perfect representation of the San Francisco hoodlum than could the gentlemanly W. A. Mestayer.

George S. Knight is at the Theatre Comique, Washington.

Sheridan, Mack & Day's combination were at Richmond, Va., Oct. 24th.

The annual benefit of the Elks is to come off at Niblo's, Nov. 12th, an immense entertainment will be given.

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, in Italian Opera, the event was the debut of Signor Tagliapetria, at the Academy of Music, with Mlle. Albani as Gilda, and Miss Cary Signors Carpi, Scolari, and Hall were included in the cast. On the 30th ult. "Mignon" was given for the first time during the season.....At Union Square Theatre, "The Sphinx" was performed for the last time on the 24th ult. On the 26th, "The Hunchback" was produced, and Miss Morris made a success in the character of Julia. Charles Thorne made his reappearance, since his return from Europe, in the role of Sir Thomas Clifford; Stuart Robson played Modus, and Owen Marlowe, who has reconsidered his intention of going to Europe, played the character of Tinsel.....At Wallack's Theatre, the attraction was "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," with Mr. Montague as Manuel, Miss Ada Dyas as Marguerite, and a generally strong cast. It was to be kept on until the production of Boucicault's new Irish drama, of which we have already made mention.....At Booth's, the event of the season was the reappearance of Miss Charlotte Cushman in Shakspeare's play of "Henry VIII." The Mercury, speaking of the first performance says:—It would be a work of supererogation to ennumerate the many beauties of Miss Cushman's acting in this part. Could all that has already been said regarding it in these columns be put together 'twould make a good-sized volume, with very little but words of praise therein. With the mind to form an ideal conception of the part, and the ability to carry it out, Miss Cushman has gone on improving and perfecting her original impersonation until it is now one of the most beautiful and finished portraitures of the much-wronged Katherine which the stage can chronicle. From her first entrance to her death in the last scene, Miss Cushman was every inch a queen. In her first scene she gave an importance to her lines, which even the most enthusiastic Shaksperian student would not deem possible. In the trial scene she was dignified and powerful; in her scene with the Cardinal, bitterly sarcastic and painfully chafed by turns, while the death scene was given with a perfection of expression and painful fidelity to nature that brought tears to the eyes of many. No such Queen Katharine as Miss Cushman will be seen on our stage again for many a day. Mr. George Vandenhoff, who has not been seen on the dramatic stage of this city for many years, reappeared as Cardinal Wolsey, and gave a dignified and scholarly rendering of the part. Mr. Vandenhoff is, however, less of an actor than a reader, and it was not until the fourth act that he created any decided impression." On the 24th, Miss Cushman appeared as Lady Macbeth. On the 31st ult., the great American tragedienne appeared in her famous role of Meg Merrilies.....Of Bronson C. Howard's "American Comedy," at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, we published a critique early in the week.....At Bryant's Opera House, Dan Bryant, Dave Reed, Bob Hart, W. H. Rice and others give a good entertainment.....The San Francisco Minstrels do a good business with Billy Birch, Charley Baccus, Eugene Tremaine and other favorites.....At the Olympic Theatre, Barney and Rickey were the sensation in the sketch of "Our Boyhood's Days," for many nights. The Carlo Brothers were the latest attraction. They made a great hit.....At the Bowery Theatre, the old-time drama of "Raymond and Agnes" was being played.....The entertainment at the Lyceum Theatre we have already spoken of. Miss Neilson made an undoubted failure in Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing," and an equal success in "Romeo and Juliet".....At the Park Theatre, John T. Raymond was still highly successful as Colonel Sellers, in "The Gilded Age".....Of the performance at the Theatre Comique on the 19th, when he made his debut before the New York public, the Mercury speaks as follows: Jolly John Nash, whose name in England is synonomous with everything that is good-natured and mirthful, made his first appearance in America at the Theatre Comique on Monday night, and in a few minutes convinced his audience that it was no vulgar music hall performer, but a genuine, genial and artistic humorist that had crossed the Atlantic to aid in the cause of their amusement. A stout jolly-faced, pleasant-looking gentleman is John Nash, and his humor is so infectious that so soon as he enter into one of his inimitable laughing fits than the whole audience at once gives way, and a chorus of loughter is raised that might guarantee the health of a city. Mr. Nash is a welcome addition to our public entertainers, and the Theatre Comique management have placed their patrons under great obligations by bringing him to America.

Miss Olive Logan has evidently made a success at last, although the place is hardly large enough to make the success a great one. Still, every little helps. A critic in Des Moines, Iowa, who witnessed her recent impersonation of "The Woman Who

Miss Minnie Walton in London.

The London correspondent of the New York Spirit of the Times speaking of Sothern's reappearance at the Haymarket Theatre says: Miss Maria Harris and Miss Minnie Walton did all they had to do well; Miss Walton and Miss Linda Dietz, two charming Americans, made a very great success. Miss Walton is one of the loveliest girls we have ever seen on the stage, and it may well be said of her, "my face is my fortune," for before she had been on the boards two minutes her success was assured. Moreover, she is a most graceful and pleasing actress, with a fresh voice and a frank, earnest manner. We shall hope to see her again, and in a far better part. Miss Dietz is not new to us. She made a hit at the same house with J. S. Clarke, and was much liked during a brief engagement with Montague at the Globe. No more graceful Georgina was ever seen, and her admirable command of her face during the whole of the long scene where she has to listen to Lord Dundreary's lengthy speeches, was beyond praise. Equally good was her quiet, well-bred, manner of bringing him back to the point from which he had so persistently strayed. Miss Dietz has learnt the invaluable art of sitting still, and has moreover mastered the difficult secret of distinguishing repose from apathy. The mounting of the piece is excellent, even in these days of taste and magnificence, and the drawing-room scene is a marvel of get-up. The national anthem was vilely sung on the whole, though, with characteristic courtesy, Mr. Buckstone assigned the first solo to Miss Walton, who alone acquitted herself well.

A Colorado Orator.

At two o'clock Hummel stood up before the vast multitude (nine people) and with a trembling voice he eloquently begun:

FELLOW CITIZENS—Where is my opponent? Why, my friends, he is nowhere. I feel myself as much above my opponents as a 'possum in a persimmon tree does above the ground he crawls on. I ask you, my thick-headed brethren, in the name of the shaggy-headed lion which whipped the great North American eagle; I call on you my brainless hearers, in the name of the peacock of liberty which flew over the Rocky Mountains—to come to my rescue. Come on the eight of September and promote me to the office to which I perspire, and when you shall have been dead, and the sage-brush and the willow shall have entwined themselves around your graves, then will your sons and daughters come to me and say, "Hummel, some years ago our fathers voted for you for the office of Commissioner for Boulder county, Colorado." Then will I say, roll on, thou silver moon; I will stand by you in all your tribulations, till the last day in the evening.

It Very Much Depends.

Young men, if you wish to be happy get married. Again, if you don't wish to be happy get married. Because this is one of those matters which depend entirely upon a person's disposition and prospects, and there is no general rule appertaining to it which will work well in all cases. We make this statement not to enlighten anybody; but to squelch a great many persons whose wisdom has been miserably supposed to be somewhat of a genuine article.

Natural Philosophy.

"Grandma, do you know why I can see up in the sky so far?" asked Charlie, a little four-year old, of the venerable lady who sat on the garden seat knitting. "No, my dear, why is it?" said grandma, bending her eye, eager to catch and remember the wise saying of the precious little pet. "Because there is nothing in the way," replied the young philosopher, resuming his astronomical research, and grandma her knitting.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

Though it may seem a little self-assertive, we cannot refrain from publishing a few of the kindly notices which we have received from the news papers of San Francisco on the occasion of our appearing in a new dress.

FIGARO has donned a new dress. It has always been the firm friend of the Red Men as well as the best dramatic journal on the Pacific Coast.—The Calumet.

FIGARO is without exception the best edited paper, of its kind, in the United States, and richly deserves the success with which it has met. We observe with pleasure that it has doned a new dress.—The Hebrew.

There is not in San Francisco at the present day, a more thoroughly satisfactory paper than the FIGARO, the only dramatic authority on the Pacific Coast. We notice that it has donned a new dress.—Hebrew Methodist.

The success of an honorable business rival is always pleasing to the honorable business editor, we therefore congratulate ourselves as well as FIGARO, really the best dramatic paper published in the United States, on having donned a new dress.—Odd Fellow's Messenger.

We think we may say without fear of contradiction, or at all events of positive refutation of what we may say that the dramatic sheet known as "THE FIGARO," which is the programme of the various places of amusement in this city, presents a more presentable appearance since it has presented itself in a new dress. At present it is quite presentable.—Morning Call.

FIGARO the theatrical sheet of this city, has donned a new dress.—Evening Bulletin.

What is it makes a paper? The characteristic of the Chronicle (we deny this ED FIGARO). Honesty, a regard for morality, enterprise and fearlessness. All these characterize the FIGARO. We are glad to chronicle its success. It has donned a new dress.—Morning Chronicle.

FIGARO, our dimunitive and not always conservative morning contemporary, appears this morning in high feather, having donned a new dress. We wish it success.—Evening Post.

FIGARO, a really respectable paper, and the only dramatic authority on the Pacific Coast, has donned a new dress. It looks well.—Evening Examiner.

A little dramatic paper in this city called FIGARO, which, though ostensibly devoted to dramatic news, still pays a good deal of attention to religious matters, and appears to have a good deal of the spirit of true religion in its editorials has donned a new dress. May its editor some day be clothed with the spotless robe of righteousness.—Christian Advocate.

Our much esteemed contemporary, FIGARO, has donned a new dress. (We wonder why all these people say this. Is there no originality in the San Francisco press? ED. FIGARO,) It is a paper worthy of support by all truly spiritually-minded people.—Catholic Guardian.

There isn't any business tact in FIGARO. It would rather be honest than rich, but we perceive it has made enough money to donn a new dress. It needed it.—News Letter.

Never did any one any harm. Decent and gentlemanly. FIGARO isn't such a bad sort of paper. It has some new type. We don't own our type.—Bohemian.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. Charlotte Cushman.

The Philadelphia Press says:

And now this wondrous woman, who has so long towered a full head and shoulders above her fellows on the stage, is to pass from us, and the place that knew her is to know her no more. And she leaves us not in weakness, but in the full glory of her strength, and in the full might of her power, her action on the stage to-day being as grand as it was twenty years ago. She may be, as they tell us, old and broken; but as she urges the guilty Thane to his traitorous deed; as she grows and swells with passionate anger while shouting, "Hold!" to the murderous gipsy band, and as she turns upon her vile accusers, and in the noble bitterness of her majestic disdain, utters the words, "If not a queen, at least the daughter of a king," there is about her no sign of weakness, nor slightest shadow of decay. Here is no forced decrowning, but the voluntary abdication of a throne. Her mission is accomplished, and her work done. She has shown how one strong will, guided by a massive mind, can do successful battle against the world, and having taught her lesson, she passes away. She leaves us, and her fame will become a legend, her glory a tale that is told.

aguire's New Theatre.

This theatre will reopen on Wednesday evening on J. A. Herne's romantic military drama in four entitled "Charles O'Malley, the Irish Dragoon" will be produced for the first time in California, with he author in the character of Mickey Free, and Miss Sydney Cowell as Mary Brady. On Saturday vening Mr. Herne will take his benefit, and on Monday evening the famous play of "The Sphinx" will be produced with Miss Annette Ince as Blanche de Chelles, and Miss Kemble who will on this occasion make her first appearance in San Francisco as Bertha Savigny.

California Theatre.

To-night, Belot's remarkable drama of "Le Femme de Feu," adapted to the American stage for Mrs. Agnes Booth, will be produced with Mrs. Booth as Diane and Joseph Wheelock as M. Lami. A prominent feature of this play is a phosphorescent sea in which the fiery female takes a dip. On Friday next Mrs. Booth will take her farewell benefit, appearing as Constance in "King John." J. B. Booth, will on this occasion, make his only appearance in the title role, and Mr. Wheelock will play Falconbridge.

Opera House.

This house was thronged at both matinee and evening performance on Saturday, and again last night. Among the new features was the first appearance of Harry Sefton and Miss Jennie Danvers, from Australia, who appeared in a little act entitled "The Spider and the Fly" in which Sefton did some Majilton business, and Miss Danvers some sprightly dancing and acting. Billy Emerson, Billy Rice, Ben Cotton, Billy Arlington, Miss Lottie and her brother Frank, and all the stars will appear to-night.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Ned Buckley, Harry Devoy and Frank Mortimore will appear in the act of "Quiet Lodgers," Johnny Tuers, Frank Mortimore and John Kelly in "The Goat Island Ghost," Hughey Robinson, Miss Maggie Brewer, Johnny Tuers and Frank Mortimore in "The Tobacconist's Daughter," and others in various acts and specialties.

FREE PICTURE EXHIBITION.—A very large and choice selection of works of art will be on public view on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to 12 M, the hour of sale, at H. M. Newhall & Co's rooms on Sansome street. There are 140 paintings in the collection from the studios of Miss Roberts, Miss Rockwell, Messrs. Baumgras, Bloomer, E. J. Bush, Coulter, Deakin, Denny, Fletcher, Frost Hahn, Hart, Harrington, Thos. Hill, Edward Hill, Irwin, Jorgensen, Kipps, Lemon, Loomis, Marple, Narjot, Prosch, Ross, Shed, Straus, Sutherland and Welch. A private view has convinced us that this is no lot of pictures painted for auction purposes, but a series of works ranging from medium to first-class, and superior to any ever got together in one sale. The public after inspection will agree with us. Art matters are looking up in this city.

Notes.

The Alta of this morning has the following:

Our Washington special dispatch of last night, November 8th, says: "John McCullough completed a highly successful week's engagement in this city, last night, November 7th. During the week he appeared as King Lear, Romeo, Richelieu, Jack Cade, and Spartacus in 'The Gladiator,' winning commendations in each and every role. The audiences were large, appreciative and composed of the elite of the capital. The applause which greeted this eminent actor was hearty and unstinted. It is the opinion of all who saw and heard him that he has a great future before him. The Californians and other sojourners here who reside west of the Rocky Mountains, turned out en masse to honor their favorite actor. Mr. McCullough has purchased Mr. G. Holmes' drama, 'Two Lives.'"

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. KEEP A STIFF UPPER LIP.

There has something gone wrong
My brave boy, it appears,
For I see your proud struggle
To keep back the tears.
That is right. When you cannot
Give trouble the slip,
Then bear it, still keeping
"A stiff upper lip!"

Though you cannot escape
Disappointment and care,
The next best thing to do
Is to learn how to bear.
If when for life's prizes
You're running, you trip,
Get up—start again,
"Keep a stiff upper lip!"

Let your hands and your conscience
Be honest and clean;
Scorn to touch or to think of
The thing that is mean,
But hold on to the pure
And the right with firm grip,
And though hard be the task,
"Keep a stiff upper lip!"

Through childhood, through manhood,
Through life to the end,
Struggle bravely and stand
By your colors, my friend,
Only yield when you must,
Never "give up the ship,"
But fight on to the last
With "a stiff upper lip!"

Feminine Vagaries.

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget them all

The Detroit "hired" girl ring" now demand three beau-nights a week.

Although a woman's age is undeniably her own, she does not own it.

Any young miss would rather have her corsets tight than her "feller."

It is said that four women out of five stick the postage stamp on the left hand corner of the envelope.

The new woollen ball fringe trimmings will certainly be in high vogue, and velvet will also be in great demand.

"Susan, how in the world did you ever marry that brute?" "Oh, I don't know, Jane. I used to pick lint off his coat-collar, and fell in love with him.

An Unpleasant Dream.

A writer on on dreams in the Saturday Review, relates the following amusing experience of his own:

He thought he was an undertaker, and re-entered his workshop after a brief absence. "Oh, sir," his journeyman apprentice said to him, "that old gentleman you buried on Tuesday has been here again to say his coffin is a very bad fit, three inches too short. He says he never had such an uncomfortable coffin in his life." Here was something wrong with a vengeance; and the dreamer felt sincerely sorry, as a good tradesman should be, that one of his customers was so badly served."

Social Rank of Old Maids.

A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette says of old maids:

There was a time when old maids were looked upon with an eye of pity, if not contempt, and it was thought that marriage alone gave woman any claim for consideration. Of late years, however, there has been a change of opinion, in this respect, and unmarried women not only rank as high in general estimation as their married sisters but bid fair soon to surpass them. Nor is this to be wondered at. A very few years ago it was a very rare sight to see a married woman dancing at any ball given in the London season, whereas now, wives dance with greater pertinacity than their sisters or their daughters, and balls are given expressly for married women. The character of the British matron has in fact completely changed. Instead of being grave and decorous, she has become a hopping, skipping creature, delighting everyone by her grace and activity, but at the same time loosing in weight, moral as well as physical, what she gains in enjoyment. In the meantime the spinster is rapidly rising—scorning flirtation, she leaves vain pursuits to the wife and mother. The Emperor of China has set a good example in the encouragement of spinsters. According to a Shanghai Journal he has just decreed that special honors be paid to two old maids, one of whom lately died after a life of devotion to the memory of her betrothed, while the other who is still living, declined in her youthful days to make a tempting match, on the ground that she could not leave her home. Some few old ladies in England have an equal claim to recognition of their merits, and it would both elevate and appease them if they were in like manner rewarded.

Is Truth so Scarce.

The San Jose Mercury says: With a singularity of statement as remarkable as it is magnanimous and magnitudinous, FIGARO thus gives expression to a great truth: "The country newspaper is a great advertisement for the town in which it is published, and it is to the interest of every inhabitant to contribute to its support."

Reckoning up the Warriors.

"Which is Grant?" said a six-footed Texan, when the Presidential party was in the Indian Territory. The Chief Magistrate was pointed out to him. He then took a look at Sheridan, Augur, Babcock, and the rest, and exclaimed: "Gim me five dollars and I'll clean out the whole party."

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East;
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

which secures the combined advantages of higher finish, increased durability and diminished weight. This metal, after many years' trial under the Hoe and other Machines of the leading London and English and Scotch provincial DAILY PAPERS, has been found to be at least TWICE AS DURABLE as the ordinary type metal, and has gained it very universal preference. The great improvements they have introduced in their manufacture, enable them to supply Fonts of this superior metal without any increase of Price upon the ordinary quality.

The new type on which the FIGARO is printed is from the above foundry. Every article for a complete news or job printing office furnished at the lowest prices.

Mrs. Agnes Booth.

The Alameda Encinal of Saturday says:

Mrs. Agnes Booth—nee Aggie Perry commenced an engagement at the California Theatre last Monday evening. Always a favorite with the theatre-going public, who knew her as a handsome, vivacious, pains-taking actress when Maguire's Opera House was in its palmy days, we do not wonder that her reception last Monday night was an ovation. "Juliet" was her opening effort, in which FIGARO says she presented a very smooth impersonation, making her points quietly and effectively, and winning the favor of her audience. Mr. J. B. Booth accompanies his wife, but is under no engagement to play, we believe. He has hosts of friends in San Francisco, and elsewhere on this coast, and he can doubtless fill an engagement with them that will afford him more real gratification than would the bravos of a score of well-filled houses. "June" and his wife, we are informed, visited Alameda last Sunday, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Anderson.

The Great Race.

The great four mile race on Saturday next, between Thad Stevens, Katie Pease, Joe Daniels, Hubbard, Alpha, Henry, Hock Hocking and Harwood, for a purse of $25,000, is the absorbing topic of interest in the community. The magnitude of the purse—the largest Club purse ever run for in the United States, together with the known speed and bottom of the horses entered, have tended to almost eclipse all interest in the trotting contest that is to come off to-morrow. Thad Stevens sold as favorite in the pools last night, as his record entitles him to. A horse that ran the first and second mile heats, close to the winner, in 1:43 each; took the third heat in 1:43½, and won the fourth and fifth easily, has something more than being a California horse to back him in the pools. Both speed and staying qualities make him the favorite.

The Weekly Trinity Journal is disgusted. It says:

We are sick and tired of seeing the headings in the daily papers descriptive of "Weddings in High Life." First, we had Nellie Grant and Sartoris, then the Fitch-Sherman affair, and lastly, the Grant-Honore nuptials, or what some of the snobs of newspaperdom styled "the wedding of our Republican Prince and Princess." It would look well enough in an English Court Journal, but is disgusting when paraded in the daily press of this country to the exclusion of subjects of greater interest.

It really is too bad. In San Francisco the daily papers do this kind of thing just as much. Is Republicanism a failure? Recent elections seem to prove that it is. Democratic principles will soon prevail.

Couldn't be Particular.

One night recently, a Detroit policeman, passing a certain house about ten o'clock, saw a man drop from a window, and heard smothered cries inside. He seized the man for a burglar, but soon found that he had the owner of the house in his clutches. "Well," said the officer, "it looked suspicious to see you drop out of a window that way." "Well," replied the man, heaving a sigh, "when the old woman gets her dander up, I ain't particular about what road I take to get out of the house."

A Very Particular Man.

The editor of the San Jose Mercury says he noticed a prominent bachelor of that city, the last few evenings, carefully examining the initials and monograms on the ladies' underwear hung out to dry at the laundry near the depot. He says he wants a wife, but a woman who doesn't keep her own clothing mended, what show is there for a husband's shirt buttons?

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

As is customary with the Chronicle and other live papers, we give two publications to the favorable notices of the Press which FIGARO'S new dress has brought forth.

FIGARO has donned a new dress. It has always been the firm friend of the Red Men as well as the best dramatic journal on the Pacific Coast.—The Calumet.

FIGARO is without exception the best edited paper, of its kind, in the United States, and richly deserves the success with which it has met. We observe with pleasure that it has doned a new dress.—The Hebrew.

There is not in San Francisco at the present day, a more thoroughly satisfactory paper than the FIGARO, the only dramatic authority on the Pacific Coast. We notice that it has donned a new dress.—Hebrew Methodist.

The success of an honorable business rival is always pleasing to the honorable business editor, we therefore congratulate ourselves as well as FIGARO, really the best dramatic paper published in the United States, on having donned a new dress.—Odd Fellow's Messenger.

We think we may say without fear of contradiction, or at all events of positive refutation of what we may say that the dramatic sheet known as "THE FIGARO," which is the programme of the various places of amusement in this city, presents a more presentable appearance since it has presented itself in a new dress. At present it is quite presentable.—Morning Call.

FIGARO the theatrical sheet of this city, has donned a new dress.—Evening Bulletin.

What is it makes a paper? The characteristic of the Chronicle (we deny this ED FIGARO). Honesty, a regard for morality, enterprise and fearlessness. All these characterize the FIGARO. We are glad to chronicle its success. It has donned a new dress.—Morning Chronicle.

FIGARO, our dimunitive and not always conservative morning contemporary, appears this morning in high feather, having donned a new dress. We wish it success.—Evening Post.

FIGARO, a really respectable paper, and the only dramatic authority on the Pacific Coast, has donned a new dress. It looks well.—Evening Examiner.

A little dramatic paper in this city called FIGARO, which, though ostensibly devoted to dramatic news, still pays a good deal of attention to religious matters, and appears to have a good deal of the spirit of true religion in its editorials has donned a new dress. May its editor some day be clothed with the spotless robe of righteousness.—Christian Advocate.

Our much esteemed contemporary, FIGARO, has donned a new dress. (We wonder why all these people say this. Is there no originality in the San Francisco press? ED. FIGARO,) It is a paper worthy of support by all truly spiritually-minded people.—Catholic Guardian.

There isn't any business tact in FIGARO. It would rather be honest than rich, but we perceive it has made enough money to donn a new dress. It needed it.—News Letter.

Never did any one any harm. Decent and gentlemanly. FIGARO isn't such a bad sort of paper. It has some new type. We don't own our type.—Bohemian.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles. *

Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. Will He Never Die?

Some time ago McBride the King of Pain who was so well known in San Francisco was reported dead. The Sun, published in the town of Lake, Ill., says:—And now McBride, the great King of Pain, has departed, vamosed, and gone to St. Louis. Numerous creditors are weeping like Rachel of old, refusing to be comforted, because he is not—at his "offiis" any more. The Sun has a bill against him of fifty odd dollars—who will give us fifty cents for it? Don't all speak at once!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

California Theatre.

"La Femme de Feu," was produced at this theatre last night in excellent style. Mrs. Booth was magnificently costumed, and though she was not diabolically wicked enough to fully represent the character of Diane, in all its hideousness, she "played" wicked very charmingly. The phosphorescent sea scene was effective. Miss Carrie Wyatt played Marie very pleasingly, T. W. Keene did some strong acting in the role of Lucien D'Aubier and Joseph Wheelock did all he had to do as M. Lami well, Miss Ellie Wilton as Madame de Cabin was particularly clever, and Robert Pateman made quite a character of M. de Cabin. This play has afforded Mrs. Booth an opportunity of doing some tragic acting which has astonished the public who knew her formerly as a soubrette actress. "La Femme de Feu" is a very wicked play, but as exemplifying one phase of the feminine character it is attractive. It will be repeated to-night.

Opera House.

There was another crowded and fashionable audience at this popular place of amusement last night. The new bill was greeted with peals of laughter, and sent everybody home in good humor. It has become fashionable to go and see the minstrels and enjoy the humors of Emerson, Cotton, Rice and Arlington; listen to the vocalism of Russell, Davis and Harley, and see the wonderful Lottie and Frank in their dashing trapeze act. Harry Sefton and Miss Danvers, the latest attractions, were encored in their "Spider and Fly" dance last evening.

Maguire's New Theatre.

This theatre will reopen to-morrow evening when J. A. Herne's romantic military drama in four acts entitled "Charles O'Malley, the Irish Dragoon" will be produced for the first time in California, with the author in the character of Mickey Free, and Miss Sydney Cowell as Mary Brady. On Saturday evening Mr. Herne will take his benefit, and on Monday evening the famous play of "The Sphinx" will be produced with Miss Annette Ince as Blanche de Chelles, and Miss Kemble who will on this occasion make her first appearance in San Francisco as Bertha Savigny.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

A very fine programme is given here nightly by Ned Buckley, Johnny Tuers, Harry Devoy, Frank Mortimore, John Kelly, Hughey Robinson, Maggie Brewer, Fanny Webster, Carrie Willis, Kattie Zoe, Ida Fisk and others of the company.

Woodward's Gardens.

By request, Prof. Miller and Capt. Martin will repeat their excellent fencing exhibition on Saturday and Sunday. Frank Clifton, the only double pirouette bar performer, and that giant of strength, the Australian Hercules, will appear with the new troupe. The grand orchestral concert on Sunday, rain or shine.

Chiarini in Japan.

Chiarini gave a benefit to the General Hospital Yokohama, on the evening of October 8th, and The Japan Mail says: "There was not a vacant seat in the house, which contained a larger number of persons than ever came together before under one roof in Yokohama. Not only was the whole foreign settlement there, but a considerable number of Yedo residents were also present." The Mail commends the performances in the warmest manner, and bespeaks for the manager an equally large attendance at his forthcoming benefit. Astredo received a letter from Signor Chiarini by the last steamer, in which he states that if the steamship company does not reduce their terms of passage for his company to something like a reasonable figure, he will charter or buy a vessel when he gets ready to leave Japan, and embark for San Francisco in a sailing craft. He was going from Yokohama to Yedo, the capital of Japan, to play a farewell season there.

FREE PICTURE EXHIBITION.—A very large and choice selection of works of art will be on public view on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to 12 M, the hour of sale, at H. M. Newhall & Co's rooms on Sansome street. There are 140 paintings in the collection from the studios of Miss Roberts, Miss Rockwell, Messrs. Baumgras, Bloomer, R. J. Bush, Coulter, Deakin, Denny, Fletcher, Frost Hahn, Hart, Harrington, Thos. Hill, Edward Hill, Irwin, Jorgensen, Kippe, Lemon, Loomis, Marple, Narjot, Prosch, Ross, Shed, Straus, Sutherland and Welch. A private view has convinced us that this is no lot of pictures painted for auction purposes, but a series of works ranging from medium to first-class, and superior to any ever got together in one sale. The public after inspection will agree with us. Art matters are looking up in this city.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. [illegible] Montgomery street, up stairs. LOOKING BACK.

BY LOUIS CHANDLER MOULTON.

I may live long, but some old days
Of dear, deep joy akin to pain—
Some suns that set on woodland ways
Will never rise for me again:
By shining sea, and glad, green shore
That frolic waves ran home to kiss,
Some words I heard that nevermore
Will thrill me with their mystic bliss.

O love! still throbs your loving heart—
You have not crossed death's sullen tide.
A deeper deep holds us apart:
We were more near if you had died—
If you had died in those old days
When light was on the shining sea,
And all the fragrant woodland ways
Were paths of hope for you and me.

Dead leaves are on those woodland ways—
Cold are the lips that used to kiss:
'Twere idle to recall those days,
Or sigh for all that vanished bliss!
Do you still wear your old-time grace,
And charm new loves with ancient wiles?
Could I but watch your faithless face,
I'd know the meaning of your smiles.

—Galaxy, for June.

The Vagabond Sage.

An old man, of very active physiognomy answering to the name of Joseph Wilmot, was brought to the Police Court. His clothes looked as if they might have been bought second-hand in his youthful prime, for they had suffered more from the rubs of the world than the proprietor himself.

"What business?"

"None; I'm a traveler."

"A vagabond, perhaps."

"You are not far wrong. Travelers and vagabonds are about the same thing. The difference is, that the latter travel without money and the former without brains."

"Where have you traveled?"

"All over the continent."

"For what purpose?"

"Observation."

"What have you observed?"

"A little to commend, much to censure, and a great deal to laugh at."

"Humph! what do you like?"

"A handsome woman that will stay at home; an eloquent preacher who will preach short sermons; a good writer that will not write too much; and a fool that has sense enough to hold his tongue."

"What do you censure?"

"A man that marries a girl for her fine clothing; a youth who studies medicine while he has the use of his hands; and the people who elect a drunkard to office."

"What do you laugh at?"

"I laugh at a man who expects his position to command that respect which his personal qualifications and qualities do not merit."

He was dismissed.

An Art Patron.

An American, who had suddenly acquired great wealth by speculation, took it into his head to travel, and finding himself at length in Florence, made a visit to Mr. Powers' studio. Looking over the different statues, his eye rested on the Greek Slave. "What may you call that ar boy?" said he. "The Greek Slave," replied Mr. Powers. "And what may be the price of it?" continued the Yankee. "Three thousand dollars," was the answer, as the artist gazed a moment at the old specimen of humanity before him. "Three thousand dollars!" he exclaimed—"you don't say so, now. Why, I thought of buying something on you, but that's a notch above me. Why, statiary is riz, ain't it?"

Hard Cases.

The Boston courts have decided that if a woman lends money to her husband she can get it back. We know several wives down this way who would like to have the Boston courts inform them how it can be done. One woman says the only way she sees of being reimbursed is by cutting off her husband's nose and selling it to an agricultural fair for exhibition. It would show what high cultivation can effect.

It Didn't Work.

"Now, Charley, how can you treat me so? Only two months married, and yet you stay out till two in the morning."

"All your fault, my dear."

"My fault! How?"

"Why, you see, I met a friend at the club, and explained to him what a dear accomplished woman you were. The time slipped away," etc.

Of course he was forgiven. Next night—

"Why, Charley; it is three o'clock. You did not meet any one to praise me to again, did you?"

"No; but this time I waited, hoping some one would come, so that I could tell him; and that's what kept me so late."

Not forgiven!

Charlotte Cushman.

The Philadelphia All Day City Item says: On Monday, November 9th, Miss Cushman will begin her farewell engagement in this city, at the Academy of Music, when she will be supported by a first-rate company, which will accompany her from New York. The programme for the week will be as follows: Monday, "Henry VIII;" Tuesday, "Macbeth;" Wednesday, "Guy Mannering;" Thursday, "Macbeth;" Friday, "Guy Mannering;" Saturday matinee, "Guy Mannering;" Saturday evening, "Macbeth." The sale of tickets will begin on Monday next, and the demand will no doubt be large, as this is Miss Cushman's positively last appearance in Philadelphia.

Missing the Baby.

As the cars were moving away from Terre Haute the other day, a pretty young woman came from the ladies' car, and rushing into the smoking car, frantically appealed to everybody to stop the train. Catching sight of the conductor, she exclaimed piteously, "Mr. Conductor, do please stop the train; I've left my baby." The train was stopped, and the baby recovered, amid the hearty cheers of the people on the platform and the passengers; and while the young mother laughed and cried and hugged her little one, she tried to explain how the baby was such a new one that she hadn't got used to it.

Never to Late to Learn.

An English scholar just returned from China, says that shortly before he left that country he fell in with a gentleman aged 106, who was just about to go in for his last scholastic examination, with a view to obtaining the final diploma of scholarship.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

THE RACE.

The coming race on Saturday is the talk of the town. If the weather remains pleasant everybody is going to see it. There will probably be 25,000 or 30,000 persons on the ground on Saturday to witness the great contest. "Katie Pease" led in the pools last night, changing place with "Stevens." "Katie" is four years old. "Thad Stevens" is nine. "Katie" will carry 104 pounds in the race, while "Thad" will carry 114 pounds. "Katie" ran two miles at Buffalo, this season in 3:32½, tieing "True Blue's" time at Saratoga in 1873, the fastest on record. She also ran two and a half miles at the same season, over the same track, in 4:28½, which stands at the head of the record. "Katie" has also made very fast time in other races; notably so in the great four-mile race which "Fellowcraft" won in 7:19½ at Saratoga, in August last, in which "Katie" was a good third. "Thad Stevens" ran a close second to "Thornhill," at Sacramento, who took the first two mile heats each in 1:43, "Thad" winning the third heat in 1:43½. "Thad" won the second heat in the four-mile race at Oakland, last year, in 7:30. This time has never been beaten by four horses.

The four-mile record stands as follows:

"Fellowcraft"—108 lbs, Aug. 20th, 1874, at Saratoga—7:19½.

"Lexington"—against time, 103 lb, April 2d, 1855, at New Orleans—7:19¾.

"Lexington" beat "Lecompt," April 14th, 1855, at New Orleans—7:23¾.

"Lecompt" beat "Lexington," April 8th, 1854, at New Orleans—7:26.

"Idlewild"—117 lbs, June 25th, 1863, at Centreville, L. I. 7:26½.

"Thad Stevens"—115 lbs, (second heat) Oct. 18th, 1873, at Oakland, 7:30.

The next best four-mile heats stand recorded in 7:31½; 7:31¾; 7:32½; 7:33 and 7:33¼.

Old "Thad Stevens" stands way up in the four-mile record as to speed, and his well-known bottom will be sure to tell to advantage in the last heats of the race. To-morrow we shall publish the fastest time on record, from a half-mile dash up to four-mile heats, which will be found very useful for reference in these race-exciting times.

A Dramatic Career.

A New York paper says:

Mollie Wilson, the noted singer and dancer on the variety stage, has been playing an engagement at Archer's Theatre, in Troy, N. Y. She was once the petted daughter of a Philadelphia merchant. She married, when sixteen years old, a rich Chicago grain speculator. They quarreled, and parted. Then she turned her musical education to low account on the variety stage, playing in New York and elsewhere. Here she became despondent and self-murderous. On Saturday night she bought laudanum enough for her purpose, getting it in small quantities at various drug stores. In her room, at the Union Hotel, she swallowed the drug, and stretched herself out on the bed to die. A chambermaid discovered her, however, and doctors were sent for. She was far gone into stupor, and, after a stomach pump had partially restored her, she was still drowsy. The doctors said she must be kept awake somehow, and to keep her walking was the best plan. It was eight o'clock in the evening when the boarders in the hotel began to take turns, in pairs, at enforcing the treatment. With a man at each arm, she was walked up and down the halls. Past midnight, when all had got tired of the exercise, and Mollie was sleepier than ever, two stalwart negroes were hired. They took her into the street, and, half-carrying the slight creature, walked her briskly until morning. Then her feet were swollen and blistered, but the recovery from the drug and all desire of suicide was complete. She will go back to her home in Philadelphia, and retire from the stage.

Tricked by a Prima Donna.

When Madame Alboni was in Berlin, the director of the theatre "Della Scala," in Milan, resolved to engage her for a week or two. He accordingly set out post haste for Berlin. In a village near Innspruck some part of the carriage was broken, and our "impressario" was obliged, much against his will, to halt. In a very ill humor he set out for a promenade through the village, while the smith was repairing the carriage. Sauntering listlessly along, he suddenly heard singing and such singing! Never had he heard so sweet, so clear, so heavenly a voice. For a while transfixed with astonishment, he at length approached the house, and soon found himself in the presence of the songstress. She was a handsome Tyrolese maiden, of uncommon graces and dignity, and was entertaining three children, who were intently listening to her. He apologized for his intrusion, and begged to know if the fraulein understood music, or if what he had just heard was mere natural talent. She replied that she understood music. The director immediately drew from his pocket some sheets of "La Fille du Regiment," which he chanced to have with him, and requested her to sing a few passages. The Tyrolienne smiled and complied, with as much good nature as talent and ability. The director was enraptured.

"Mademoiselle!" he exclaimed, "I was on my way to Berlin to make an engagement with Madame Alboni, the great European celebrity; but I have found you, and will go no further. Alboni could suit me no better than you do. I offer you two thousand francs per night, and engage you for twelve representations."

"And how much had you offered Madame Alboni?"

"Madame Alboni! Oh, that is different; I should have given her at least five thousand francs. But, mademoiselle, bethink you, she has an unrivalled name and fame, while you are wholly unknown."

"Yet you told me a moment ago that Madame Alboni could suit you no better than I. I am then entitled to the same salary that you intended for her."

"That is impossible, mademoiselle. Will you accept three thousand francs?"

"No."

"Four thousand?"

"No."

"Then, mademoiselle, adieu. I can give no more; for as you are entirely unknown, I risk everything—you nothing. You might make your fortune and that of your family. You refuse to do so. Adieu."

The director reached Berlin and inquired for Madame Alboni. He was told that she was still in the country; where she had been spending the summer with her foster sister.

"Where?"

"In Tyrol."

"In Tyrol? At what place?"

"In N——, two hours' ride from Innspruck."

"I am ruined!"

Returning, he sought his peasant maiden.

"Madame!" he cried, "you are no longer unknown. You have played me a fine trick."

"I! Listen, Monsieur Director. You now know me; but as you were this morning so unwise as to resign me for the peasant maiden, I now decline entering into any engagement with you."

How Indeed!

Said one girl to another, this morning, as they were going to school, "We're too early; we'll have to loaf around until the doors are open." "Loaf around?" replied the other, "that's not a pretty expression." "Well, I'd like to know," said the reproved girl, "how I am to learn to talk proper, when I have three brothers harping about 'chin music,' 'cheese it,' 'whoop 'em up,' 'that is not your racket,' and all that sort of talk all the time."

A Little More Justice.

A Bristol, Conn., man was so angry because only a fine of $1 and costs was imposed on a fellow for grossly insulting his little daughter, the other day, that he pounded the miscreant's face to a jelly in the presence of the Justice. He then turned around and admitted that he had violated the law, and was ready to foot the bill. The Judge let him off for $1 and costs.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 c

A Forgiving Editor.

A Western exchange says: "A man in an adjoining town died recently who had taken his county paper twelve years without paying for it. Upon the day of his funeral the kind-hearted, forgiving editor called to see him for the last time, and stuffed a linen duster and a couple of palm leaf hats into the coffin. He was evidently preparing him for a warmer climate.

Peculiar Advantage.

"You haven't put on a clean shirt to-day," said a captain to his corporal; "you never saw me without a clean shirt on parade, when I was corporal." (He loved to speak of the immense difference between his present situation as captain, and that from which he had risen as corporal.) "True, your honor; but then your honor's mother was a washerwoman."

Opera House.

People never tire of going to see the Minstrels, for people never tire of laughing. In humor and variety the present company at the Opera House, excell any company of Minstrels in the United States; and over-crowded houses are the result. The new attractions, Harry Sefton and Miss Danvers, are working their way into public favor, while the daring trapeze acts of Miss Lottie and her brother Frank, are the nightly wonders of all who see them. Lottie, Frank and the younger sister, Katie, are to be the recipients of a benefit on Friday night, when an immense house may be expected.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night, the play of "Charles O'Mally, the Irish Dragoon," dramatized from Charles Lever's novel by Mr. DeVere, will be produced for the first time in San Francisco. J. A. Herne will appear in the character of Mickey Free, Miss Sydney Cowell as Mary, Thomas Whiffen as Charles O'Mally and J. S. Lindsay as Captain Power. As an Irish comedian Mr. Herne has few superiors on the stage. His impersonation of Mickey Free is sure to be very amusing.

California Theatre.

The powerful play of "Le Femme de Feu," will be repeated this evening, with Miss Agnes Booth in the character of Diane, and a generally strong cast. On Friday evening, Mrs. Booth will take her farewell benefit.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Quiet Lodgers," by Buckley, Devoy and Mortimer; "He would be an Actor," by Johnny Tuers, Mortimer and Devoy; "The Tobacconist's Daughter" by John Kelly, Maggie Brewer, Mortimer and Tuers, and the afterpiece of "Capt. Blowhard's Troubles," with a first part and interlude of songs, dances and ballads, make a very full bill at this house.

Platt's Hall.

Alfred Wilkie's Complimentary Benefit Concert will take place this evening at this hall. Miss Susan Galton, Mrs. E. B. Masten, Miss Lena Divine, Messrs. S. H. and Henry Marsh, Chas. W. Dungan, and others of acknowledged talent will appear on this occasion in an excellently arranged programme, which can be found on our first page. Mr. Wilkie is about to depart for Europe to pursue his professional studies there, and will bear with him the good wishes of all who know him here.

Woodward's Gardens.

By request, Prof. Miller and Capt. Martin will repeat their excellent fencing exhibition on Saturday and Sunday. Frank Clifton, the only double pirouette bar performer, and that giant of strength, the Australian Hercules, will appear with the new troupe. The grand orphestral concert on Sunday, rain or shine.

Notes.

The following professionols left on the Cyphrenes for Australia, yesterday: Miss Amy Stone, Miss Viola Pomeroy—with Howarth's Hibernica, E. D Davies the ventriloquist, and J. W. Wildat with his "Baby Elephant." Mr. Wilber will stop over a steamer and show in Honolulu. The others took passage direct for Sydney.

John Wilson, the Circus Manager, has written to say he is in St. Louis, and will soon start for California with professional novelties for his Palace Amphitheatre. Wilson's St. Louis season was not a profitable one. He opened opposite the mammoth Fair building. Plenty of people came to see the Fair, but they would not go to see the circus, so the season proved an unfortunate one.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

MY PIPE AND POUCH.

Thetoil and troubles of the day are o'er,
And all is still.
I do as oftentimes I've done before—
My pipe I fill.
The habit prompts—I willingly obey,
And, lighting up, serenely puff away,
Ignoring what tobacco haters say,
Who feign disgust;
Of course my pipe and I are only clay!
So smoke I must.

And pleasant thoughts are very pleasant, if
I smoke them thus;
And if unpleasant—well (another whiff)
Things might be worse.
And so philosophy I bring to bear,
As I sit cosy in my easy chair,
And watch the spirals curling in mid-air,
My nerves are soothed;
And all the "wrinkles" on the "brow of care"
Are nicely smoothed.

Oh yes! tobacco has a wondrous power,
And is a friend
Can cheer and soothe me in the saddest hour:
Thus, comfort lend.
When care weighs heavy on my vexed soul
And nasty waves of trouble o'er me roll—
Old pipe, I draw from out thy bowl
Narcotic peace!
Care, weariness, unrest, and pain—the whole
Subside or cease.

When, sometimes, friendship in the socket burns
With flickering light;
When love grows cold, or unto hatred turns,
As black as night;
When malice wounds, or foes my mind distress,
Thee, glowing, to my lips I fondly press,
O pipe! thy power I readily confess
To soothe "in need."
A friend so warm I call (I can't do less)
"A friend indeed."

The Modern Belle.

The Boston Courier says:—The young lady who has just returned from Europe can now be seen these charming afternoons meandering Fifth-avenue in the neighborhood of the Windsor. She has a very distinguished air and a very peculiar bonnet. Her dress, prudish maidens think, is unnecessarily short, and she steps out like a drum-major, possibly with the idea of exhibiting her new embroidered shoes—the very latest thing out. She wears a masculine-looking jacket, sacque, polonaise, or whatever it may be called, covered with jet beads and hanging things like measuring-worms. A vinaigrette of ancient design dangles at her side, and she carries a small umbrella under her arm, precisely after the style of "those horrid club fellows, you know." She wears a cuirass and jet collar; also the "werry whitest of white gloves." Her manner is superior, and her look still more so. We all admire her as we recollect that she is plain Mary Jane, and that her ma used to take in washing.

American Comedy.

Nym Crinkle says apropos of Bronson Howard's new play of "Moorcroft:"

Unless I am very much mistaken, the American comedy will sooner or later become a byword and a hissing. Hissing would have become it already. I am getting very tired of the American comedy myself. What I want to see is the original comedy, I don't care whether it be American or Australian. People have come to think that nationality will warrant incompetency. But it won't. An American play must be as good as an English or French play to merit our commendation, and when it is a good play nobody will stop to ask whether it sprang from Plymouth Rock or Fingal's Cave.

Immense Feet.

A Mississippi boatman, with immense feet, stopped at the public house on the levee, asked the porter for a bootjack to pull off his boots. The colored gentleman, after examining the stranger's feet, broke out as follows: "No jack big nuff for dem feets. Jackass couldn't pull 'em off, massa, widout fraktring de leg. Yuse better go back about three miles to de folks in de road, an' pull 'em off dar."

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest, cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Cothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Cothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jackson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 2-x

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

An American Dramatist.

The New York Courier publishes the following puff of Mr. Poole. It should have the effect of enabling him to sell a play:—The discussion between the dramatic critics and the theatrical managers relative to the existence of American plays is being conducted with considerable spirit. But singularly enough both sides have overlooked the claims of the prolific Poole, who has given birth to more plays than all the other native dramatic writers combined. A number of them are genuine, unadulterated, home-made articles, and among them we recall that remarkable production of his, where the scene was laid and the action took place in Sing Sing prison, with its hero attired in the zebra-striped uniform. No one can question its claim to being considered an American play—quite as ingenious in its construction and novel in its conception as many works of greater pretension. Poole is a rapid worker, and can turn out any sort of a play that may be required, at the very shortest possible notice.

A Saving Remedy.

In one of the Sunday Schools of Dubuque recently, when the lesson cards were passed around to the classes, the cards that came to the infant class had for their text, "What shall I do to be saved?" Selecting as the first member of the class to put the question to a bright little girl of only four Summers, who, also, by the way, had but just recovered from a severe attack of croup, the teacher put the question: "What must you do to be saved?" The little one preserved silence for a moment, as if in deep and perplexed thought, and then her face brightened; she had it. "I would take syrup and alum," was the reply, naively ventured. It brought down the class, teacher and all, and further discussion of the subject was postponed.

Too Particular.

A sign down the street reads: "Potatoes for sail hole sail and retail." One also on the city market reads: "Hickre nuts for sail." An intelligent old bore, who invades our sanctum occasionally to get the news in advance, read the above in manuscript, and said he did not see any joke in it, except that the fellow had spelt "nuts" with one t.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Miss Neilson.

Miss Neilson has lost her popularity, and the Eastern papers are pitching into her fiercely. The Philadelphia All Day City Item of the 3d says:

If ever a theatre was completely "under a cloud," it is the Arch. After offering Miss Neilson terms that prevented the theatre from making money, even if the audiences were of the largest kind, the enterprise is suddenly nipped in the bud by—what?

Report states that Miss Neilson had been suddenly attacked by a severe cold. Can this be so? If the cold was sufficiently severe to prevent her acting last night, she can hardly have recovered sufficiently to act this evening.

Was it not a glimpse of the Arch's box-sheet that made the unhappy Neilson so ill? There was a rumor last evening to the effect that the number of seats engaged by Miss Neilson's admirers was about thirty during the day. If this be true, we are not surprised at the late Mrs. Lee's illness.

Miss Neilson's engagement throughout the United States this time will be failures. What may be termed "the Neilson fever" is over, and the lady's separation from her husband is a severe blow to her business interests, for Mr. Lee was an indefatigable manager and left nothing done to make his wife's engagements brilliant successes. And by tact and indomitable perseverance he succeeded in doing so. Why, then, has Miss Neilson come to the United States without him? The satisfaction of having a husband must be great to any woman, but to an actress the satisfaction of having a first-class business manager must be greater.

We consider this confoundedly impertinent of the Item. It had better mind its own business.

American Geography.

It is well known that the English are wonderfully ignorant of American geography, but it is not often that they confess it. Lord Roseberg, in a recent speech in London, said that "he could walk up to a map in the dark and put his finger on the site of Cicero's villa, but if any one asked him where San Francisco was he should have to think twice." This remark recalls to the table-talk editor of the Gentleman's Magazine a similar remark of Mr. Cobden. "These men," said Cobden, speaking of English Embassadors, and of the necessity of turning them into commercial travelers —"these men know where the Ilissus is; but they know nothing of the Mississippi." (It was twenty years ago). "Yet the Mississippi could float all the navies of Europe upon its bosom, and it took me half a day to find the Ilissus when I was in Athens, and then I only found the bed of the river. Half a dozen washerwomen had dammed up the Ilissus to wash their clothes."

The Sun's Blessing.

Sleepless people—and there are many in America—should court the sun. The very worst soporific is laudanum, and the very best, sunshine. Therefore it is very plain that poor sleepers should pass as many hours in the sunshine, and as few in the shade as possible. Many women are martyrs, yet they do not know it. They shut the sunshine out of their houses and hearts, they wear veils, they carry parasols, and they do all possible to keep off the subtlest and yet most potent influence which is to give them strength and beauty and cheerfulness. Is it not time to change all this, and get color and roses in our pale cheeks, strength in our weak backs, and courage into our timid souls? The women of America are pale and delicate; they may be blooming and strong, and the sunlight will be a potent influence in their transformation. Will they not try it a year or two, and oblige thousands of admirers?

Peculiar Advantage.

"You haven't put on a clean shirt to-day," said a captain to his corporal; "you never saw me without a clean shirt on parade, when I was corporal." (He loved to speak of the immense difference between his present situation as captain, and that from which he had risen as corporal.) "True, your honor; but then your honor's mother was a washerwoman."

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. THE GREAT FOUR-MILE RACE.

SPEED RECORD.

Everybody is going to the great race on Saturday, and as everybody will want to talk "horse," "time," "record," etc., and will want to have the figures at his tongue's end, we have compiled the following speed record especially for the readers of FIGARO, that they may go on the track well posted in facts, dates and figures, and be able to bet their money understandingly. The table is up to date, and includes the many triumphs made on the turf at the various meetings this year:

FIGARO'S RUNNING RECORD

Giving the fastest time on record from a half-mile dash up to four-mile heats.

½ mile, Olitipa, by Leamington, 2 years, 97 pounds, time 47½, Saratoga, 1874.

¾ mile, Madge, by Australian, 3 years, 87 pounds, time 1:15¾, Saratoga, 1874.

1 mile, Alarm, by Eclipse, 3 years, 90 pounds, time 1:42¾, Saratoga, 1872.

1 mile, Springbok (second heat), by Australian, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 1:42¾, Utica, 1874.

1 mile, Gray Planet, by Planet, 5 years, 110 pounds, time 1:42½, Saratoga, 1874.

[Longfellow was said to have run the first mile in the cup race at Saratoga in 1871 in 1:40, and Tom Bowlin was timed a mile, at the Lexington Spring races in 1:41¾—not official.]

1¼ miles, Fadladeen, by War Dance, aged, 111 pounds, time 1:56, Saratoga, 1874.

1¼ miles, Picolo, by Concord, 3 years, 83 pounds, time 1:56, Saratoga, 1874.

1¼ miles, Frogtown, by Bonnie Scotland, 4 years, 104 pounds, time 2:09½, Lexington, 1872.

1½ miles, Tom Bowlin, by Lexington, 4 years, 104 pounds, time 2:34¾, Lexington, 1874.

1½ miles, Reform, by Leamington, 3 years, 83 pounds, time 3:05¾, Saratoga, 1874.

[Tom Bowlin was timed at the Lexington Spring races 1½ miles in 3:00¾—not official.]

2 miles, True Blue, by Lexington, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 3:32½, Saratoga, 1873.

2 miles, Katie Pease, by Planet, 4 years, 105 pounds, time 3:32½, Buffalo, 1874.

[Tom Bowlin was timed at the Lexington Spring races 2 miles in 3:27¾—not official.]

2½ miles, Harry Bassett, by Lexington, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 3:59, Saratoga, 1872.

2½ miles, Katie Pease, by Planet, 4 years, 105 pounds, time 4:28½, Buffalo, 1874.

2¾ miles, Hubbard, by Planet, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 4:58¾, Saratoga, 1873.

3 miles, Norfolk, by Lexington, 4 years, 100 pounds, time 5:27½, 5:29½, heats, California, 1865.

4 miles, Fellowcraft, by Australian, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 7:19½, Saratoga, 1874.

4 miles, Lexington, by Boston, 5 years, 103 pounds, time 7:19¾, New Orleans, 1855.

An Indignant Judge.

An Arkansas Judge had his law office close to a certain doctor's—in fact they were separated only by a plank partition with a door in it; the Judge was at his table, busy with briefs and bills in chancery. The doctor was writing a letter, and, pausing at the word enconomical, called out, "Judge, isn't e-q-u-i the way to spell equinomical?" "Yes, I think it is," said the Judge: "but here's Webster's dictionary; I can soon tell." He opens it with a slam; the Judge lays his specs on the table, and rising slowly, breaks forth: "Well, sir, I've always been a Daniel Webster man, and I voted for him for President; but any man that will write as big a dictionary as this, and not put as common a word as equinomical in it, can't have my vote for anything hereafter."

Strong Inducement.

The Decatur Republican is responsible for the following: A well-dressed man attracted considerable attention the other day, by sitting upon the edge of the sidewalk for some time, with his head between his hands, as if in deep meditation. At last a sympathetic stranger approached him, and said: "Friend, you seem to be in trouble; can I assist you in any way?" The man sprang to his feet, and taking off his hat, parted his hair carefully, and said: "Stranger, do you see that cut? My wife did it this morning with a flatiron, and then sent me down town to buy her a new bonnet. And I have been sitting here for an hour, trying to decide whether I will buy one or not; and blame me stranger, if I haven't about decided to get it."

A Conscientious Report.

"How many regular, steady boarders are there in your house?" asked a census-taker of a servant girl. "There's fifteen in all, sir; but not mor'n four of 'em is steady persons, sir."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 c

Charlotte Cushman in New York.

Miss Charlotte Cushman, who is playing "Meg Merriles" at Booth's Theatre, New York, has aroused Mr. William Winter, of the Tribune, into the following outburst:

"It is difficult to write calmly of a personage so grand and thrilling. It would be idle to write the worn words of description or the faded phrases of compliment. Miss Cushman acted Meg Merriles upon this occasion in such a way as to make us forget that we had seen it before, and feel only that we were now seeing it for the first time. In the glory of her youth she never was more powerful than when, upon this memorable night, she burst into the gloomy wood and stood transfigured before us—a living monument of frenzied suspense and regal misery. Her figure towered; her very soul seemed to dilate; years of suffering were written on her countenance; a world of love and of prophetic hope blazed from her eyes, every muscle of her body seemed hardened into marble, by the tremendous tension of excitement under which she leapt into the character; her presence was literally inspired, and, when she spoke, the nameless quality of anguish and pathos in her voice thrilled every chord of every heart in the vast assemblage that saw this wonder and heard this music. Genius in the art of acting can do no more than was ever done by Charlotte Cushman in that supreme moment. At the end of the scene the stormy applause of a multitude excited beyond all limits of discretion almost shook the building—till the actress came back upon the stage, to look one moment upon her triumph, and calm with her smile this raging sea of admiration. In a very long experience of such matters we have seen no effect parallel with this."

Proof Positive.

Two Irish laborers, a Romanist and a Protestant, held the following colloquy: 'An' d'ye mane to tell me that the Catholic is the only thrue religion?" "Faith an' I do. D'ye believe in the Episthles of the Aposthle Paul?" "Of coorse." "Arrah, thin, I have ye sure. D'ye mind the Episthle of Paul to the Romans? An' was ye iver after hearing of inny Episthle to the Protestants?"

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Bal Masque!

Reproducing the brightest element of the world renowned

EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Balls-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

Maguire's New Theatre.

It is a long time since so pleasant a bit of Irish comedy acting has been presented in this city as was enjoyed last night at this house. J. A. Herne's Mickey Free is one of the best Irish characterizations ever seen on any stage. In the scene where he appeared as Aunt McCann, at Sir George Dashwood's party, he made the audience fairly roar with laughter. The dramatization of "Charles O'Malley" is a very clever one, the scenes are effectively arranged, and the individuality of the characters is well preserved. Thomas Whiffen gave a gentlemanly and pleasant impersonation of the title role, Miss Sydney Cowell acted the part of Mary in a charmingly piquante manner, George Giddens was very amusing as the rattle-brained Frank Weber, J. S. Lindsay as Capt. Power was good, Miss Blanche Galton played the role of Lucy Dashwood very pleasantly, and the play, as a whole, was quite a success. There is genuine fun in Herne's Mickey Free, and none should miss the present opportunity of witnessing real Irish comedy. "Charles O'Malley" will be played every evening this week. On Saturday J. A. Herne will take his benefit.

California Theatre.

"La Femme de Feu," with Mrs. Agnes Booth as Diane Berard, has proved quite popular. It will be played this evening for the last time. To-morrow night Mrs. Booth will take her farewell benefit and appear as Constance in Shakspeare's play of "King John;" for this occasion J. B. Booth will make his first appearance in many years and play the title role. Joseph Wheelock will undertake the role of Falconbridge.

Opera House.

Billy Emerson and his band of merry men appear in a great programme of acts, songs and specialties. Harry Sefton and Miss Jessie Danvers in "The Spider and the Fly," and Lottie and Frank in their wonderful act entitled "The Leap for Life." To-morrow evening Lottie, Frank, and Katie will take their farewell benefit. No gymnasts have ever achieved equal popularity here, and they will certainly have, as they richly deserve, a splendid house.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Frank Mortimore, Harry Devoy and John Kelly in "Gally the Troubadour," John Kelly, Hughey Robinson and Frank Mortimore in "Struck Oil," Mlle. Blanche in ballads, Hughey Robinson in local hits, and many other attractive performances are presented at this house.

Platt's Hall.

There was a capital attendance at this hall last night when Alfred Wilkie, the favorite tenor was the recipient of a complimentary benefit, prior to his departure for Europe. An excellent programme was performed. The beneficiary was in splendid voice, and sang "The MacGregor's Gathering," "Beware," and other songs in a style which drew great applause. Miss Susan Galton delighted the audience with "The Skylark," and "Tripping Through the Meadow," S. H. Marsh and Henry Marsh played a harp and piano duet, Miss Lena Devine sang a romanza by Wallace, and altogether a most satisfactory programme was given. Mr. Wilkie took leave of the public in a few well chosen sentences, expressing the hope that in the course of a couple of years he would again appear before them.

Woodward's Gardens.

By request, Prof. Miller and Capt. Martin will repeat their excellent fencing exhibition on Saturday and Sunday. Frank Clifton, the only double pirouette bar performer, and that giant of strength, the Australian Hercules, will appear with the new troupe. The grand orchestral concert on Sunday, rain or shine.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

THE EVERY-DAY DARLING.

She is neither a beauty nor genius,
And no one would call her wise;
In a crowd of other women
She would draw no stranger's eyes:
Even we who love her are puzzled
To say where her preciousness lies;
She is just an every-day darling;
In that her preciousness lies.

She is sorry when others are sorry,
So sweetly, one likes to be sad;
And if people around her are merry,
She is almost gladder than glad.
Her sympathy is the swiftest,
The truest a heart ever had;
She is just an every-day darling,
The dearest that hearts ever had.

Her hands are so white and little
It seems as if it were wrong
They should ever work for a moment,
And yet they are quick and strong;
If any dear one needs helping,
She will work the whole day long,
The precious every-day darling,
Every day and all day long.

She is loyal as knights were loyal,
In the days when no knight lied,
And for sake of love or of honor,
If it need be, a true knight died;
But she dreams not she is braver
Than the woman by her side,
This precious every-day darling,
Who makes sunshine at our side.

Ah, envy her, Beauty and Genius,
And women the world calls wise;
The utmost of all your triumphs
Would be empty in her eyes.
To love and be loved is her kingdom;
In this her happiness lies.
God bless her, the every-day darling!
In this her preciousness lies.

Feminine Vagaries.

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget them all.

Why was Ruth very rude to Boaz? Because she pulled his ears and trod on his corn.

A woman's vanity is not of the sort that begets patriotism. The women of Berlin still follow the Paris fashions.

Miss Cook, of Kentucky, has got a bird for her hat. She shot a genuine bald eagle with an old army pistol last week.

Twenty-one girls of Kenosha, Wisconsin, have "Resolved, that if the young men won't come and see us, we will go and see them."

It isn't considered good manners anywhere, except in Chicago, for a lady to sit with her feet on a chair and spit out of a third-story window.

Garters with monogram clasps are now all the fashion with pretty girls. The style is said to be convenient and elegant, and we hope to see more of it.

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a man's wife draw the bed-clothes over her head and declare that she won't build a fire if she dies for it.

When a lady goes into a Chicago shoe store and asks for gaiters, the clerk reaches out for the box labelled "7s" and then goes up until he secures her fit.

Our friend Spriggins has been subjected to severe social criticism for beating his wife—till it was explained that he was in the habit of beating her in euchre.

A lady wants to know what is the meaning of "ante" and "pass the buck?" Her matrimonial companion uses it in his dreams, and she is afraid it indicates typhoid fever.

An Illinois girl drugged her father and mother the other night when she expected her lover, and it was forty-eight hours before the doctor could bring the old folks out of it.

The season is fast approaching when the married man pulls his head out from under the bed-clothes in the morning and says: "Come, Mariar, it's time you got up and built the fire."

Girls, as you value your lives, don't get up and get breakfast in the mornings. A young lady attempted it one day last week, and was burned to death. Show this to your mammas.

A Cincinnati young man sent a note to his girl, asking at what time he should call, and received in return the following brief billet-doux:—

DEER JON—Comet afpastate. MARY.

A very pretty garment for house wear is the new fashioned French dress apron. It is made of any colored silk with a ruffle (kilt plaited) of Swiss muslin, about five or six inches wide. The ends form a sash behind.

Worries.

By worries we mean evils in anticipation; those fears, vexations, irritations and dangers which haunt the mind, unsettled and disturbed, out of its ordinary routine, though it is so far at ease in present circumstances, and has so little ground in positive fact for its forebodings, that it has to call in fancy to swell vague apprehension into shape and consistency. Misfortune is not a worry, nor yet is a well-grounded anxiety. Worries are possibly impending troubles and annoyances magnified into such large dimensions as not seldom to cause more uneasiness as mere creatures of the imagination than they would do if converted into fact. We know while we brood over them and dilate upon them that we ought to combat them, that we are exaggerating trifles into things of importance; we are conscious of a fevered, fretful fancy, and that our fears are of the nature of phantoms. The real troubles of life, experience tells us, are facts equally patent in all times of the day, in all weathers, in every state of health. We may feel them more at one time that at another, but they never lose their character to the understanding. We are aware, on the contrary, that worry expands and dwindles. Awake at midnight, it is a terror; at noonday a bugbear to be smiled at, set aside, overcome, but none the less is its sway powerful at its own time and hour.

An Infallible Test.

The new play by MM. Meilhac and Halevy at the Varieties, "La Ingenue," is comparatively a failure, though Celine Chaumont and Dupuis are delightful therein, as usual. Too cynical in tone, and resembling too closely "The Petite Marquise," by the same authors, it has been but coldly received, and will probably not enjoy a very protracted existence. One speech therein is rather clever. The hero of the piece, a naughty young nobleman, has disguised himself as a tutor, in order to gain access to the house of a married lady with whom he is in love; whereupon the ingenue begins to ask him puzzling questions, and finally demands "What king of France succeeded Louis XII.?" "Louis XIII., of course," answers the disguised gentleman. "Ah!" she cries, "I have caught you now. You are no tutor; you must be a society man; you are so ignorant!"

A Nice Sort of Woman.

An exchange says: "The Princess of Wales is wonderfully popular in England, and few are those who object to her endearing title, "England's Darling." Her beauty, to eyes that see her unobstructed by any glamour of intense royalty, is really not extreme, and seems past its most brilliant prime. It is the sweet graciousness of her manner that endears her to the popular heart; the gentleness of nature that causes her to bow with pleasant smiles to gazing crowds.

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Ackerman's.

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. A Singular Story.

The Stockton Leader is responsible for the following:

The history of Charles Vivian, who has achieved a celebrity coextensive to the screed "Ten Thousand Miles Away"—of which he is the author, we have never seen in print. Two years since, an eccentric and wealthy citizen of San Francisco conceived a violent admiration of the performance of this talented artist, and each night during the brilliant and lucrative engagement of the latter, Mr. X as we shall call him, was a constant attendant. The engagement was renewed, and still Mr. X haunted the dress circle. This ended, Mr. X was anxious about Vivian's future arrangements. These, as the artist had decided, included a trip to Australia, thence to China, and ultimately to London. Mr. X would not consent to this. His own vast property interests required his presence in this State at least. He demanded Vivian's terms for a three-year engagement in California. Mr. Vivian named a high figure, to which Mr. X immediately assented, and Vivian found his anticipations of travel suddenly cut short. At each performance Mr. X is seen as the most pleased of the auditory, whether the "house" is large or small is a matter of little concern to him—for he is abundantly wealthy—but so far the engagement has been a profitable business venture. He always sits on the right of the hall, on the end seat of the first circle. He may be easily recognized from the peculiarity of his laugh, which is a shrill treble—an unexpected intonation from the mouth of a hearty well-preserved man of about forty-five, with a broad expansive chest, and lungs like a pair of blacksmith's bellows, but it is in keeping with the acts of a man who would engage a whole show expressly to hear without remission one favorite artist.

An Immense Work.

The interior papers are publishing with a trust in its truthfulness which is perfectly delightful, the following paragraph from a religious paper:

In 1835, the Fiji Islands contained a population of 200,000 cannibals; now 100,000 attend church, regularly, on the Sabbath; 22,223 have become church members; 643 native preachers have been ordained. There are 1,524 day schools, attended by 57,057 pupils; and the various crimes and savage barbarities have entirely disappeared. This is the result of the labors of a few men and women, who went there to conquer "not by power nor by might, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

This is a very cheerful showing. We may be allowed to state, however, that in addition to the institutions above-named, there are now four thousand whiskey saloons, 22,750 habitual drunkards, five hundred divorces annually, and two thousand cases of infanticide. The few respectable inhabitants who remain adhere to the custom of cannibalism.

He Isn't Proud.

Though he went marching through Georgia, he isn't proud. Somebody says:

Let me tell what I saw not long ago at a circus. Sitting in front of us was General Sherman, and with him quite a number of children, whom he had gathered from the "by-ways and hedges." We saw him look down under the seat, and then haul out a dirty, little ragged darkey, who had crept in under the tent, and seat him at his feet, where, by crowding, was made a place for the little rascal. "Now," said the General, "sit there my boy, and see everything. Bless me! many a time have I done just the same thing, and many a thrashing have I had."

He seemed so like a child; everything pleased him, and we wondered where was the vanity of which people talked so loudly.

It would have been more decent of General Sherman if, instead of allowing the little dirty ragged darkey to steal admission to the show, he had given him four bits, and told him to go round and give it to the doorkeeper. Honesty isn't Sherman's strong suit.

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 q

THE RACE TO-MORROW.

Everything looks most favorable for the great race to-morrow. The weather at present writing is all that could be wished for, and all the horses are in good condition for the great contest. The Managers of the Pacific Jockey Club, have very wisely arranged to have the race come off on the outer or Trotting Track, the Running Track being rather narrow for so large a field to start abreast on. The Trotting Track has been put in proper condition to run on, and all it needed was the present dry sunny weather to insure it being actually in perfect order for the contest.

If it is a fair day to-morrow, very fast time may be looked for. Thousands have come to the city to see the great race, and the excitement is at fever heat. It is estimated that 30,000 people will assemble on the track to-morrow. The Fourth Artillery Band will furnish the music on the grounds and every attention will be give to the comfort of the public.

Being unable to supply the demand for our racing speed tables which appeared in Wednesday's and Thursday's FIGARO, we republish them below:

These tables are up to date, and include the many triumphs made on the turf at the various meetings this year:

FIGARO'S RUNNING RECORD

Giving the fastest time on record from a half-mile dash up to four-mile heats.

½ mile, Olitipa, by Leamington, 2 years, 97 pounds, time 47¾, Saratoga, 1874.

¾ mile, Madge, by Australian, 3 years, 87 pounds, time 1:15¾, Saratoga, 1874.

1 mile, Alarm, by Eclipse, 3 years, 90 pounds, time 1:42¾, Saratoga, 1872.

1 mile, Springbok (second heat), by Australian, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 1:42½, Utica, 1874.

1 mile, Gray Planet, by Planet, 5 years, 110 pounds, time 1:42½, Saratoga, 1874.

[Longfellow was said to have run the first mile in the cup race at Saratoga in 1871 in 1:40, and Tom Bowlin was timed a mile, at the Lexington Spring races in 1:41½—not official.]

1¼ miles, Fadladeen, by War Dance, aged, 111 pounds, time 1:56, Saratoga, 1874.

1½ miles, Picolo, by Concord, 3 years, 83 pounds, time 1:56, Saratoga, 1874.

1¾ miles, Frogtown, by Bonnie Scotland, 4 years, 104 pounds, time 2:09¼, Lexington, 1874.

1¼ miles, Tom Bowlin, by Lexington, 4 years, 104 pounds, time 2:34¾, Lexington, 1874.

1¼ miles, Reform, by Leamington, 3 years, 83 pounds, time 3:05¾, Saratoga, 1874.

[Tom Bowlin was timed at the Lexington Spring races 1¾ miles in 3:00¾—not official.]

2 miles, True Blue, by Lexington, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 3:32½, Saratoga, 1873.

2 miles, Katie Pease, by Planet, 4 years, 105 pounds, time 3:32½, Buffalo, 1874.

[Tom Bowlin was timed at the Lexington Spring races 2 miles in 3:27¾—not official.]

2¼ miles, Harry Bassett, by Lexington, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 3:59, Saratoga, 1872.

2½ miles, Katie Pease, by Planet, 4 years, 105 pounds, time 4:28½, Buffalo, 1874.

2¾ miles, Hubbard, by Planet, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 4:58¾, Saratoga, 1873.

3 miles, Norfolk, by Lexington, 4 years, 100 pounds, time 5:27½, 5:29½, heats, California, 1865.

4 miles, Fellowcraft, by Australian, 4 years, 108 pounds, time 7:19½, Saratoga, 1874.

4 miles, Lexington, by Boston, 5 years, 103 pounds, time 7:19¾, New Orleans, 1855.

KATIE PEASE AND THAD STEVENS.

"Katie" is four years old. "Thad Stevens' is nine. "Katie" will carry 101 pounds in the race, while "Thad" will carry 114 pounds. "Katie" ran two miles at Buffalo, this season in 3:32½, tieing "True Blue's" time at Saratoga in 1873, the fastest on record. She also ran two and a half miles at the same season, over the same track, in 4:28½, which stands at the head of the record. "Katie" has also made very fast time in other races; notably so in the great four-mile race which "Fellowcraft" won in 7:19½ at Saratoga, in August last, in which "Katie" was a good third. "Thad Stevens" ran a close second to "Thornhill," at Sacramento, who took the first two mile heats each in 1:43, "Thad" winning the third heat in 1:43½. "Thad" won the second heat in the four-mile race at Oakland, last year, in 7:30. This time has never been beaten but by four horses.

THE SIX FASTEST FOUR-MILE HEATS.

The four-mile record stands as follows:

"Fellowcraft"—108 lbs, Aug. 20th, 1874, at Saratoga—7:19½.

"Lexington"—against time, 103 lb, April 2d, 1855, at New Orleans—7:19¾.

"Lexington" beat "Lecompt," April 14th, 1855, at New Orleans—7:23¾.

"Lecompt" beat "Lexington," April 8th, 1854, at New Orleans 7:26.

"Idlewild"—117 lbs, June 25th, 1863, at Centreville, L. I. 7:26¼.

"Thad Stevens"—115 lbs, (second heat) Oct. 18th, 1873, at Oakland, 7:30.

The next best four-mile heats stand recorded in 7:31½; 7:31¾; 7:32½; 7:33 and 7:33½.

Old "Thad Stevens" stands way up in the four-mile record as to speed, and his well-known bottom will be sure to tell to advantage in the last heats of the race.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Burkhardt's 540 Washington street.

French calf boots made to order for $8; box toed gaiters made to order for $6; oxford tie shoes made to order for $6; boys' boots made to order for $3; and large assortment of boots and shoes, all of Burkhardt's own make, at equally low sales, at 540 Washington street. 9-B

Blankets and Flannels

Well washed and not spoiled, at the What Cheer Laundry.

Lady Macbeth.

I maintain, says Clara Morris, that Lady Macbeth was slight, slender, and of a blonde type. I know this is not the accepted theory, but it seems to me very plausible. I do not believe that she coerced her husband otherwise than with that subtle and almost intangible persuasion which is essentially womanly, and which is indicated in some chance expression or look rather than animating every tone and word of converse. Take, for instance, nine out of every ten flirts we see about us. No one imagines it is because of the man himself that they exercise their arts. No; it is to hear some one say, "She is irresistible—no man can help succumbing to her attractions." Lady Macbeth found that she could completely rule in this persuasive, womanly way her great soldier of a husband, and it made her drunk! She thirsted for more extended power. Her husband first catches sight of what she would have him do in that simple question apropos, of Duncan, "And when goes hence?"—in which by a look but with no mouthing to point the significance of her speech, she points the bent of her ambition. She longs to see him seated on the throne, and to be seated by his side. The conventional Lady Macbeth swoops down upon her lord, and leads him off as though she were the bigger man of the two. And no Lady Macbeth that I have yet seen has rendered justice to the sleep-walking scene. You know that a somnambulist has absolutely no fear, but Lady Macbeth is always represented as groping her way with difficulty about the stage. This is a very little thing, but I always look out for the small matters, and the large ones come of themselves.

Appreciative.

The Watsonville Pajaronian says:—The FIGARO, the "Journal of Amusements," of San Francisco, comes to us this week in an entire new dress, which improves its appearance very much. The editor of the FIGARO is well adapted for that position, and besides getting up a good paper, really produces some gems of thought. The FIGARO is always readable, and we are glad to have it as an exchange.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419. opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

California Theatre.

To-night when Mrs. Agnes Booth will take her farewell benefit, and make her last appearance but two, the play of "King John" will be presented with the beneficiary as Constance, J. B. Booth as King John, Joseph Wheelock as Faulconbridge, Mrs. Sophie Edwin as Queen Elinor, T. W. Keene, as Earl of Salisbury, Henry Edwards as Hubert, Miss Nellie Deaves as Prince Arthur, and a generally satisfactory company. At the matinee to-morrow and again in the evening, the original four-act play entitled "Elene," written expressly for Mrs. Agnes Booth by Adolphe Belot, will be presented.

Opera House.

To-night, for the benefit of Lottie, Katie and Frank, an excellent entertainment will be presented, and the beneficiaries will appear in their great performance on the triple trapeze. Billy Emerson, Billy Rice, Billy Arlington, and all the sable sons of Momus will take part in the entertainment, and Harry Sefton and Miss Jessie Danvers will present their divertisements entitled "The Spider and the Fly." The bill which has proved so popular during the week will be repeated at the matinee to-morrow.

Haguire's New Theatre.

The very successful play of "Charles O'Malley," in which J. A. Herne has made such a hit in the character of Mickey Free, will be repeated this evening and also at the matinee to-morrow. To-morrow evening Mr. Herne, who, both as stage manager and actor, has made his mark at this house, will take a benefit. "Charles O'Malley" will be played on this occasion also.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuers appears nightly at this house in some of his most lively specialties, and a rare programme of songs, acts and dances is presented. The bill for to-night is published in full on our first page.

Horticultural Hall.

On Thanksgiving night, the 26th instant, a grand bal masque will be given at the above hall under the experienced management of S. Genese. It is intended that, while the conduct of this affair shall be in every way unexceptionable, that it shall be far more lively than anything of the kind ever before given here, and shall present many of the most attractive features of the European Bals-d'Opera. It will be a truly cosmopolitan affair, the Committee of Arrangements being chosen from our best American, French, English, Spanish, Italian, German and other citizens. The music for the occasion will be new, and choral quadrilles, the latest feature of the Paris opera balls will be produced for the first time here. The theatrical profession will take an active part in this novel carnival, and it is confidently anticipated that it will be the most brilliant thing of the kind ever known on this coast.

Woodward's Gardens.

By request, Prof. Miller and Capt. Martin will repeat their excellent fencing exhibition on Saturday and Sunday. Frank Clifton, the only do[illegible] ette bar performer, and that gi[illegible] Australian Hercules [illegible] of strength, the The grand [illegible] appear with the new troupe. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

WITH ALL YOUR MIGHT.

If you've any task to do,
Let me whisper, friend to you,
Do it.

If you've anything to say,
True and needed, yea or nay,
Say it.

If you've anything to love,
As a blessing from above,
Love it.

If you've anything to give,
That another's joy may live,
Give it.

If you know what torch to light,
Guiding others through the night,
Light it.

If you've any debt to pay,
Rest you neither night nor day,
Pay it.

If you've any joy to hold
Next your heart, lest it grow cold,
Hold it.

If you've any grief to meet
At the loving Father's feet,
Meet it.

If you're given light to see
What a child of God should be,
See it.

Whether life be bright or drear,
There's a message sweet or clear
Whispered down to every ear;
Hear it.

Punkin Pi.

Josh Billings says: Punkin Pi iz the saas ov Nu England. They are vittles and drink, they are joy on the haff-shell, they are glory nuff for one day, and are good or cold warmed up. I would like to be a boy again, just for sixty minnetts, and eat myself phull ov the blessid old mixtur. Enny man who don't love punkin pi, wants watching cluss, for he means to do something mean the fust good chance he kan get. Giv me all the punkin pi I could eat, when I waz a boy, and i didn't kare whether Sunday Skool kept that day or not. And now that I have grown up to manhood, and have run for the legislature once, and only got beat 856 votes, and am thoroly married, thare ain't nothing i hanker for wuss, and kan bury quicker, than two-thirds of a good old-fashioned punkin pi, an inch and a halff thik, and well smelt up with ginger and nutmeg. Punkin pi iz the oldest Amerikan beverage i kno ov, and ought to go down to posterity with the trade mark ov our grandmothers on it; but i am afraid it won't, for it iz tuff even now to find one that tastes in the mouth at all az they did forty years ago.

Spanish Proverbs.

Love, a horse, and money, carry a man through this world. Three things kill a man: a hot sun, supper and trouble. To shave an ass is a waste of lather. If the gossip is not in her own house, she is in somebody else's. Don't speak ill of the year till it is over. The mother-in-law forgets that she was once a daughter-in-law. Men are as grateful for kind deeds as the sea is when you fling into it a cup of water.

True Politeness.

An old French countess of the most exquisite politeness was about to breathe her last, when she received a call from an acquaintance ignorant of her mortal illness. The answer sent down from the chamber of the departing sufferer was memorably unique: "The Countess de Rouen sends her compliments to Madame de Calais, but begs to be excused, as she is engaged in dying."

Mind Over Matter.

The Austin (Nev.) Reveille illustrates it thusly: To show the power of mind over matter no stronger argument is needed than that we heard advanced by a boy, this morning. Said he to another boy: "You needn't be puttin' on no airs if yer is got a boughten sled; I'm in the third reader and you can't spell cat without spellin' of it with a k."

Small Ideas.

A veteran observer thinks that people of small ideas and weak conceptions are the kind of folks who don't begin, but always "commence." They don't live, but "reside." They don't go to bed, but mysteriously "retire." They don't eat and drink, but "partake of refreshments." They are never sick, but "extremely indisposed." And instead of dying at last, they "decease."

Great Bargains in Clothing.

A Joking Murderer.

Here is an interview between a visitor at the Montana Territorial Penitentiary and a convict named Collins, who is serving out a 99 years' sentence for the murder of an inoffensive Chinaman. The Governor talks of pardoning Collins out and putting him on the platform with Max Adeler. But the interview:

Visitor—(After having asked all the other convicts regarding misdeeds and punishment inflicted)—"Well, Collins, what are you in for?"

Collins—"Because I can't get out."

Visitor—"I mean of what were you convicted?"

Collins—"Frying ice!"

Visitor—"Don't the Warden ever take your irons off?"

Collins—"No; he's afraid I'll take cold if he does."

Visitor—"How long were you sentenced for?"

Collins—"Ninety-nine days, only."

Visitor (sympathetically)—"Ah! ninety-nine days! "Why, your sentence will soon expire, and you'll be free again, won't you!"

Collins—"Well, not so very soon, either."

Visitor—"Why, how's that? Ninety-nine days isn't long!"

Collins (slightly closing left optic)—"Well you see, boss—They're all Christmas days!"

Exit visitor, with a bug in his ear.

Rather Unfortunate.

English papers are telling the following story of the venerable Arch-Deacon Thorpe, of Bristol. The reverend gentleman is very corpulent, and in preaching a sermon in the old-fashioned church, it is said that he had to be hoisted into the pulpit over the side before the services began, the door being too narrow to admit him. Curiously enough his sermon was on "The Importance of a Right Introduction in the Christian Ministry," and he founded his discourse on the parable in which it is declared that "he that entereth in at the door is the shepherd of the sheep, while he that climbeth up any other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

Pride Must Have a Fall.

Young man, you feel a superiority to the whole human race, as you stand at the altar with your fair young bride. You would not change places with the president. Yet a few short years, a few whiskings of broom-handles, an untimely stoppage or two of wafted flat-irons, and your weary body will rest under the swaying willow, while some young gallant will bring your late afflicted partner out to the cemetery on calm Sabbath evenings and whisper love in her ear, as together they strew peanut shells over your grave. "Oh why should the spirit of mortal be proud."

A Happy Thought.

A woman in Cedar Rapids, while suffering corporal discipline at the hands of her horrid husband, hit upon a notable expedient of rescue and relief. She simply cried, "Fire! fire!" in terms at once s[illegible] shrill and clear. Straightway came the w[illegible] fire department, steamers and all. [illegible] isn't stated that the husband was taken out and played upon, but we hope he was.

A woman's vanity is not of the sort that begets patriotism. The women of Berlin still follow the Paris fashions.

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Merrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitute. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

This metal, after many years' trial under the Hoe and other Machines of the leading London and English and Scotch provincial DAILY PAPERS, has been found to be at least TWICE AS DURABLE as the ordinary type metal, and has gained it very universal preference. LOOK OUT!

We have tried to get the reporters of the daily press to talk horse understandingly. We have prepared and published speed tables and four-mile heat records, which they all copy without giving FIGARO credit, but pay no heed to. In the race article of the Call yesterday, the observant reader must have noted how tenderly and how thankfully the reporter sang his little song of praise to the restaurant keeper who gives him his daily morning hash. This is all correct, and is probably his due. But he must not steal our racing dates, and murder as he steals, for we won't stand it. This is the way he "talks horse," quoting from our tables:

In the Spring of last year he, (Thad Stevens) ran a three-in-five race, half-mile heats, the time of which was 43, 43, 43½, 46½ and 45. The last three heats were won by Thad, beating Thornhill, Nell Flaherty, Queen and Twenty Cents.

In the first place no such race was ever run. The thing is impossible. The fastest time ever made in a half-mile race was made by Olitipa, 47¾ seconds, at Saratoga, last August. The race that Thad Stevens won was mile heats, and the time was 1:43; 1:43; 1:43½; 1:46½ and 1,45. We'll bet twenty cents that that reporter don't live long if he don't stop this business. We don't propose to be trans-figured in that way many times more.

The Lick Property.

The sale of the Lick property will commence to-morrow at 12 o'clock at Platt's Hall. It will begin with the lot on the northwest corner of Montgomery and Sutter street with the improvements thereon, known as the Lick House. There may be a sharp competition for this in spite of its immense value, as a good many companies and individual capitalists covet it. The property in which people of smaller means are most interested, are those very desirable building lots in the northern portion of the city, which will be sold in subdivisions to suit purchasers. Maurice Dore & Co., magnificent as their transactions in real estate have been, have never had a sale of such magnitude on their hands before. We think that such an event as this, particularly when the objects to which the proceeds of the sale are to be devoted, are taken into consideration, should excite as much interest in the community as a $25,000 horse race. The foundation of many a fortune may be laid to-morrow.

Fireside Amusements.

The rainy season being about here, we publish the following pleasing suggestions of amusements for Winter evenings:

A juggler having swallowed a sabre was brought into the Charity Hospital in Paris. Adhesive inflammation ensued, resulting in an abscess. The sabre became divided into two parts, and the extraction was performed in two operations. A sailor, for half a pint of brandy, swallowed a knife, which caused his death in three days. The necropsy revealed chronic ulcerous gastritis. The knife was found, but the horn handle had been completely digested, and there only remained vestiges of the five or six blades it had contained. Another case was that of an hysterical woman, who had swallowed a packet of needles, of which three hundred and ninety-six issued from her breast, arms, chest, etc.

The packet of needles trick is the most pleasing of all.

A Genial Notice.

The Reno Daily Crescent of the 13th inst. says:

The FIGARO, of San Francisco, the only representative of the Drama, has donned a new dress. It presents a very neat appearance, and contains some interesting matter to the public. This is the best evidence of success. Here is enterprise rewarded.

The Chronicle, of this city, would give its ears for a notice like that.

COUNTRY JOURNALISM.

Some two week ago we wrote an article bearing the above title which has been, as we expected it would be, extensively republished by the papers of the interior. It has raised a nest of hornets round the ears of the Chronicle of this city. That paper to which a favorable notice of its "enterprise" in a country paper is as grateful as a drop of water from the finger of Lazarus would have been to Dives when he was in reduced circumstances, has an article apropos of ours in its issue of to-day. It says:

One of our contemporaries, which is not noted for the accuracy of its statements or the fairness of its mode of alluding to current matters, says:

"The lesson which it (the Chronicle) seeks to draw from the death of the Benicia Tribune seems to be that since the establishment of railroads, a paper in a country town, is unnecessary. Inferentially the inhabitants ought to subscribe for the Chronicle, and let their local organ die. The fact of the matter is, that there is not a paper in San Francisco, that will assist in any way to build up an interior town."

Everyone who reads FIGARO knows that it is noted for the accuracy of its statements, and for the thorough fairness of its mode of alluding to correct events. In these particulars it is the antithesis of the Chronicle. The Chronicle then proceeds to craw-fish out of the position which it assumed and tell the country papers that it has the highest respect and esteem for them. But it cannot help winding up with an extensive puff of the Sunday Chronicle and Weekly Chronicle, and another quiet hint that all the people in the interior will find them much more interesting than their local journals. We stick to what we said before: The interior town that cannot support a newspaper cannot amount to much.

Punkin Pi.

Josh Billings says: Punkin Pi iz the sass ov Nu England. They are vittles and drink, they are joy on the haff-shell, they are glory nuff for one day, and are good or cold warmed up. I would like to be a boy again, just for sixty minnetts, and eat myself phull ov the blessid old mixtur. Enny man who don't love punkin pi, wants watching cluss, for he means to de something mean the fust good chance he kan get. Giv me all the punkin pi I could eat, when I waz a boy, and i didn't kare whether Sunday Skool kept that day or not. And now that I have grown up to manhood, and have run for the legislature once, and only got beat 856 votes, and am thoroly married, thare ain't nothing i hanker for wuss, and kan bury quicker, than two-thirds of a good old-fashioned punkin pi, an inch and a half thik, and well smelt up with ginger and nutmeg. Punkin pi iz the oldest Amerikan beverage I kno ov, and ought to go down to posterity with the trade mark ov our grandmothers on it; but i am afraid it won't, for it iz tuff even now to find one that tastes in the mouth at all az they did forty years ago.

Strong Inducement.

The Decatur Republican is responsible for the following: A well-dressed man attracted considerable attention the other day, by sitting upon the edge of the sidewalk for some time, with his head between his hands, as if in deep meditation. At last a sympathetic stranger approached him, and said: "Friend, you seem to be in trouble; can I assist you in any way?" The man sprang to his feet, and taking off his hat, parted his hair carefully, and said: "Stranger, do you see that cut? My wife did it this morning with a flatiron, and then sent me down town to buy her a new bonnet. And I have been sitting here for an hour, trying to decide whether I will buy one or not; and blame me stranger, if I haven't about decided to get it."

Appreciative.

The Watsonville Pajaronian says:—The FIGARO, the "Journal of Amusements," of San Francisco, comes to us this week in an entire new dress, which improves its appearance very much. The editor of the FIGARO is well adapted for that position, and besides getting up a good paper, really produces some gems of thought. The FIGARO is always readable, and we are glad to have it as an exchange.

A Happy Thought.

A woman in Cedar Rapids, while suffering corporal discipline at the hands of her horrid husband, hit upon a notable expedient of rescue and relief. She simply cried, "Fire! fire!" in terms at once shrill and clear. Straightway came the whole fire department, steamers and all. It isn't stated that the husband was taken out and played upon, but we hope he was.

The $25,000 Race.

The results of the great four-mile and repeat race can be summed up in a few words Day glorious; track fine; attendance 25,000 everything well-managed; time 7:43¾ and 7:36¼; not remarkable—but fast heat very good; Katie Pease won both heats easily—splendid mare, an equine greyhound; Thad's running a failure; Henry and Hardwood a great success—both promising young horses; Joe Daniels, a noble race horse, ruined—very sad, regretted by everyone; much betting; much drinking; great rush for town; Miss Pease packs off the $13,000; Henry the $5,000; Hardwood the $4,000; Thad Stevens the $3,000, and the Pacific Jockey Club as much as all them put together.

The "Criterion."

Emerson Corville & Co, the well-known oyster-dealers, have just opened a splendidly fitted up establishment under this title on the East side of Kearny street, between Bush and Sutter. It will be Messrs. Corville & Co's especial mission to cater for the public taste, so far as its appreciation of luscious, fat bivalves, served up in the best style of art is concerned, and we doubt not from their past experience, but that they will fulfill their pleasant mission to the entire satisfaction of all who have dealings with them, and make many converts thereto.

Brief but Expressive.

Telegraphy is death on verbosity. In Texas they simmer it down to vowels. Specimen: A man in a certain neighborhood who had lost a valuable mare, received, over the wire, the following dispatch—"Mare here. Come get her. Thief hung."

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 213 Sutter street near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. P

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

Amusements, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night the public are promised a startling novelty in the first production in this city of Octave Feuillet's play "The Sphinx." Miss Leighton was to have played the leading character in this piece, but cooler judgment prevailed. Miss Annette Ince, an actress of undoubted experience and ability, will undertake the role of Blanche de Chelles, and will doubtless do full justice to the appaling death scene which is the great feature of the play. Miss Ella Kemble, who will make her first appearance in San Francisco on this occasion, will play Bertha de Savigny, George Giddens Arthur La Jardie, and Thomas Whiffen Admiral de Savigny. The play will be presented with fine scenery and careful attention to detail.

California Theatre.

Mrs. Agnes Booth closed her engagement at this house on Saturday night appearing in the new play of "Elene," to a capital house. The gambling scene at Spa was the feature of the piece. W. J. Florence, the comedian, will appear as Captain Cuttle in Dion Brougham's dramatization of "Dombey and Son." Mr. Florence made a great success in this character in Chicago. We published one of the notices of the press on Saturday. Mr. Florence will be supported by Miss Bella Pateman as Edith Granger, Miss Jennie Lee as Susan Nipper, Miss Belle Chapman as Florence Dombey, Mrs. Judah as Mrs. Skewton, Henry Edwards as Mr. Dombey, Robert Pateman as Toots, S. W. Leach as Sol Gills, W. Barry as Jack Bunsby, Nelson Decker as Walter Gay and John Wilson as Carker. After this "The Irish Lion," will be played with Mr. Florence as Tim Moore, and Miss Ellie Wilton, Miss Belle Chapman, Miss Katie Pell, S. W. Leach and others in the cast.

Opera House.

A splendid new programme will be performed to-night. After a lively first part by Billy Emerson, Ben Cotton and others, Harry Sefton the original Dancing Spider, will appear in his specialties, Emerson and Arlington in Teutonic Eccentricities, Billy Rice, J. F. Oberist and J. R. Kemble in "Ham-u-let," Billy Arlington in local solos. After this the screaming act of "Under the Lamp Post" will be performed and the great successes of the season Lottie, Frank and Katie will appear in their great feat of "The Aerostatic Voyage."

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Johnny Tuers and Harry Devoy appear nightly in "Olamel" to the great delight of the audience. The moral sketch of "The Parent's Warning," a rebuke to hoodlumism, is very popular, and Miss Maggie Brewer does some good acting as the reckless Tommy. Harry Devoy and Ned Buckley acquit themselves with their usual ability as two sports.

Platt's Hall.

On Wednesday evening next, a Dickens entertainment will be given at Platt's Hall. Twenty-minutes scenes, introducing characters from the works of Charles Dickens, will be presented by professionals and amateurs. Miss Helen Marble, Miss Anita Ciprico, Miss Alma Leppien, Miss Lou Johnson, Mrs. Frank Rea, Miss Ghele, Miss Lipsis, Miss Withrow, Professor Knowlton, Sam Booth, Louis Imhaus, T. C. Maher, George Marlowe, Frank Rea, J. B. Robinson, R. G. Marsh, T. Duffy, Henry Bochols, and others will appear. The programme appears on our first page.

Notes.

Portland, Oregon, is to have a new theatre. Mr. Ankeny, who owns the new market, is converting its upper stories into a large and commodious theatre. The dress circle will be supplied with chairs of the same pattern as those used in the California Theatre. The stage appointments will cost near $6,000. It will probably be ready for use during the holiday season. W. Sims and others have been engaged for the opening.

Manager Thompson returned from Oregon on Saturday with his branch of the Palace Amphitheatre Circus Company, and will shortly open a season with his present attractions and new talent.

Charles Morrill's San Francisco Minstrels after a successful tour of four months in California, Idaho and Oregon, returned here last night. They made a good thing of it in Idaho.

Charlotte Cushman received a perfect ovation on the occasion of her farewell benefit in Philadelphia, Saturday. There was a display of fireworks in front of the Academy of Music, and tons of flowers were presented.

Boucicault's new play, "The Shanzaran," was brought out at Wallack's on Saturday. There was a large audience and the play was a success.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Burkhardt's 540 Washington street.

French calf boots made to order for $8; box toed gaiters made to order for $6; oxford tie shoes made to order for $6; boys' boots made to order for $3; and large assortment of boots and shoes, all of Burkhardt's own make, at equally low sales, at 540 Washington street. 9-s

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescoed and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

Medical Wonder

Cures rheumatism, billious pains, neuralgia,

A BATTLE WITH BILLINGSGATE.

SUGGESTED BY THAT OF BRENTFORD.

It was the Christmas holidays,
And seated in the pit,
A father saw the new Burlesque,
That was so full of wit,
And by him sat—in Slang unskilled—
His pretty little girl, Clotilde.

She heard some "ladies" on the stage
Say they would cut their sticks!
And one in male attire declare
That she'd go it like bricks.
She asked her father what were bricks?
And what they meant by cut their sticks?

The father heard the audience laugh,
As at some witty stroke;
And the old man he scratched his head,
For he couldn't see the joke.
I don't know what they mean, said he,
But sure 'tis some facetiæ!

And then she heard one nearly nude,
Say something else about
Has your fond mother sold her mangle?
And does she know you're out?
And when the people laughed, cried she,
Oh, ja! there's more facetiæ!

And then the little maiden said,
Now tell me why, papa,
That lady asked him if the mangle
Was sold by his mamma?
I can't tell why, my dear, said he,
Though, of course, 'tis some facetiæ.

But when she saw that lady's fingers
Unto her nose applied,
Why, 'tis a very vulgar thing!
The little maiden cried.
The papers all, my child, agree,
'Tis brimful of facetiæ!

And everybody says the piece
With brilliant wit is filled;
And what is wit, my dear papa?
Quoth innocent Clotilde.
Why, that I cannot say, quoth he,
But wit is not—vulgarity.

Country School Examination.

The Schenectady, New York Star relates this:

"Solomon Smith, Jr., step up here," Smith, a stupid looking country boy, advanced to the platform, tripped on the step, stood up and began:

When General—

"Make your bow, sir!" interrupted Mr. Whipem.

They boy stopped short, made a jerky inclination, and went on:

When General Jackson climbed the heights,
(Here he raised his feet as if climbing.)
And tore the starry banner down,
(Snatching at the air)
He caught his foot upon a stump,
And scraped himself from toe to crown.

During the delivery of these last lines, he put on the most painful expression of countenance, and scraped his hand over his whole person.

"Well done, Solomon," said Mr. Whipem, "go on with the next verse.'

"Thar ain't no next verse, sir; the moral comes next."

"Well, then, give us the moral, sir!" As we rush upward on our way,
Quick hastening o'er the sod,
(Running from one side of the platform to the other.)
Some little trouble stops our way,
And down we fall, by G—d!

"Solomon," said Mr. Whipem, as soon as he had recovered his breath, "did you write that?"

"No, sir," whimpered the boy, "Sam Jones wrote it for me. I gave him two apples for it."

"Thar," exclaimed Mr. Whipem, "I thought Sam Jones did it; he's at the bottom of every piece of mischief in the country; wait till I ketch him."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 8-cj

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Fresh and Sweet.

Behold the Sagacious Bull-Dog.

Let those who maintain that instinct is the sole governor of an animal's motion sit down and hear about a bull-dog at Alexandria, Va. This bull-dog had a combat with a fellow-cur, and found in the course of the conflict that the fellow-cur was too much for him. When this fact had made its way through his skull the worsted dog fell dead and motionless to the ground. The victorious dog gave his prostrate form a parting chew or two, and then strutted around with an air of importance befitting the occasion. In a short time he took up the line of march for home. As his footsteps were dying away in the distance the eye of the prostrate dog slightly unclosed. Seeing the victor in the distance and on the retreat he opened his eyes widely, and when the victor turned a corner and was out of sight the prostrate dog arose from the earth, shook the dirt from his garments, and jogged off home with a broad grin on his face. Are we to be told that such a dog had no "intellect into him?"

The Shah's Repartee.

When the Shah of Persia was in London he went to a picture gallery and saw the picture of a donkey. He afterwards wrote in his journal as follows: "I saw a picture of a donkey; asked, 'What is the price?' The Director of the exhibition, who was a clever white-bearded man, read the price and said, 'One hundred pounds sterling;' this sum is nearly 250 tomans Persian money. I said, 'The price of a living donkey is at the most only £5, why is a painted donkey so dear?' 'Because it costs nothing to keep, it eats neither barley nor straw.' I said, 'If its keeping costs nothing, it does not carry anything, and cannot be used for riding.' We laughed very much."

Rather Unfortunate.

English papers are telling the following story of the venerable Arch-Deacon Thorpe, of Bristol. The reverend gentleman is very corpulent, and in preaching a sermon in the old-fashioned church, it is said that he had to be hoisted into the pulpit over the side before the services began, the door being too narrow to admit him. Curiously enough his sermon was on "The Importance of a Right Introduction in the Christian Ministry," and he founded his discourse on the parable in which it is declared that "he that entereth in at the door is the shepherd of the sheep, while he that climbeth up any other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

California Theatre.

W. J. Florence drew a splendid house last night, when he appeared as Captain Cuttle in "Dombey and Son." He received a hearty welcome, and his entirely original impersonation of the bluff old sailor was much applauded. Mrs. Judah did an excellent bit of acting as Mrs. Skewton, and dressed the part with her usual admirable discretion. Miss Bella Pateman as Edith Granger, was extremely effective, and looked coldly handsome enough to fascinate the money king. As Dombey, Henry Edwards was unexceptionable. He presented the character to the life. Walter Leman, as Joe Bagstock, was not so happy; his make-up was queer, his whiskers were not of the English military cut. Barton Hill, always ready to throw himself into the breach, assumed the role of Jack Bunsby, W. Barry having been taken suddenly ill. He played the part particularly well, giving the part a more Dickensish flavor than some of the others. Susan Nipper was well represented by Miss Jennie Lee, and Robert Pateman gave a clever impersonation of Toots. Altogether the piece was admirably played and gave great satisfaction to the large, most appreciative, and fashionable audience present. The evening's entertainment terminated with "The Irish Lion," in which Mr. Florence gave a taste of his quality as an Irish comedian, and was of course successful in gaining a good deal of applause and causing many a hearty laugh. The manner in which both these pieces were put on the stage is extremely creditable to the management and the company. In "The Irish Lion," the good taste of the ladies' dresses was remarkable, there was a harmony of color not always observable. Miss Ellie Wilton as Mrs. Cerulea Bizgig, was very amusing, and Miss Belle Chapman and Miss Katie Pell afforded her efficient support as Mrs. Crummy and Miss Echo respectively. The same bill will be performed to-night. The public will be well pleased with this light fare for a week, but will look forward to the production of the play of "No Thoroughfare" in which Mr. Florence is particularly clever as Obenreizer. This play will be produced with new scenery and mechanical effects. The engagement of Mr. Florence has opened very promisingly and will doubtless prove a prosperous one.

Opera House.

The first part is a great feature of the performance at this house. The sweet singing of J. G. Russell, J. M. Davis, J. F. Oberist and others, and the comicalities of Billy Emerson and Ben Cotton are always well appreciated by the audience. In "Ham-u-let" Billy Rice casuses immense amusement as Circus Johnny, and J. R. Kemble is great in the role of Ham-u-let. Billy Arlington's local songs with banjo accompaniment are very popular, "Under the Lamp-Post" is a great success, and the house is crowded nightly.

Maguire's New Theatre.

There was a good house last night, whom the sterling actress, Miss Annette Ince, made her reappearance on the San Francisco stage, after an absence of many years, and assumed the role of Blanche de Chellis in the play of "The Sphinx." Miss Ince on making her reappearance was received with enthusiasm by the many admirers of her talent who had assembled to do honor to the occasion and speedily won recognition from those who now saw her for the first time. The intellectuality which always characterizes her acting was evinced to a remarkable degree in her impersonation of the fascinating, unscrupulous yet still human Blanche de Chellis. Miss Ince preferred to rely on her acting in the first acts for making an effect, and did not prolong the agony of the final death struggle. Miss Ella Kemble, who made her first appearance in San Francisco on this occasion, is an actress of very pleasing appearance and good style. J. A. Herne had, in the character of Henri de Savigney, a part which suited him well and he made the most of it. George Giddens did some very clever acting as Arthur La Jardie, and accomplished a very difficult feat. He sat down at a piano sang a song, accompanied himself and did it as naturally as a gentleman would in his own drawing-room, instead of singing at the audience. The audience appreciated this neat little bit of art and insisted on another verse of the song. It was a capital bit of natural acting. Thomas Whiffen looked well, dressed well and acted well as Admiral de Savigney and J. S. Lindsay, who has a capital voice, filled the role of Lorel Astley well enough. "The Sphinx" will be played every night until further notice.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

Among the new features of the programme at this house to-night, we may mention the screaming act of "I Want to be a Doctor" by Frank Mortimore, Johnny Tuers, and John Kelly, and the ever popular act of "The Regular Army."

Platt's Hall.

On Wednesday evening next, a Dickens entertainment will be given at Platt's Hall. Twenty-minutes scenes, introducing characters from the works of Charles Dickens, will be presented by professionals and amateurs. Miss Helen Marble, Miss Anita Ciprico, Miss Alma Leppien, Miss Lou Johnson, Mrs. Frank Rea, Miss Ghele, Miss Lipsis, Miss Withrow, Professor Knowlton, Sam Booth, Louis Imhaus, T. C. Maher, George Marlowe, Frank Rea, J. B. Robinson, R. G. Marsh, T. Duffy, Henry Rocholz, and others will appear. The programme appears on our first page.

Death of an Artist.

Fulvio Rigo, the well-known basso, died in this city, this morning, aged about 52 years. He was engaged here during several opera seasons and also sang at concerts. He will be buried on Thursday from Notre Dame de Victoires. All the Italian artistes in the city are expected to participate in the Grand Mass which is to be sung. Signor Rigo was ill only four days The cause of his death was congestion of the lungs.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

A FEW NOTICES OF FIGARO.

FIGARO.—This is the style, title and address of a spicy little journal, published in San Francisco, by our old friend J. P. Bogardus. It is devoted to advertising the programmes of the leading places of amusement in particular, and the business of enterprising business men in general. It is distributed free every day to whoever wants a copy, and appears to be successful. It is good at all times; but its chief merit lies in the fact that it differs in its idea of journalism from all its daily contemporaries. One can peruse its columns without stumbling over a libel, or a muck-heap, or a filthy bit of scandal, at every line. Success to its enterprising publisher.—The Castroville Argus, Nov. 14th.

The San Francisco FIGARO appeared last week in a new dress. We congratulate it upon its long and continued run of prosperity.—Salt Lake Footlights.

NEW DRESS.—The San Francisco FIGARO, a gratuitous dramatic sheet, has lately donned a new dress. It is a spicy little paper, and well deserves a liberal patronage in the way of advertising. Long may the little FIGARO wave.—Nevada Tribune, Carson City.

Stupid.

Some Oakland ladies ask the Chronicle how to arrange seaweed for drying. The Chronicle evidently knows nothing about it, but gives a lot of stupid instructions which leave the ladies as wise as they were before. We supply the necessary knowledge. Throw the seaweeds into a basin of water, take a sheet of paper and place it under each piece, allowing it to settle in a natural form on the paper. Then let it dry. It will adhere to the paper sufficiently without any mucilage, and can be removed [illegible] afterwards. What these Oakland ladies wanted to know was how to make the seaweed disentangle its leaves and assume a pretty form, and this is just what the Chronicle neglected to tell them.

A Business Mystery.

A man, not a thousand miles from Syracuse, having made an assignment some years since was called upon by a New York creditor, to whom he exhibited his books, and with whom he proposed to settle at fifty cents on the dollar. The New York man replied, "How can you pay fifty cents on the dollar? Your assets will not pay over forty cents." "Well, never mind that," said the unfortunate assignor; "if my assets will not pay the fifty cents, I will make up the deficiency out of my own pocket." What became of the New Yorker after that, deponent saith not.

Plain Enough.

The Call's dramatic critic, who, we fear, is rather envious of success, had an ill-natured paragraph the other day accusing Mark Twain of fibbing when he said that the present version of "The Gilded Age" was all his own. The N. Y. Spirit of the Times contains the following, which quite clears Mark Twain. As for Densmore he doesn't seem to be starving, but, on the contrary, is remarkably healthy and genial. It was a bit of bad luck that, after he had dramatized the novel he should find it protected by copyright; but Mark Twain acted on the square, and he has a perfect right to use his own creation of Col. Sellers on the stage. Here is the Spirit of the Times paragraph:

In a recent issue of the Daily Sun there appeared a sensational paragraph, to the effect that "The Gilded Age" was written by a starving California journalist, of whom Mark Twain purchased the manuscript for the sum of one hundred dollars, and that the play now is substantially what it was when the "starving journalist" turned it over to him. This called out the following letter from Mr. Raymond, whose personation of Col. Sellers has made the play so successful:

SIR:—An article headed "Story of the Gilded Age" in the Sun of this morning calls for a statement from me. The facts in the case are simply these: In April last I commenced an engagement in San Francisco. A few days after my arrival the manager of the theatre mentioned that Mr. Densmore, the dramatic critic of the Golden Era, had dramatized Mark Twain's and Charles Warner's novel of The Gilded Age, and would like to submit it to me. I read the play, and the character of Col. Sellers impressed me so favorably that I consented to produce the piece the last week of my engagement. I did so, the play making a most pronounced hit. I then arranged with Mr. Densmore for the right to perform the play throughout the country. Upon my arrival in New York I heard that Mr. Clemens had telegraphed to San Francisco protesting against the play being performed as he had reserved all rights in his copyright of The Gilded Age. I at once recognized Mr. Clemens' claim, and wrote Mr. Densmore to that effect. I then communicated with Mr. Clemens with a view to having him write me a play with Col. Sellers as the chief character. While the negotiation was pending, I received a letter from Mr. Densmore requesting me to send the manuscript of his dramatization to Mr. Clemens, as he had purchased it, and that he (Mr. Clemens) had acted in a most liberal manner toward him. I sent the manuscript to Mr. Clemens, but not until after he had finished his play and read it to me, [illegible] dramatization used in the present play except that which was taken bodily from the novel of The Gilded Age. These are the facts in the premises. Mr. Densmore's play was a most excellent one; the impression it made in San Francisco was of a most pronounced character, but in no way does it resemble the present production, which is entirely the work of Mr. Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain). Yours, etc.,

JOHN T. RAYMOND.

PARK THEATRE, Nov. 2, 1874.

Hard Frozen Ice.

A certain deacon, who was a zealous advocate for the cause of temperance, employed a carpenter to make some alterations in his parlor. In repairing a corner near the fireplace it was found necessary to remove the wainscot, when lo! a "mare's nest" was brought to light which astonished the workman most marvellously. A brace of decanters, sundry junk bottles—all containing "something to take"—a pitcher and tumblers, were cosily reposing therein snug quarters. The joiner, with wonder-stricken countenance, ran to the proprietor with the intelligence. Well, I declare," exclaimed the deacon, "that is curious, sure enough. It must be that old Captain B. left those things there when he occupied the premises years since." "Perhaps he did," returned the discoverer; "but, deacon, that ice in the pitcher must have been well frozen to have remained solid."

Mind Over Matter.

The Austin (Nev.) Reveille illustrates it thusly: To show the power of mind over matter no stronger argument is needed than that we heard advanced by a boy, this morning. Said he to another boy: "You needn't be puttin' on no airs if yer is got a boughten sled; I'm in the third reader and you can't spell cat without spellin' of it with a k."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Frank Mayo.

The Spirit of the Times says:

Mr. Frank Mayo has found California a good place to visit. His three weeks' engagement at San Francisco, just terminated, has been unusually lucrative, and when Lochinvar rides out of the West he will carry something like twelve thousand dollars in gold more in his wallet than he took to the Pacific coast. Mr. Mayo is a young actor, whose success is deserved. His life has been one of scrupulous nicety, and for years he has labored to do something good in his profession. "Davy Crockett" has served him a good turn, and when he has accumulated a good round sum we would advise him to return to the legitimate. There is a plentiful lack of talent in this branch of the drama, and our best young actors ought not to throw their time away. Mr. Charles Pope has wisely chosen to devote himself to a strong legitimate role, and has achieved a success with "Samson." Is Mayo's ambition satisfied with "Davy Crockett."

It Was a Mistake.

A young snob, dining at a hotel, was requested by a neighbor to pass him some article of food which was near him. "Do you mistake me for a waiter?" said the exquisite. "No, sir; I mistook you for a gentleman," was the prompt reply.

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 213 Sutter street near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. P

EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

WEDNESDAY.....NOVEMBER 18

Eastern Time.

At the four mile and repeat race of the Maryland Jockey Club, at Baltimore, Oct. 23d, Jack Frost won the second and third heats in 7:41, and 8:11. There were five entries. Bessie Lee took the first heat in 7:32, which beat Katie Pease's first heat by 11¼ seconds. In the struggle for the second heat the rest of the field, Silent Friend, Piccolo and Whisper were distanced, and that too in time 4¾ seconds slower than that made by Katie Pease in her second heat on Saturday. At the meeting many of the best horses in the country were present, and time made was remarkably good. In the mile heat, Harry Bassett beat Grey Planet, Lottie Moone and a field of thirteen other horses in 1:44½.

Vandalite took the two-mile heat on the opening day from fourteen competitors in 3:35½, and the second two-mile heat, three days after, in 3:35. This comes within 2½ seconds of Katie Pease's time at Buffalo, which is the best on record.

Kadi took the one and a quarter mile dash in 2:11½. Record 2:09½.

Preakness took the one-mile and three-quarter race in 3:08½, carrying 125 lbs. Record 3:05¾, with 83 lbs.

Ballankeel took the two and a half mile stake in 4:31¾. Record (Katie Pease) 4:28½.

Charlotte Cushman in New York.

The New York Dispatch says of the recent engagement played by Miss Charlotte Cushman in New York: Miss Cushman's farewell engagement has been, up to the present time, the most brilliant ever played in Booth's Theatre, the attendance and enthusiasm being alike worthy of the occasion. During the past week she repeated her impersonation of Lady Macbeth, a performance which, according to her conception of the part, is really grand. The studious Shakspearian scholar might object to the viragoish character of Miss Cushman's Lady Macbeth—and this is, indeed, the only flaw in the lady's acting—but while the painful fact must be admitted that the stage can boast no worthy successor to this eminent tragedienne, present critical examination may be dispensed with.

That Horrid New York.

N. B. sends the following question to the New York Dispatch:

"Can a wife have her husband arrested in his own house if he calls her bad names, and breaks and destroys crockery and furniture even if he is somewhat under the influence of liquor?"

The demoralized Dispatch replies as follows:

Yes, if he commits a breach of the peace his wife can have him arrested. His being under the influence of liquor instead of abating adds to his offense.

This is the sort of thing that causes disharmony between man and wife. Confound a weekly newspaper with its impertinent answers to correspondents!

Go to Head-Quarters.

Captain Ellis held that in trying to find out who wrote "Lies of the Day" and stretching his authority for that purpose, he was doing good public service. The simplest way of suppressing the nuisance would be to suppress the Father of Lies, or his consul for San Francisco, the editor of the News Letter.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

Jenny June on Jet.

Jenny June in a late letter from New York to the St. Louis Globe says:

The jet insanity seems to exist more on the part of the shop-keepers than their lady patrons. It is astonishing to what an extent jet and beaded trimmings have been manufactured, and the prices that are asked for them. The mania is one that must be short-lived because it makes dress so conspicuous, and to put the fashionable amount upon a costume for day or evening wear would be to invest in it the cost of a small house.

Jetted aprons are $75 each; beaded jacket from $50 to $125; neckties, beaded $4 50; collars composed wholly of jet beads on wire, $15. Belts are $15, with leaf-like pendants composed of small cut beads massed together. Buckles made in the same way are $2 50 to $5, and a passementerie bordering composed of fine-cut jet, or a jetted fringe with net-work headings, are either of them $10 to 15 per yard.

The poorest trimmings into which jet is introduced have doubled in price, although the most of them have no real or intrinsic value, and drop off little by little, in the street or in the house, without any strain whatever being put upon them.

To see handsome silk or velvet vulgarized in that way, above all, to see ladies actually paying to have their rich, real lace spoiled by "beading" is enough to make one conclude that women are bereft of sense where dress or fashion is concerned.

There are some, however, who have escaped the infection. "Do not mention beads to me," said one of the most elegant women in New York to her dress-maker recently, "or I shall look out for another modiste. I would not touch jet upon any consideration, or be seen wearing a particle of it."

Piano vs. Husband.

A writer in Appleton's Journal says:

"The passion young women feel or feign for the piano seldom extends beyond marriage. Any new affection, if ardent, supplants the old. The husband is a most dangerous rival to the instrument—soon prevails over it completely—reduces it to silence. Girls who have steadily drilled at the key-board, who have studied at Leipsic, Dresden, Milan, Paris, who have declared that their beloved art shall always be their consolation, that they would be wretched without it, generally desert the piano the minute they thrust their heads into the matrimonial noose. Mozart, Bellini, Donizetti, Beethoven, are forgotton very speedily after the practical overture to domesticity begins, and their memory is not revived except at long intervals. They may then wish they had learned something else than marches, waltzes, fantasias, and sonatas, for they see, perhaps for the first time, that life, instead of being a concert, is full of discords, and needs something more than artistic treatment."

Agricultural Park Track.

This fine half mile course has been leased for three years by Dan Denniston, the popular horseman of Sacramento, and Joseph E. Stackpole of the Morton House Excgange, of this city; and will hearafter be conducted under the rules of the National Turf Congress. The half mile track is the best bodied coarse in the county for horses, and as the management of the new track is not altogether satisfactory, the old track, under its new managers, bids fair to get its full share of business. The opening day will be on Friday.

Strange.

During the past year three hundred applications for patents for new fangled rat-traps have been made. And still the price of kid gloves doesn't come down.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

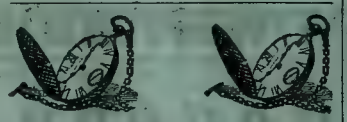
Mrs. Partington Redivivus.

Mrs. Partington and Ike, returning to "Bosting," from a visit to an ancient relative in the Old North State, had occasion to tarry for a night in this city, and "put up" at one of the smallest hotels near the east end of the avenue. After partaking of a substantial supper, the old lady smoked her vesper pipe in the parlor, and started to go up stairs to bed. Ike, remembering his mother's failing memory, and fearing that she might forget the number of her room and make an awkward blunder, called out, as she left the parlor, "Don't forget, ma, you're in eight." The venerable widow turned hastily about, exclaiming, "Hush, hush, my son! I know your old mother is growing forgetful, but she always remembers to do that before she goes to bed!"

An Unkind Trick.



It is a sad sight to see a dignified gentleman go up to a counter on which there is a glass case to pay for something. He espies lying on it, as he fondly imagines, a fatherless half-dollar. He drops his glove on the silver, pays his check, and picks up his glove, pinching that part under which the half-dollar is lying. The glove comes up, but the silver doesn't. He walks away hurriedly, and the emotions which stir his breast are probably those which "stir the heart of his nutmeg." When he gets outside the store he swears and stamps his heel and looks discontented, and kicks at the boy who wants to know if he'll have "an Evening Post." It is cruel to play such tricks on the dignified. They don't like them.

A Sportive Couple.

The Paducah Kentuckian tells this tale of male simplicity and female duplicity: A gentleman of our acquaintance found the other night, much to his surprise, that his wife knew something about draw poker. The way of it was this: The couple have two fine boy babies; seeing them asleep in the same bed, the admiring father wondered if anyyody had a fairer pair than that. The wife thought not. The husband then said, speaking in parables as he thought: "If we could draw three queens we would have a 'full' that would be hard to beat." And the lady promptly replied: "Excuse me, if you please; we'll stand pat on the pair we have."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

Opera House.

As we have observed before, there is no company of Minstrels in the United States so perfect as Emerson's Minstrels. Billy Emerson is a host in himself. Ben Cottop is fit to head any company, and Billy Arlington, Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble and others are stars of the first magnitude. That the public appreciate this fact is proved by their nightly crowding the Opera House.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Miss Annette Ince improved on her first impersonation of Blanche de Chellis last night, and perfectly electrified the audience by the power of her acting. "The Sphinx" is certainly a hit, and should have a long run.

California Theatre.

Another large audience was present last night to see W. J. Florence as Captain Cuttle in "Dombey and Son," and as Tim Moore in "The Irish Lion." He received equal applause in both pieces.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"The Parent's Warning," "I want to be a Doctor," and "The Regular Army," with an olio of acts, songs and dances, are sufficiently attractive to crowd this house.

Platt's Hall.

This (Wednesday) evening, a Dickens entertainment will be given at Platt's Hall. Twenty-minutes scenes, introducing characters from the works of Charles Dickens, will be presented by professionals and amateurs. Miss Helen Marble, Miss Anita Ciprico, Miss Alma Leppien, Miss Lou Johnson, Mrs. Frank Rea, Miss Ghelé, Miss Lipsis, Miss Withrow, Professor Knowlton, Sam Booth, Louis Imbos, T. C. Maher, George Marlowe, Frank Rea, J. R. Robinson, R. G. Marsh, T. Duffy, Henry Rocholz, and others will appear. The programme appears on our first page.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—A grand performance by Gracie and Alvan; the wonderful double pirouette on the horizontal bar, by Clifton; Aleco the Aztec Indian, and a grand orchestral concert, on Sunday. Among other wonders to be seen in the gardens are two beautiful Gloria Superbas in full bloom.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-T

Messrs. As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Medical Wonder

GETTYSBURG.

BY JOSEPH BRADFORD.

I stood to-day upon the ridge
Where once the blue brigades were massed,
And gazed across the plain below
O'er which the charging column passed—
That long, low line of gray, flame-tipt,
Which still its onward movement kept
Until it reached the sandy slope
By twice a hundred cannon swept.

And sauntering downward, somewhat sad,
Among the stones no longer stained,
I halted at a little mound
That only the front rank had gained—
A little mound left all alone,
Unmarked by flower or cypress wreath,
To show that some regretful heart
Remembered him who slept beneath.

But, half-way hidden by the grass,
I found a broken barrel stave—
The head-board which some foeman's hand
Had kindly placed above his grave;
And on one side I traced these words,
In letters I could scarce divine:
"A rebel, name unknown, who fell
First in the foremost line."

No more,—and yet what memories
Were wakened by that scanty phrase!
Again I heard the rallying shout,
Again I saw the ranks ablaze;
Once more the air with smoke was thick,
The earth below with blood was wet,
Where, like two serpents, lithe and fierce,
The wrestling squadrons met.

The field was bare; no grinning skulls
Gleamed ghastly in the clear noontide,
For on a hill not far away,
The dead were gathered side by side.
Yet none had touched the little mound;
Mayhap by chance, or by design,
They left him where death struck him down,
"First in the foremost line."

And they did well,—there let him rest;
A fitter spot there could not be.
No monument upon the earth,
No sepulchre within the sea,
Could match the tomb that Nature gives—
The shroud she spreads o'er his remains,
The green turf kissed by Summer suns
And washed by Summer rains.

Some comrade, battle-scarred and grim,
When years on years have passed away,
Telling his children grouped around
The story of that awful day,
May not forget to speak of one
Whose nameless grave is glory's shrine,
The gallant heart that beats its last
"First in the foremost line."

Perchance for him a mother's soul
Sought God upon that bitter night,
When first the direful breezes bore
Disastrous tidings from the fight;
And in the Autumn twilight gray
Belike sad eyes, in tearful strain,
Gazed Northward very wistfully
For one that did not come again.

Perchance for him some fresh young life
Drooped wearily from week to week,
Struggling against the gnawing grief
That eat the roses in her cheek;
Till pitying death, with gentle touch,
Set sleep eternal in her face,
And, sorrowing for the roses gone,
Planted his lilies in their place.

God's peace be with thee in thy rest,
Lone dweller in a stranger's land;
And may the mold above thy breast
Lie lighter than a sister's hand!
On other brows let Fame bestow
Her fadeless wreath of laurel twine;
Enough for thee thy epitaph:
"Dead in the foremost line!"

How He Fooled Him.

An Irish fellow citizen called at the post-office. "Anny letther here for O'Hollahan?' 'Which of them?' 'Anny of thim.' We can't give you letters that way; what's your first name?' 'None of your business fwhat me name iz—I want a letther.' 'We can't tell whether there is any letter for you or not, without knowing what your name is.' 'I'm a naturalized citizen, and ain't I as much right to a letther as anybody?' 'Why, yes, of course, if there is one for you, I can't tell whether there is any for you, unless you will tell me your name.' 'Gimme a letther I tell you!' 'Give me your name, I tell you.' 'Me name is—me name is—Pathrick Mahoney.' (Clerk looks,) 'There is no letter for Patrick Mahoney.' After a little more stubborn insisting, the man started away. A gentleman who had been looking on with much enjoyment, inquired: "So you didn't get a letter after all, Pat?" "No said Pat, with a wink, but I got even wid him, it wasn't my own name at all, that I guv 'im! Is there any other posht-office in town where I cud get a letther, sur!"

Notes on the Wedding of Col. Fred Grant.

The bride's cake was twenty-two inches in diameter.

Lieut. Fred Grant is 24 years of age.

Mrs. Fred Grant is a medium-sized brunette. She is twenty years of age.

Rev. Isaac Erritt united them.

It was about twenty minutes after three o'clock that the orchestra sounded the first strain of Medelssohn's immortal wedding march.

Gen. Phil. Sheridan was not present, being out of the city on business.

The preacher was a Campbellite. He lectured the young couple on the duties of matrimony.

They both answered yes, in firm tones.

During the ceremony President Grant and wife stood near to the contracting parties, the Chief Magistrate holding tightly to the lappels of his swallow-tail coat.

Mrs. Grant, who was evidently much moved by the ceremony, laid her head upon her husband's shoulder when the words were pronounced which made her son a husband, and raised her fan to her eyes.

Fred did not kiss his wife until everybody else got through.

The wedding robe cost $5,000.

Four hundred guests were at the reception.

Stewed terrapin was served at the collation.

Four dozen pair of silk stockings were imported from England.

The bride was the recipient of a great number of elegant and costly gifts from admiring friends.

The costume in which Mrs. Palmer appeared was unquestionably superb. The material was silk of the faintest pearl tint. One can form some idea by examining the inside coating of a perfect oyster shell.

Miss Louise Kellogg was attired in a reception suit of black velvet and silk.

Johnny Hand's string band furnished the music.

After the wedding there was a dance.

The dancing was kept up until quite late in the evening notwithstanding the assigned hours for reception of guests. All enjoyed themselves, and they clung tenaciously to the pleasant scene.

Spirits in the Chimney.

After an evening's talk, lately, with an impressible neighbor about supernatural manifestations, she went home and to bed. In a few moments she noticed a ticking in the hall, and a buzzing sound in the ceiling. She listened until she plainly heard a faint, smothered cry, and then she jumped and collected the whole family. First they heard it in one corner—so they thought—then in another, and finally it resolved itself into a series of cries and manifestations behind the fire-board in the large old-fashioned fire-place. A gentleman, more courageous and skeptical than the rest, undertook to remove the iron front, and as he did so his hand was gripped, a little spectral claw, with fleshless biting fingers, grabbed and hung on. The man turned to the night-gown brigade behind, and with a blanched face announced the awful fact that the materialized form of some little demon was even then clinging with terrible force to his finger. One lately-bereaved mother said:

"Oh! perhaps it's my little Jimmy; Jimmy, is it your dear spirit?"

The gentleman made an effort to remove the intruding hand, when his cuff was grasped by a stronger and larger force.

"Good mercy," he whispered, "there's another, bigger, fiercer, and more rambunctious than the other."

A middle-aged man stole silently toward the door, muttering: "It's my mother-in-law. That just describes her. She's come back, as she swore she would." Just then down came the sheet-iron fire-board, and amid a cloud of soot and much consternation the cause of the row appeared. Four little chimney swallows fluttered into the room, and on the dirt-begrimmed hand of the investigating boarder, appeared a fifth, while the old mother clung pertinaciously to his coat-cuff. It was an inglorious scattering of the weird, unearthly expectations of the assembled party, but it's about the size of all these wondrous manifestations, when the bare fact can be come at. My neighbor takes less interest in the spirit world, and has unpacked her trunk which was ready strapped for a flight to the Eddy homestead and a week's board with "materialized" Spooks.

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

This metal, after many years' trial under the Hoe and other Machines of the leading London and English and Scotch provincial DAILY PAPERS, has been found to be at least TWICE AS DURABLE as the ordinary type metal, and has gained it very universal preference. The great improvements they have introduced in their manufacture, enable them to supply Fonts of this superior metal without any increase of Price upon the ordinary quality.

THURSDAY.....NOVEMBER 19

Rough on the Prince.

The Prince of Wales will feel distressed when he reads the following from the Santa Barbara Daily Press of the 13th:

The rumored death of Queen Victoria will carry sadness to the hearts of Englishmen all over the world. And it will be long before our mother country will feel the sway of a monarch so just, discreet, and devoted to her subjects, as their gentle woman sovereign. Her loss is one that will be felt, not only in her little white-walled kingdom, but throughout the universe, wherever the influence of a life of courage, faithfulness, and devotion to duty like hers can be felt. England will scarcely be prepared by her long and prosperous reign to appreciate the sway of such a monarch as the Prince of Wales.

England is well prepared to accept the reign of King Edward in place of the succedaneum of Queen Victoria, who has long since retired from the active duties of her office.

Charlotte Cushman.

Miss Cushman, even at her advanced age, will probably find her present leave-taking of the stage a mistake, and wish to return to it by and by. When in Rome she was a physical sufferer, and her physician there, as we have been told, could not help her. She returned to the United States not to resume the stage, but to rest and to die. Her American physician advised a return to the stage and a more active life. The advice was taken, and Miss Cushman has been in better health ever since.

Clara Morris.

Toreador of the New York Courier says: Bonnie Clara Morris is going from us, to shed the lustre of her eyes on the country people. Well, she has lost none of her popularity here — the same glamour hovers around her now that made her so instant a success on the occasion of her first appearance, so that she will always be welcome back again, and the public bids her au revoir, sans adieu.

Another Congratulation.

The San Jose Mercury of the 18th, has the following:

FIGARO.—That triple extract of allspice, the San Francisco FIGARO, has recently donned a spink-span new dress, and looks as stylish as one of its editor's photographs (cabinet size). FIGARO is a striking illustration of the old saying: "Good things are usually done up in small packages."

Going to the Races.

A New York paper tells the following story which of course is untrue:

A member of the Hebrew persuasion asked another member of the same faith to go with him to Jerome Park. "Do," said the inviter; "there are thirteen on us going." "Thirteen!" said the invited, "how?" "In a van." "How many horses?" "One!" "One?" echoed the invited. "Yes; isn't that enough?" "No." "Why not? we've all on us got whips."

Strict Discipline.

At Atlanta, Ga., a policeman has been discharged for eating a box of sardines on his beat. The moral sense of the community revolted at such an outrage, and his punishment is regarded as even too light.

A New Paper.

We have received the first number of The Tribune, published at Dixon, on the road from Vallejo to Sacramento. It is a bright and outspoken sheet.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescoed and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. X

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. H

Latest Stock News.

The reporter of the Reno Crescent wields an easy pen. We should imagine he uses one of the stamps of a quartz mill:

The news from the Peavine district is certainly encouraging. The Paymaster which has labored for some time under severe difficulties, has at last determined their fate which should bring gladness to all stockholders. The writer, who visited the mine yesterday, was convinced that a valuable ledge was discovered and that the quartz was of a rich character. The excitement of Virginia at present seems to have taken the current of capital there, though we predict that Peavine in a short time will have a district, the mines of which will equal any of the Comstock. Let the capitalists turn their attention to this district. There are now in progress the erection of the Eagle Roasting Furnace and dump sheds. The Superintendent, Captain Griffin is a gentleman possessing every qualification to prosecute a work of such magnitude.

It is gratifying to know that some real work is being done in the Peavine district. The Roasted Eagle Furnace and dump sheds show enterprise.

An Awkward Position.

A dispatch from London, of November 10th, is as follows:

Madame Pauline Lucca, the cantatrice, obtained against her Prussian husband, Baron Von Radde, a judgment of divorce by default and married again. The default was subsequently opened and the defendant allowed to come on and plead, but the judgment stands meantime. This morning Judge Lawrence granted a motion on behalf of the defendant for a commission to proceed to Berlin and take testimony.

The Difference.

If a young lady has a brother, and that brother wears a brown felt hat worth two dollars, and he should come home late at night from seeing some friends, with that hat crushed into "forty-eleven shapes," the young lady should immediately seize it, and by strewing a rosette of velvet and some ribbons over it, she would have a hat of the latest style, worth about ten dollars.

An Improvement.

A telegraphers' newspaper, speaking of the employment of women as operators, says that their power is already felt in the higher style of conversation between male operators over the wires. Low jests and vulgarity have grown less frequent and an intimation that there is a female operator on a circuit puts a quietus on the most virulent of blasphemous telegraphers.

All a Mistake.

Julia—Oh! Carrie, I've got a new feller, perfectly splendid! The other one was too miserable for anything! [Bings overhears this extraordinary language of his beloved Julia, and thinks it is all over with him, and that the world is hollow. Poor "feller," how is he to know that the dear girl is only talking about her sewing machine?]

Useful Information.

The singular statement appears in the St. Louis Globe that "General Sheridan won't marry because he doesn't want to give up the privilege of going to bed with his boots on." The amount of useful information lying around a Western newspaper office makes circulating libraries a superfluity.

Balloon Marriages.

Marriage is an honorable estate and on no account to be lightly undertaken, and these balloonatic marriages are objectionable in many ways, but especially in this, that parties are in no condition to intermarry when they are so far up in the world and without visible means of support.

Latest.

In Middlebury, Vt., the young gentlemen wear a satin badge bearing the words, "Hire a Hall," under the lappels of their coats, and when bored by inveterate talkers they just turn up the lappel and display the badge. The plan is said to work finely.

When a Nevada miner leaps into a saloon, with a revolver in each hand and a bowie knife under his arm, and asks, "Who runs this ere soul-destroying shebang?" echo is left to answer, while the crowd fall out of the back door.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Burkhardt's 540 Washington street.

French calf boots made to order for $8; box toed gaiters made to order for $6; oxford tie shoes made to order for $6; boys' boots made to order for $3; and large assortment of boots and shoes, all of Burkhardt's own make, at equally low sales, at 540 Washington street. 9-B

Mrs. P. T. Barnum.

The latest Mrs. P. T. Barnum is thus described by a correspondent who saw her at the hippodrome performance in Cincinnati: She is apparently about twenty-four years old, and looks like a lady of amiability and refinement. She is short in stature inclining to embonpoint; blonde complexion; features of a pure English type; eyes blue; hair a golden brown; profile decided and regular. It was evidently her first visit to the hippodrome, for her interest was undisguised, and she watched the Indians and the buffalo with special wonder. Mrs. Barnum was richly dressed in black silk, black cloth cloak, covered with jet beads, and a black velvet hat, with light blue and black feathers. The fingers of her left hand blazed with five or six large diamond cluster rings. Mr. Barnum seemed to take delight in explaining to her the various acts.

It's Hard to Tell.

A teetotaler asked Pat, the other day, if ever he saw a teetotaler drunk. "Och!" replied Paddy, with great earnestness, "I've seen many a drunk, but I couldn't tell whether he was a teetotaler or not."

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co., 707 Market street, near Third, because they get bette goods for the same price than any other dealers.

Bal Masque!

Reproducing the brightest element of the world renowned

EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

Amusements, Etc.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Miss Annette Ince in "The Sphinx," is the attraction at this house. The play is admirably set, and well played throughout. M. Straus, the scenic artist, has surpassed his best effort in the moonlight scene, in the fourth act.

California Theatre.

To-night, "Dombey and Son" and The Irish Lion," will be played for the last time. To-morrow evening Mr. Florence will appear in the character of Bob Brierly in "The Ticket of Leave Man."

Opera House.

Billy Emerson, Ben Cotton, J. M. Davies, J. G. Russell, and others appear in the first part at this house. Billy Emerson, with Billy Arlington, does some very comical Dutch business, and many amusing acts are performed. On Monday next Leopold and Geraldine, the wonderful gymnasts, will commence an engagement at this house.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"I Want to be a Doctor," "The Parent's Warning," "Hard Cheek," and "The Regular Army," are among the acts to be performed at this house to-night. Buckley's is doing a very lively business. House crowded every night.

Platt's Hall.

The Dickens entertainment at this hall last night drew a good house, and was quite a success. The amateurs who had been well trained by E. G. Marsh, under whose management the entertainment was given, acquitted themselves well.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—A grand performance by Gracie and Alvan; the wonderful double pirouette on the horizontal bar, by Clifton; Aleco, the Aztec Indian, and a grand orchestral concert, on Sunday. Among other wonders to be seen in the gardens are two beautiful Gloria Superbas in full bloom.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-T

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium its celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 c

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

Ackerman's.

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. It is a fair in itself, and visitors are invited to inspect the thousands of beautiful articles therein, and will be received with the utmost courtesy, whether they purchase or not. No. 209 Sutter street near Kearny. 8-bg

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Antelope Oyster House.

Our specialty, always the best oysters in market served up in the best style of cooking. Our Eastern transplanted oysters excel any other in market. Established in 1864. No. 612 Market near Montgomery. B

THE BOAT-HORN.

Oh! list the boat-horn's wild refrain,
O'er eve's still waters stealing clear;
So softly sweet, so sad a strain
Ne'er woke before to charm the ear.
From out the past it brings once more,
As waking echoes of a dream,
The tree-clad hills, the isles and shore,
Of wild Ohio's winding stream.

Out on the wave while sweeping down,
The boatman trod his little deck,
And dreamed, while lay his all around,
Of strange adventure, storm and wreck.
That strain he wound his way to cheer
In dewy eve and golden morn;
The startled Indian paused to hear,
In echoes sweet, that simple horn.

He came, rough courier of the men,
The thronging thousands pressing on,
With axes ringing in the glen,
And camps the gleaming hills upon.
Gone are the forests, gone the race,
The dusky shadows of the shore;
The hum of busy life keeps pace
To music of the steamer's roar.

Oh! boatman, wind thy horn again,
The simple music of the heart;
What memories live along its strain,
And into being softly start.
The wood-crowned hills, the isles, the stream,
In sweetest musings wide expand,
I see as in a Summer's dream
The romance of my native land.

Feminine Vagaries.

If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget them all.

Kissing fairs, for the benefit of churches, are an Iowa feature.

Point-lace collars are something new. If you haven't a collar use your best lace handkerchief.

In Switzerland, no girl is allowed to break her marriage engagement unless her lover loses both his legs.

There is no change in the shape of the muff and boa, but the seal cap is turned up at the side, and is shaped exactly like the ordinary felt hat.

The fancy for wearing a little bunch of natural or artificial flowers with the bow at the throat is on the increase with the ladies, and a very pretty idea it is.

Costumes for the street are frequently seen with skirts of silk, and the overdrss of black camels' hair cashmere, trimmed with twisted woolen fringe—the sleeves usually being of the silk of the skirt.

Miss Sherman's name wouldn't rhyme very well with anything, but Miss Honore's name can be played upon by poet's all day long. There's bore, door, floor, chore, score, and lots of other words.

"Why, you see," she began, "you take a chestnut and cut round the hull with a sharp knife, and you take one-half the chestnut in your mouth, and your fellow takes the other half in his mouth, and pull, and the hull comes right off."

A Sioux chief offered to marry a celebrated authoress, the other day. An enthusiastic eye-witness reports that her orbs stood open like the eye of a frightened gazelle, and the blush on her cheek was as pink as the heart of a pomegranate.

French cashmeres, tamises, merinos and other lustreless fabrics assimilate well with crepe for a trimming; though more generally faille or other brands of silk are used, with the crimped braid fringe. For heavy fabrics, ball and other woolen fringes are in demand.

Old ladies, who can scarce remember their spring-time, take to snow-drops and violets and lilacs, with the contradictoriness which is said to belong to the sex generally. Young girls wear full fruitage of brilliant colors, lush, open roses, and richly tinted with the same contrariness of taste.

A new combination of the muff and boa has been introduced, from Germany, which consists of a boa which crosses upon the chest, and into the ends of which a sort of cornucopia-shaped mitten is introduced, which serves as a pocket for the hands. It is not likely to supersede the muff, at least at present.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

The Bores of New York.

The New York Dispatch says:

There is one genial gentleman connected with the New York press whose funeral we'd attend with pleasure. He is a stout individual. Indeed so stout that irreverent young men call him "Old Stomach." We don't find fault with his fat. It's with his ways. They're not at all fascinating. He attends the opera. When any particular melodious song is being sung, or any bit of harmony is being performed, "Old Stomach" thumps his cane on the floor wildly, and shrieks out: "Brava!" We are not acquainted with the gentleman. We have no anxiety for an introduction. But we do think we would wax fat on sausages or hash made out of that man's carcass. He's the most insufferable noodle we ever met, except the man who goes to theatres dressed in a bald head, an eye-glass, and plenty of cheek. If those two men were to meet, and the fat man should eat up the bald-headed man, and then should die of that dose, there would be demoniac rejoicing among the attendants of opera and theatre. But those who should meet with an untimely death unfortunately never do. We will have to serenade "Old Stomach" with the Dispatch Minstrels. "When bore joins bore, then comes the death of both." And we await the death with fearful anxiety.

Couldn't be Bluffed.

A gentleman crossing Fulton Ferry was accosted by one of those peripatetic vendors of cheap literature and weekly newspapers, who are to be found in shoals about such public places, with "Buy Bulwer's last work, sir? Only two shillin'." The gentleman, willing to have a laugh with the urchin, said, "Why, I am Bulwer myself!" Off went the lad, and whispering to another at a distance, excited his wonderment at the information he had to impart. Eyeing the pretended author of "Pelham" with a kind of awe, he approached him timidly, and, holding out a pamphlet, said, modestly, "Buy the 'Women of England,' sir? You're not Mrs. Ellis, are you?" Of course the proposed sale was effected.

The Danbury Man in England.

Bailey, the Danbury News man, is publishing his impressions of England in a series of letters to his paper. He makes the following remark among others: The English are as unostentatious in their names as in other things. John is the common male and Jane is the popular female cognomen. I begin to think that nearly all the female servants are called "Jane;" I am not sure there is not an act of Parliament to that effect. The term "servant" is used in a broader sense than in our country. The employes of a company are called "servants" whether they are at the head or foot of the list. Imagine an American railway ticket-seller called a servant. But it is too dreadful to think of, and, fortunately, no one would dare do it.

Decidedly Indecent.

A good story is told by a distinguished sculptor of the cool reception which his mother gave to his first attempt in the plastic art. It was the figure of a woman looking out upon the sea, as if trying to catch a glimpse of the vessel that contained her sailor-husband. The figure was scarcely demi-draped about the neck—which seemed to have been the only point which struck the good lady's attention. "Well, what do you think of her?" asked the young man eagerly, expectant of his mother's praise. "I think," said the matron, with decision, "that no decent woman would be seen out of doors in such a plight."

A Mystery Explained.

The Dayton Journal wants to know why it is that, in cases of domestic infelicity, where another woman is concerned, the injured wife usually assails the other woman, and don't go for her husband. The reason is that he is still her husband, and she is obliged to preserve what little beauty he possesses, while she feels it to be a great moral duty to make that other woman as unattractive as possible. Besides, she can "take it out" of her husband at leisure with her tongue, a weapon of which the other woman is not in the least afraid.

A Great Truth.

An Eastern paper says: Fashionable ladies are telling one another that everything is so cheap. Yes, things are very cheap; so cheap that few have money enough to buy anything. "It is always the way," says Flora McFlimsey, looking over her old blue silk with a view of having it dyed, "when people have money things are awful dear, but when they haven't things are awful cheap."

Great Bargains in Clothing.

The only store in the city that has the largest, cheapest and finest assortment of Men's and Boys Cothing, is H. Peyser's Montgomery Avenue Cothing Store, 719 Montgomery street, between Washington and Jaekson. Also, a large assortment of Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Cloaks, and the finest stock of Gents' Furnishing Goods, Trunks, Valises, etc. 2-x

Eastern News.

We have "collated" the following items from our Eastern exchanges, and publish them for the purpose of showing the Alta Brevity man, that if he had a little industry, he could do better than he does at present:

The last rose of Summer, once fragrant and fair: now hangeth alone, on the ragged edge of despair. There now.

In the case of a Kansas man being struck by lightning the Coroner's jury rendered a verdict: "He was killed by the Lord, but the Lord is all right."

"Off she goes!" said a lady, speaking of the train as it was starting. "You have mistaken the gender," said a gentleman; "this is a mail train."

The bullfrogs raised their tails on high,
And went bounding o'er the plain:
A bumblebee went thundering by,
And then came on the rain.

The Inter-Ocean calls Mrs. Jane Swisshelm "a woman with a rudder to her name." —Pittsburg Commercial. Yes, but what was her rudder name before she was married.

Ven some man slaps me on der shoulder und says, "I was glad to hear you was so vell," and then sticks behind my back his fingers to his nose, I hef my opinion of that veller.

"I tell you what," said a Troy widower, as he spat out of the window, "it seems awful when I think Sary's down in the ground instead of being around to dry apples."

Now after a lapse of ninety odd years, it has been discovered that spitting on the bait doesn't help in the least to catch fish. Is there any one in America who isn't as mad as blazes?

A colored preacher, down South, took for his text the words, "Though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God," which he divided into three parts, as follows: "First, skin worms; second, what they done; third, what the man saw after he was eaten up."

Grammarians will find it a good exercise to parse the thats which follow:

Now that is a word which may often be joined.
For that that may be doubled is clear to the mind,
And that that that is right is right plain to the view,
As that that that that we use, is rightly used too.
And that that that that that line has it, is right,
In accordance to grammar is plain in our sight.

An old farmer riding in a lumber wagon with his son, when passing over a rough place fell off, and coming into close contact with the wheel he cried out, "My neck is broke!" His son expressing some doubt as to the case being quite so bad, the old man responded with some spirit, "Don't you s'pose I know?"

A Great Fact.

"Advertising costs money." So does store rent, so do all good and useful things. The object of advertising is not to cause a man to expend money, but to make it.

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescoed and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. I

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. B

Dr. Doherty.

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practic, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office, 519 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below the What Cheer House. T

A Pioneer Story.

Thus an old '49er discourses:

"That's about the time," pursued my friend, (he was a '49er and had been indulging in the usual '49 reminiscences,) "that's about the time they were puttin' down tobacco crossin's in San Francisco—"

"Yes," broke in the Captain, impatiently, "that's another one o' them California yarns that's about as true as that they had a man for breakfast every mornin'. X'y Californians are the same the world over for tellin' big stories, an', by the way, they claim the whole coast—all the way from Alaska to Cape Horn—it's all California to them. Now about that tobacco story. I was in San Francisco myself when all that happened, and know jest how it was. The tobacco was damaged; it had been wet, and was rotten and worthless, and of course was jest so much trash in the way. Well, along came a muddy spell, an, by an' by when some feller'd see a bad hole in the street it'd occur to him to throw in a lot of that tobacco; an' then, agin, the water'd wash the dirt from under a house and leave it a little unsteady, and they'd stick in one o' them boxes o' tobacco under it, to prop it up, an' ever sence that Californians blow about paving the streets with tobacco, an' making foundations for houses of it!"

"An' then agin," pursued the captain, warming with his subject, you'd think by the stories you heard that you couldn't go ten feet, nowhere, without findin' a dead man. Now, I've been here sence '49, and I've never seen a dead man nor been within a mile of one sence I cum't the coast. (The captain had frequently ridden through Lone Mountain, on his way to the Cliff House.) Now, the cap'n, here (referring contemptuously to a brother mariner) he's one of them fellers. He couldn't go outside the Heads without havin' a death in the fam'ly." And the river salt got up off the box of soap where he had been reposing, gave a vigorous hitch to his breeches, and started off to see that the Lightning Bug was properly discharged before taking on down freight.

Do you Smoke.

There are some few things in this troublous life more momentous than the information that a given man does or does not smoke. There are few matters more worthy of notice, or likely to be more influential, than the sensible utterance of a representative man upon one of the follies of the day. The Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, of London, who is the most prominent clergyman in Great Britain, and who has for years preached to the largest congregations in the United Kindom, has been taken "to do" for habitual smoking whereupon he defends himself in that vigorous style which is so preeminently his characteristic, and says: "The preservation of my liberty may bring upon me the upbraidings of many of the good, and the sneers of the self-righteous; but, I shall endure both with serenity so long as I feel clear in my conscience before God." And that he will do nothing on the sly, and nothing about which he has any doubt.

Whatever may be thought as to the folly or sin of smoking, it is refreshing to hear a man, who has been supposed, sometimes, to live well enough for popular applause, stand up for personal liberty, hedged and guarded by a quick and controlling conscience. What between the theology which deprecates "intellect," and the demands of those religionists who would compel obedience to each and every one of their whims and conceits upon pain of being denied the Christian name and character, it seems as though common sense and individual responsibility were about to be divorced from religion. But the heavens will not fall to-day, and here and there a man will desire to be and do right, without much caring what the town-meeting shall say about it.—Philadelphia All Day City Item.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Wilmington Items.

The latest news from Wilmington, Los Angeles County, we take from the Wilmington Enterprise, of the 12th.

Our next door neighbor, Robert G. Neumann, is getting along finely with his new eating saloon. His custom seems to increase daily. No wonder! He gives a good "square meal" for four bits.

A Wilmingtonian was down at the bar watching the dredging yesterday. After observing closely for a time, in a satisfied tone he said "Well, I must go back to town and buy another lot."

T. B. Hayes has completed the Anaheim wagon road from New River to Wilmington. He is now building a much needed culvert across our principal street. The entire work has been executed in first-class style.

The wild geese seem to grow more numerous and bolder about Wilmington. Yet the hunter who attempts to get in gunshot of them finds himself invariably outwitted by a goose.

Wilmington is a pleasant little town. The flies are quite numerous this season. A dog got his leg broken on Wednesday, and Mrs. Jamieson had twins.

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co., 707 Market street, near Third, because they get better goods for the same price than any other dealers.

EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

California Theatre.

This evening, W. J. Florence will appear as Bob Brierly in "The Ticket of Leave Man." This is a part in which Mr. Florence never fails to please. The play will be produced with a very strong cast and with all the characters. T. W. Keen will play Hawkshaw, John Wilson James Dalton, W. Barry Melter Moss, Robert Pateman Green Jones, Miss Jennie Lee Sam Willoughby, Miss Ellie Wilton Emily St. Evremond and Mrs. Judah Mrs. Willoughby. "The Ticket of Leave Man" will be played at the matinee to-morrow.

Opera House.

Harry Sefton in his original specialties, Billy Emerson and Billy Arlington in "Teutonic Eccentricities," Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble and J. F. Ober-1st in the comic act entitled "Ham-u-let," Billy Emerson in "The Academy of Arts," and other attractive performances will be presented this evening. The full programme will be performed at the matinee to-morrow.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night, and also at the matinee to-morrow, Miss Annette Ince will appear in her remarkably powerful rendition of Blanche de Chellis in "The Sphinx." Beautifully mounted, and well played as this piece is it should crowd the theatre.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"I Want to be a Doctor," Ned Buckley's Regular Army Ho!" "The Detective's Daughter," and a great variety of songs and dances will be performed here this evening.

Horticultural Hall.

On Sunday, the California Thespian Society, assisted by Miss Sydney Cowell, by permission of manager Maguire, and Miss Rellie Deaves, the clever child actress, will give an entertainment at the above-named hall. The performance will commence with the comedietta of "The Loan of a Lover" by Miss Sydney Cowell, J. Lipsis, Miss Carrie Lipsis, Frank Rea, E. C. Allen and D. Belasco. After this Miss Rellie Deaves will appear in an original clog dance, and a social dance will wind up the evening's amusement.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—A grand performance by Gracie and Alvan; the wonderful double pirouette on the horizontal bar, by Clifton; Aleco, the Aztec Indian, and a grand orchestral concert, on Sunday. Among other wonders to be seen in the gardens are two beautiful Gloria Superbas in full bloom.

Notes.

Marshall's Japs went home as a full company by the last China steamer after performing two years and a half in the United States, West Indies and South America. Mr. Marshall had good luck with the troupe, and was glad to send them all home in good health and with enlarged ideas concerning the United States.

Another Basso Gone.

M. Roncovieri, who was a member of every Italian Opera Troupe formed during the last sixteen years and whose rich bass voice was always admired for its power and volume, died this morning after a short illness. M. Roncovieri was a member of the French dramatic company of this city. He was generally liked and his death was much regretted by his fellow artists and many personal friends.

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 338 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 703 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

Blankets and Flannels

A REQUIEM.

BY PHINEO ARKWRIGHT.

I.

That dorg was every inch a dorg,
He knowed his duty straight;
He never missed a fight or fire,
Nor never turned up late.
My heart is broke, I'm much disturbed,
He was the steadfastest pup
That ever spoke for scraps of meat
Or chawed a liver up.

II.

There's many dorgs that useless is
Could better have been spared;
But though he's dead my comfort is
I think he was prepared.
My heart is broke, I'm much depressed,
He was the earnestest pup
That ever sot upon his tail
And cocked his left ear up.

III.

He took his part with other dorgs—
He never shirked, not he,
His comrades to investigate,
Nor missed a post or tree.
My heart is broke, I'm much annoyed,
He was the cheekiest pup,
That ever growled about a bone,
When other dorgs came up.

IV.

He never failed, on no account,
Old women to annoy,
And organ-grinders to torment
Was his especial joy.
My heart is broke, I'm much distressed,
He was the cheerfulest pup
That ever tored a lady's skirt
Or chawed a slipper up.

V.

For cats he had great sympathy,
And showed it in a way
That made 'em glad to see him 'round
'Most any time o' day.
My heart is broke, I'm much concerned,
He was the liveliest pup
That ever treed a Thomas cat
Or chawed a kitten up.

VI.

For settin' hen's his feelin's was
Jocose to a degree,
He made 'em take new interest in
This world of misery.
My heart is broke, I'm much oppressed,
He was the persistentest pup
That ever chased a rooster 'round
Or chawed a chicken up.

VII.

He's gone! The world is dark and drear,
I'm sad and lonely now,
And gloomy retrospection sits
Upon this aching brow.
My heart is broke, I'm much chagrined,
He was the affectionatest pup
That ever wagged a friendly tail
Or coughed a breakfast up.

Womanisms.

Scotch and Irish plaids are fashionable.

Grace Greenwood is lecturing in Colorado.

The most elegant bonnets are of black velvet.

Necklaces of two shades of Roman gold are fashionable.

"Too lovely for anything"—most of the fashionable belles.

A Boston girl caught the small-pox by wearing a hired dress.

Mme. Celeste recently appeared for the 2,331st time in "The Green Bushes"

Ruffles for the neck are made on a foundation of a bright-colored silk, with beautiful effect.

A Salt Lake Mormon is getting rich by hiring out his wives to do washing and house cleaning.

Black velvet underskirts promise to be generally fashionable this season, made with one small ruffle.

The old-fashioned zouave jacket is revived. It is slashed, with black cord, in true military style.

The low corsage prevails for evening dress, as usual. A pretty bunch of flowers is usually worn at the breast.

It is economy to purchase the best black silk. The cheap materials are never worth retaining a second season.

Feather trimming will be all the rage a little later. All the imported street costumes are trimmed with it.

Jet, bugles, beads and gimps everywhere! There never was a period when all four were as fashionable as at present.

The collars are getting more elaborate. They form a sort of square at the back and fall in two deep points in front.

Large bows of ribbon are worn on the shoes now, generally just below the instep. Grecian buckles are also worn.

There's no necessity now for ladies to hold their skirts up when they cross the street. Fashion has obviated that labor.

It isn't the correct thing to have your sunshade or umbrella dangling at your side any more. That style has departed.

The new fashions of very short walking skirts is popular among those who have pretty feet, and are glad to show 'em.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-s

Love and let love.

An airy maiden—A wind-lass.

Mrs. Don Carlos is reputed handsome.

When is a wife like a great coat?—When her husband is wrapped up in her.

A Kansas couple paid their marriage fee in butter. They belonged to the creme de la creme.

The hair of a lady in Montpelier, Vt., turned white in a single night. She fell into a flour barrel.

"Too Old for Kisses" is the title of a poem in the Salt Lake Herald. And this sentiment is uttered in the land of Young.

A bad, wicked newspaper man announces the nuptials of Mr. Bean and Miss Bacon under the head of "A dish of pork and beans."

The bachelors of New Zealand have to pay a single tax of $5. Why do they not marry and show New Zeal-and and double happiness?

The New York Graphic is making war against bonnets in theatres. A penurious husband growls that bonnets always did come too high.

It is asserted that bankers' daughters have gone out of fashion at the South, having been superceded by the daughters of ice manufacturers.

Mattie Smith, of Chesuncook, Maine, stabbed herself with a penknife because her young man would not wait for her at the front gate.

The Women's Journal holds that it is not lying for a woman of forty to swear that her age is twenty-eight, provided she is looking for a husband.

English Journals.

Mr. Baily, of the Danbury News, has recently returned from a scrutinizing journey through the worm eaten monarchies of Europe, and wherever he went he ferreted out things about newspapers. He thinks that "they are rather slow concerns, are the London dailies. They crowd their advertisers into repulsive limits; they mix up their matter without regard to classification; they publish but a beggarly handful of American news; they report in full the most insignificant speeches; they don't seem to realize that there is such an attraction as condensed news paragraphs; they issue no Sunday paper, and but one or two have a weekly, they ignore agriculture and science, personals and gossip; they carefully exclude all humor and head lines, and come to their readers every week day a sombre and mournful spectacle that is most exasperating to behold."

Garters.

The other day after a meeting of a certain famous woman's club in New York, the ladies amused themselves comparing their garters to see which wore the handsomest; for garters of extravagant expense have lately come into fashion, and several of these club members wear theirs clasped with gold and percious stones. The jewelers are all introducing new designs for garter clasps that promise shortly to cost as much as the bracelets that fashion has discarded. A charming woman and singer in society is said to wear a pair of garters that cost $500.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

EXTRA HARD METAL SCOTCH TYPE

MILLER & RICHARD, TYPE FOUNDERS, Edinburg and London, beg leave to call attention to their

which secures the combined advantages of higher finish, increased durability and diminished weight. This metal, after many years' trial under the Hoe and other Machines of the leading London and Eng- lish and Scotch provincial DAILY PAPERS, has been found to be at least TWICE AS DURABLE as the or- dinary type metal, and has gained it very universal preference. The great improvements they have in- troduced in their manufacture, enable them to supply Fonts of this superior metal without any in- crease of Price upon the ordinary quality.

The new type on which the FIGARO is printed is from the above foundry. Every article for a com- plete news or job printing office furnished at the lowest prices.

California Theatre.

This evening, W. J. Florence will appear as Bob Brierly in "The Ticket of Leave Man." This is a part in which Mr. Florence never fails to please. The play will be produced with a very strong cast and with all the characters. T. W. Keen will play Hawkshaw, John Wilson James Dalton, W. Barry Melter Moss, Robert Pateman Green Jones, Miss Jennie Lee Sam Willoughby, Miss Ellie Wilton Emily St. Evremond and Mrs. Judah Mrs. Willoughby. "The Ticket of Leave Man" will be played at the matinee to-morrow.

Opera House.

Harry Sefton in his original specialties, Billy Emerson and Billy Arlington in "Teutonic Eccentricities," Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble and J. F. Oberlist in the comic act entitled "Ham-u-let." Billy Emerson in "The Academy of Arts," and other attractive performances will be presented this evening. The full programme will be performed at the matinee to-morrow.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night, and also at the matinee to-morrow, Miss Annette Ince will appear in her remarkably powerful rendition of Blanche de Chellis in "The Sphinx." Beautifully mounted, and well played as this piece is it should crowd the theatre.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"I Want to be a Doctor," Ned Buckley's Regular Army Ho!" "The Detective's Daughter," and a great variety of songs and dances will be performed here this evening.

Horticultural Hall.

On Sunday, the California Thespian Society, assisted by Miss Sydney Cowell, by permission of manager Maguire, and Miss Nellie Deaves, the clever child actress, will give an entertainment at the above-named hall. The performance will commence with the comedietta of "The Loan of a Lover" by Miss Sydney Cowell, J. Lipsis, Miss Carrie Lipsis, Frank Rea, E. C. Allen and D. Belasco. After this Miss Nellie Deaves will appear in an original clog dance, and a social dance will wind up the evening's amusement.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—A grand performance by Gracie and Alvan; the wonderful double pirouette on the horizontal bar, by Clifton; Aleco, the Aztec Indian, and a grand orchestral concert, on Sunday. Among other wonders to be seen in the gardens are two beautiful Gloria Superbas in full bloom.

Notes.

Marshall's Japs went home as a full company by the last China steamer after performing two years and a half in the United States, West Indies and South America. Mr. Marshall had good luck with the troupe, and was glad to send them all home in good health and with enlarged ideas concerning the United States.

Another Basso Gone.

M. Roncovieri, who was a member of every Italian Opera Troupe formed during the last sixteen years and whose rich bass voice was always admired for its power and volume, died this morning after a short illness. M. Roncovieri was a member of the French dramatic company of this city. He was generally liked and his death was much regretted by his fellow artists and many personal friends.

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 338 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. Also retail Store No. 207 Montgomery street. T

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow,
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 703 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

Blankets and Flannels

A REQUIEM.

BY PHINO ARRWRIGHT.

I.

That dorg was every inch a dorg,
He knowed his duty straight;
He never missed a fight or fire,
Nor never turned up late.
My heart is broke, I'm much disturbed,
He was the steadfastest pup
That ever spoke for scraps of meat
Or chawed a liver up.

II.

There's many dorgs that useless is
Could better have been spared;
But though he's dead my comfort is
I think he was prepared.
My heart is broke, I'm much depressed,
He was the earnestest pup
That ever sot upon his tail
And cocked his left ear up.

III.

He took his part with other dorgs—
He never shirked, not he,
His comrades to investigate,
Nor missed a post or tree.
My heart is broke, I'm much annoyed,
He was the checkiest pup,
That ever growled about a bone,
When other dorgs came up.

IV.

He never failed, on no account,
Old women to annoy,
And organ-grinders to torment
Was his especial joy.
My heart is broke, I'm much distressed,
He was the cheerfulest pup
That ever tored a lady's skirt
Or chawed a slipper up.

V.

For cats he had great sympathy,
And showed it in a way
That made 'em glad to see him 'round
'Most any time o' day.
My heart is broke, I'm much concerned,
He was the liveliest pup
That ever treed a Thomas cat
Or chawed a kitten up.

VI.

For settin' hen's his feelin's was
Jocose to a degree,
He made 'em take new interest in
This world of misery.
My heart is broke, I'm much oppressed,
He was the persistentest pup
That ever chased a rooster 'round
Or chawed a chicken up.

VII.

He's gone! The world is dark and drear,
I'm sad and lonely now,
And gloomy retrospection sits
Upon this aching brow.
My heart is broke, I'm much chagrined,
He was the affectionatest pup
That ever wagged a friendly tail
Or coughed a breakfast up.

Womanisms.

Scotch and Irish plaids are fashionable.

Grace Greenwood is lecturing in Colorado.

The most elegant bonnets are of black velvet.

Necklaces of two shades of Roman gold are fashionable.

"Too lovely for anything"—most of the fashionable belles.

A Boston girl caught the small-pox by wearing a hired dress.

Mme. Celeste recently appeared for the 2,331st time in "The Green Bushes"

Ruffles for the neck are made on a foundation of a bright-colored silk, with beautiful effect.

A Salt Lake Mormon is getting rich by hiring out his wives to do washing and house cleaning.

Black velvet underskirts promise to be generally fashionable this season, made with one small ruffle.

The old-fashioned zouave jacket is revived. It is slashed, with black cord, in true military style.

The low corsage prevails for evening dress, as usual. A pretty bunch of flowers is usually worn at the breast.

It is economy to purchase the best black silk. The cheap materials are never worth retaining a second season.

Feather trimming will be all the rage a little later. All the imported street costumes are trimmed with it.

Jet, bugles, beads and gimps everywhere! There never was a period when all four were as fashionable as at present.

The collars are getting more elaborate. They form a sort of square at the back and fall in two deep points in front.

Large bows of ribbon are worn on the shoes now, generally just below the instep. Grecian buckles are also worn.

There's no necessity now for ladies to hold their skirts up when they cross the street. Fashion has obviated that labor.

It isn't the correct thing to have your sunshade or umbrella dangling at your side any more. That style has departed.

The new fashions of very short walking skirts is popular among those who have pretty feet, and are glad to show 'em.

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

Love and let love.

An airy maiden—A wind-lass.

Mrs. Don Carlos is reputed handsome.

When is a wife like a great coat?—When her husband is wrapped up in her.

A Kansas couple paid their marriage fee in butter. They belonged to the creme de la creme.

The hair of a lady in Montpelier, Vt., turned white in a single night. She fell into a flour barrel.

"Too Old for Kisses" is the title of a poem in the Salt Lake Herald. And this sentiment is uttered in the land of Young.

A bad, wicked newspaper man announces the nuptials of Mr. Bean and Miss Bacon under the head of "A dish of pork and beans."

The bachelors of New Zealand have to pay a single tax of $5. Why do they not marry and show New Zeal-and and double happiness?

The New York Graphic is making war against bonnets in theatres. A penurious husband growls that bonnets always did come too high.

It is asserted that bankers' daughters have gone out of fashion at the 'South, having been superceded by the daughters of ice manufacturers.

Mattie Smith, of Chesuncook, Maine, stabbed herself with a penknife because her young man would not wait for her at the front gate.

The Women's Journal holds that it is not lying for a woman of forty to swear that her age is twenty-eight, provided she is looking for a husband.

English Journals.

Mr. Baily, of the Danbury News, has recently returned from a scrutinizing journey through the worm eaten monarchies of Europe, and wherever he went he ferreted out things about newspapers. He thinks that "they are rather slow concerns, are the London dailies. They crowd their advertisers into repulsive limits; they mix up their matter without regard to classification; they publish but a beggarly handful of American news; they report in full the most insignificant speeches; they don't seem to realize that there is such an attraction as condensed news paragraphs; they issue no Sunday paper, and but one or two have a weekly, they ignore agriculture and science, personals and gossip; they carefully exclude all humor and head lines, and come to their readers every week day a sombre and mournful spectacle that is most exasperating to behold."

Garters.

The other day after a meeting of a certain famous woman's club in New York, the ladies amused themselves comparing their garters to see which wore the handsomest; for garters of extravagant expense have lately come into fashion, and several of these club members wear theirs clasped with gold and percious stones. The jewelers are all introducing new designs for garter clasps that promise shortly to cost as much as the bracelets that fashion has discarded. A charming woman and singer in society is said to wear a pair of garters that cost $500.

Robinson, Elias Lipsis, C. E. Allen, Willie Simms, Bonnie Runnells, C. F. Bailey, C. Feniel, Carrie Lipsis, Jennie Reiffarth, Imogene Holbrook and Madame Muse.

SANTA ROSA.—A masquerade ball is to be given at Ridgway Hall on Thanksgiving evening.

LAKEPORT.—The McGinley Troupe performed here on the 11th.

SCHOOL HOUSE STATION.—Dan O'Connell, T. J Vivian, Miss Lena Morse, Professor Schultze, P. H. McGowan and others, gave a literary and musical entertainment at Granger's Hall on Tuesday evening, for the benefit of St. Ann's Church. It was quite a success.

CHEYENNE.—The Can Can is the rage at McDaniel's Theatre, with Miss Blanche Forrester as leading danseuse.

PORTLAND.—The Ore Fino Theatre was reopened on Friday last when J. Al. Sawtelle appeared in 'Rip Van Winkle," supported by Mrs. Fanny Morgan Phelps, Miss Lizzie Morgan, Miss Kate Zimmer, Little Vivia, Messrs. J. H. LeRoy, James O. Barrow, W. J. Gunning, J. Crowell and others. The Oregonian speaks very highly of Mrs Sawtelle's impersonation of Rip. Dr. J. S. Haskell had Museum Hall during last week, and gave a gift entertainment there.

Ankeny's Hall is undergoing important alterations, and will in a very short time be made into a really handsome theatre. It is to have a stage thirty by fifty feet, with twelve sets of scenes. The chairs used will be the same as those in the California Theatre. The seating capacity will be eight hundred.

ALBANY.—Dr. Haskell lectured here on the 16th.

VIRGINIA CITY.—On Monday evening Mrs. Agnes Booth and Joseph Wheelock commenced an engagement at Piper's Opera House, appearing in "Romeo and Juliet." On Tuesday, "The Lady of Lyons" was presented, on Wednesday, "Much Ado About Nothing," on Thursday, "Elene," and last night, "King John." A matinee to-day, and an evening performance will wind up the engagement. On Monday, Miss Lottie, Miss Katie and their brother Frank, will commence an engagement, and Harry Rickards will also appear. Manager Piper does his best to suit all tastes.

CARSON CITY.—A variety theatre is shortly to be opened here to afford the people amusement during the Winter months.

SALT LAKE.—On the 13th and 14th, the Camp Douglas Amateur Dramatic Company opened the theatre, and gave an entertainment, assisted by the ladies of the Salt Lake Dramatic Company. On Monday last Frank Mayo and Miss Rosa Rand appeared in "Davy Crockett."

Conforming with the Times.

Messrs. Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. The same first-quality grades of liquors which have given this symposium celebraty, will be sold hereafter at popular prices, instead of 25 cents, as formerly 10 Q

Have you visited Ackerman's Grand Central Variety Establishment? If not, you have not seen one of the new features of San Francisco. No. 299 Sutter street near Kearny. 8-bg

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. X

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. H

Dr. Doherty.

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practic, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office, 519 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below the What Cheer House. T

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion. We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

London dates to Oct. 24th, speaks of the re-opening of the Court Theatre, on the 20th, by Miss Marie Lytton and her company as the only novelty of the week. The programme offered no novelty.

The St. James Theatre was to open the 24th.

Rose Hersee, having recovered from her illness, was to sing at the Covent Garden promenade for a brief period, from Nov. 9th.

Drury Lane continued doing well with the spectacle of "Richard Cœur De Leon."

Sothern was drawing well in Lord Dundreary, Linda Dietz, formerly of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, playing Georgiana.

The Opera Comique was to close on the 24th, and be re-opened early in November, under Amy Sheridan.

The Colosseum, in the Regent Park, which has been closed for many years, will be demolished, and on the site a number of mansions are to be erected. The site, with the grounds, cover an area of nearly an acre, and has a frontage on the park of about 250 feet. The Cyclorama, at the rear of the Colosseum, and having its frontage on Albany street, formerly used for panoramic purposes, and which has also been closed for some years, is likewise to be taken down. A number of residences in flats are to be built upon the site.

Mr. G. F. Rowe's drama, entitled "The Geneva Cross," was produced the 17th, at the Adelphi, and met with a good reception. This theatre is the right one for the piece, and it may do well.

The Holborn Theatre, re-opened on the 17th, under James Guiver, who seems to have come to the logical conclusion that, because a racing drama ("Flying Scud"), made the only success that was ever known at this unfortunate house, another piece of racing interest must necessarily thrive here; but the new and similar drama of "Newmarket," is a failure.

The Holborn Amphitheatre also re-opened on the 17th, with an opera bouffe called "Milsume." There is nothing in this, and failure is on the face of the enterprise.

The Strand has brought forward "Old Sailors," a new comedy by H. J. Byron, which is successful. "Leo and the Party who Took Others," is an afterpiece destined to do much for the treasury at this theatre.

A week from hence will be seen Mr. Irving's Hamlet.

The Gaiety is not doing great things. The "Island of Bachelors," takes very fairly, but the programme in other respects is very weak.

Miss Lydia Thompson is doing capitally at the Charing Cross, and the little theatre is crowded every night.

The London Hornet, speaking of the revival of "Dundreary," at the Haymarket Theatre, says:

"Miss Minnie Walton and Linda Dietz, two American actresses, both as pretty as pictures, made their debuts at the Haymarket, and were deservedly successful. It is a pleasure to see such fresh, bright, intelligent faces, and beauty is backed by talent in both these young ladies. Miss Dietz played Georgiana charmingly. Papa Bateman is said to have declared in a moment of excitement: "There's not another actress in the world can lie on a bank like my daughter!' and certainly we do not remember any other actress who could listen to Lord Dundreary like Miss Dietz. Her face is a study—and a very pleasing study—during her long scenes with his lordship. Miss Walton as Mary Meredith, captured the audience at once. She has fair hair, dark eyes, a complexion like milk and roses, a tall, full, graceful figure, and a most musical voice and laugh. Add to this a thorough knowledge of her art, and a frank, hearty, unaffected manner, and you will understand why Miss Walton achieved as decided a success in her way as Mr. Charles Thorne, in "Led Astray," did in his way. All London will go to see these two ladies, and thank Lord Dundreary for the privilege."

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

OPERA HOUSE.—What the San Francisco Minstrels are to New York, Emerson's Minstrels are to San Francisco, and the record of their entertainment as far as patronage is concerned is the same. On comparing the two bills, however, the superiority of the San Francisco entertainment in strength of company and variety of acts is easily discernible. Billy Birch is immensely funny, but he is not a whole show. If any one in the minstrel profession could be a whole show in himself it would be Emerson, for his repertoire is immense, and the public never weary of him. The excellent performance which has crowded the house during the week will be repeated at the matinee to-day, this evening and to-morrow evening.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE.—The dramatic talents of Miss Annette Ince are acknowledged in every part of the United States, and she certainly does some excellent acting in the role of Blanche de de Chellis, in "The Sphinx." Miss Clara Morris is extremely pretty, but in the last scene she becomes hideous and perfectly horrifies the audience. Miss Annette Ince depends more on presenting the fascinations of Blanche de Chellis, in the first acts, and the overwhelming nature of her passion for Henri de Savigney. The scenery of "The Sphinx" is very beautiful and reflects the highest credit on that excellent scenic artist M. Strana. "She Sphinx" will be played at the matinee to-day, this evening, and for the last time to-morrow evening, and on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. On Friday a new play entitled "The Queen of the Arena," will be produced with new scenery and stage effects.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—Seldom has "The Ticket of Leave Man" been better performed than it was last night at this theatre. W. J. Florence gave a generally pleasing and unaffected impersonation of Bob Brierly, though his dialect is scarcely that of the rural districts of Lancashire. Miss Bella Pateman delighted the audience in the role of May Edwards, in which she evinced much power of athos. The characters of Emily St. Evremond and Green Jones, should never be cut out when two such artists as Miss Ellie Wilton and Robert Pateman can be found to play them. The latter played Green Jones for all it was worth, and a good deal more; he did everything he possibly could to make the audience laugh, even to dancing the most wonderful wooden shoe dance ever seen on the stage. This got the people fairly wild with delight and they twice recalled the performer. Miss Wilton looked particularly pretty as the star of the concert room, she can afford however to put more dash into it this evening. Mrs. Judah was excellent in her impersonation of Mrs. Willoughby, John Wilson as James Dalton did a splendid bit of character acting and entirely sank his individuality, T. W. Keene presented a very good realization of Hawkshaw, and of course brought down the house in the great scene in the fourth act, W. Barry as the amiable old Melter Moss was very amusing S. W. Leach was a model banker, in the character of Mr Gibson, and E. N. Thayer was a model publican, as Maltby. It is not very long ago that Lotta starred in the character of Sam Willoughby, and gave an absurd caricature of that youth. She ought to have seen Miss Jennie Lee perform the part last night. There was no suggestion of an actress playing a boy, but it was a real, live, scapegrace boy who frolicked round the stage and did all sorts of boyish things. We don't think that Sam Willoughby is a good part to star in; if it were there would be millions in it for Miss Jennie Lee, for she is certainly far ahead of any one who has ever attempted it. In the fourth act she dressed it in the most gentlemanly manner, and sang "I'm so Clevah" in a style that perfectly brought down the house. The accent was extremely good, and reminded us of some one or other we have met somewhere or other. The "Ticket-of-Leave Man" will be performed at the matinee to-day and again this evening.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—Frank Mortimore and Harry Devoy in "Hard Cheek," Johnny Tuers and others in "I Want to be a Doctor," "Ned Buckley's Regular Army Oh!" and "The Detective's Daughter," are among the attractions at this house to-night.

COSMOPOLITAN BAL MASQUE.—"Everything depends upon the way in which it's done." In the present case it is being done thoroughly by the manager-in-chief, Sam Genese, and Fred Whymper as business and press agent. In brief, there will be a capital band at Horticultural Hall, on Thanksgiving night, under J. Allen; lots of new music specially imported; the new Choral Quadrilles," where a select choir will give popular songs while the dancing proceeds; new French grotesque quadrilles; refreshments in first-class style; bar kept by Slinkey, of "Bon Ton" fame; costumes by Mrs Tayler, who will have a selection at the Hall itself; tickets at M. Gray's, around town generally and at the doors. This will be the first real carnival ball ever given here.

HORTICULTURAL HALL.—Grand Ball.—On Sunday, the California Thespian Society, assisted by Miss Sydney Cowell, by permission of manager Maguire, and Miss Rellie Deaves, the clever child actress, will give an entertainment at the above-named hall. The performance will commence with the comedietta of "The Loan of a Lover" by Miss Sydney Cowell, J. Lipsia, Miss Carrie Lipsia, Frank Rea, E. C. Allen and D. Belasco. After this Miss Rellie Deaves will appear in an original clog dance, and a social dance will wind up the evening's amusement.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS.—A grand performance by Gracie and Alvan; the wonderful double pirouette on the horizontal bar, by Clifton; Aleco, the Aztec Indian, and a grand orchestral concert, on Sunday. Among other wonders to be seen in the gardens are two beautiful Gloria Superbas in full bloom.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining-rooms. Guido Mangenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain railroad.

CITY GARDENS.—These gardens present a very pleasing appearance just now. The flowers and shrubs are bright and beautiful. To-morrow there will be an instrumental concert by Charles Alpers' band, and a ball in the afternoon and evening. Admission 25 cents to all.

NOTES.—Charles Vivian, the popular character vocalist, has returned to this city from Eureka, Humboldt county, for the purpose of forming a dramatic company with which to open his theatre there. He has leased it for the Winter season, and will see that the Eureka people are amused. Vivian has traveled extensively in California, Oregon and Washington Territory, and in every town where he has performed he has captured the inhabitants. He has arranged a circuit for next year and will remain for some time longer to enjoy the balmy climate of California.

The Alta gives the following report of the movements of John McCullough: John McCullough closed his engagement in Cincinnati with great eclat. He was received with delight in "Virginius" and "Othello"—a delight which culminated in an ovation when "The Gladiator" was produced, and continued during the remainder of the engagement. After the New Orleans engagement, Mr. McCullough will return with all haste to San Francisco to play one week before the night fixed for the Cushman engagement.

Montgomery Queen's horses and other animals have gone into Winter quarters at Haywards. A practising ring has been constructed in order that the horses may not become rusty in their accomplishments. The Spring campaign will commence in California with new talent from the East.

"No Thoroughfare" will be produced at the California Theatre, on Monday, with new scenery and mechanical effects. Of Mr Florence, in the character of Obenreizer, the Inter-Ocean spoke as follows when he was recently performing in Chicago; Mr. Florence's impersonation of the wily and malignant Swiss, showed him to be in all respects a most thorough and talented artist in voice, looks, gesture, costume, and in his assumption of the peculiar dialect, he was as near perfection as possible, and the result was an individualization at once vigorous, true and unique; such a one as we rarely see now-a-days, and one which rises to the dignity of high art. Those who have heretofore only recognized in Mr. Florence the merry, rollicking, whisky-bibbing and shillalah-twirling Irishman, would have been surprised to have witnessed his really wonderful delineation of Obenreizer last evening. It was the work of a true artist, and more than deserved the recognition which it received.

The famous artistes, Leopold and Geraldine, whose reputation, as gymnasts, is second to that of no other performers will begin an engagement at the Opera House, on Monday night.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

In New York, at Niblo's, there was a change of programme on the 16th. "The Deluge" being withdrawn. Donald McKay and his Warm Spring Indians, appeared on the 16th.....At Wallack's, the attraction was Boucicault's new Irish drama entitled "The Shawgraun," which was produced with the following cast: The Shawgraun (vagabond), Dion Boucicault; an English officer, J. H. Montague; an Irish girl, Miss Ada Dyas; parish priest, J. Gilbert, the approver, Harry Beckett; the jackeen, Mr. Arnott; peasant girl, Ione Burke; fenian fugitive, J. B. Polk; the keener, Mrs. Sefton; the Irish mother, Madame Ponisi. The meaning of "Shaugrawn" or "Seacran" is vagabond, or rather a state of vagabondage, and was illustrated by the hero of the new play. The plot concerns the Fenians of the present time, and the principal time, and the principal character is of the Don Cæsar dare-devil type. New scenery and novel effects were prepared with unusual care, in order to render the salient situations as startling as possible.....At the San Francisco Minstrels they were running a burlesque of "Col. Sellers," entitled "There's Millions in It."

.....At the Park Theatre, "Col. Sellers," with John T. Raymond in the title role, was running to immense business.....At Booth's Theatre, Joe Jefferson appeared on the 9th in "Rip Van Winkle," and on the 14th Miss Kate Field, the popular writer, made a successful debut as Peg Woffington in "Masks and Faces".....At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, "Masks and Faces" was produced on the 10th with Miss Fanny Davenport as Peg Woffington, and Miss Louise Allen as Mabel Vane.....At Tony Pastor's, the new additions on the 9th were the Cawthornes in a musical entertainment, and John and Shed Le Clairin, gymnastic feats.....At the Olympic, Sam Rickey, Master Barney, Nully Pieris, Gus Williams, J. H. O'Neil, and other favorite artistes appeared.....Frank Hussey, Miss Blanche Clifton, J. L. Davis and his educated dogs and other attractions caused business at the Metropolitan Theatre to be good.....Emily Soldene and her opera bouffe company, continued successful at the Lyceum Theatre.....The Mulligan Guards reconstructed was popular at the Theatre Comique.....Oliver Doud Byron was playing at Wood's Museum in "Donald McKay".....Miss Charlotte Thompson reappeared at the Union Square Theatre on the 16th in "Jane Eyre".....Frederick Maccabe has achieved a genuine success with his sparkling entertainment entitled "Begone, Dull Care," Steinway Hall being well filled since our last report. His season at that hall is to close on Nov. 28, and on the 30th he will resume his performances at Robinson Hall.....John F. Poole has assumed the management of the Olympic Theatre.....W. A. Mestayer opened at the Bowery Theatre in "The Hoodlum, or Life in Frisco" on the 9th.

The Gourlays commenced an engagement at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia on the 9th. The City Item says: The entertainment was somewhat monotonous, as a whole evening devoted Scotch lingo must prove in this country—but the Gourlays are sufficiently clever to please. They remain only this week.

The Chicago Tribune remarks: "Actors and actresses in the past have fancied that because they were admired in Chicago, they would be absolutely worshipped elsewhere. Some of them, like Agnes Perry-Booth and Joe Wheelock, had the shrewdness to test themselves carefully in New York before skipping into national notice. They met with some measure of success, but would still achieve more credit, and nearly as great an income, if attached to a stock of acknowledged excellence. And they are two of the most fortunate examples. Olive Logan, once a Chicago actress, is sinking all the cash acquired by her meritorious literary labors, and those of her husband, trying to make the country believe she is a star in the dramatic firmament. Frank Aiken is another noteworthy illustration of the fact that a little success in Chicago is not absolutely certain to be followed by great success everywhere else. Only home examples have been cited. The records of other localities teem with instances similarly dismal. Yes, the same remark applies to almost every city, where the vanity of actors and actresses leads them to believe they can accumulate a fortune by 'starring' it."

Mr. Geo. W Ryer, long popular as the able business manager of Mrs. F. B. Conway's Brooklyn Theatre, has severed his connection with that house, and is now engaged with Mr. H. C. Bispham, animal artist and portrait painter, Exposition Buildings.

Cole's N. Y and N. O. Zoological and Equestrian Exposition will winter at Quincy, Ill., 5th.

John S. Clarke made his first appearance in three years at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia on the 16th, in Byron's drama "Red Tape." At the conclusion of his Philadelphia engagement, he will play in New York.

Miss Neilson and Mr. J. H. Barnes opened at the National Theatre, Washington, on the 9th.

Miss Rogers Randolph opens at Robinson's Opera House, Cincinnati, on the 15th.

The Kellogg Opera Troupe commenced a season in Cincinnati on the 16th.

Henry Ward Beecher, Salem, 12th.

Victoria Woodhull lectured at Scranton, Pa., 12th.

Elise Mordaunt in a lecture, Denver, 15th; Salt Lake, 22d; thence California.

Pepper and looking-glass ghosts, Omaha, 9th and 10th.

James Wambold has been sent to a lunatic asylum. Domestic troubles are said to have been the cause of his mental aberration.

Delehanty and Hengler, Ward's Opera House, Fall River, 9th.

Sophie and Irene Worrell's Burlesque Troupe, Mobile, 9th, one week.

The Kiralfy Brothers are actively preparing for the production of the "Black Crook" at the Grand Opera House during the current month. They advertise for 500 ballet girls to apply at once. Bolanti and Lupo are engaged.

The sale of Booth's Theatre, under foreclosure of mortgage, announced for the third time, was again indefinitely postponed on the 5th, the mortgage creditors having become satisfied that their interests might be better subserved by delay.

Lawrence Barrett and Troupe, Pittsburgh, 9th, two weeks; Cleveland, 23d, two weeks.

The New York Mercury says: James O'Neill, a bill-poster of this city, received on the 7th, from the Court of Special Sessions, a ten days' caging in the City Prison for covering with his bills those of the Fifth Avenue Theatre. This is worth mentioning, as the first conviction under the law passed by the last Legislature to protect the rights of managers. As an aggravation of the case the bills were on private boards upon the curbstones.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers, Rochester, one week; Kansas City, 23d.

Julius Constantine Fink, professionally known as J. F. Constans, recently died at his parents' residence, in Philadelphia, aged twenty-three. He was for a long time a member of the Chestnut Street Theatre company, under E. L. Davenport, and of late was connected with Albaugh's Opera House, Albany, where he was taken ill. To the discredit of the clergy seven of their number refused to bury him because he was an actor, but the Rev. Samuel Dubarow readily did so. Mr. Dubarow will be in future the Philadelphia Dr. Houghton and another "Little Church Round the Corner" favorite.

Charlotte Cushman, Academy, Philadelphia, Nov 9, two weeks.

Speaking of Charlotte Cushman in Philadelphia, the critic of the Age expresses himself as follows:—We need only say that Miss Cushman's acting belongs to the best type of the old school—careful, minute, impressive, which lets no minor details pass unheeded, but deepens every line and emphasizes every shade. Specially noteworthy in Miss Cushman's acting is the fine, clear, deliberate enunciation, the majestic action, and that singular power of the eye which seems almost the exclusive prerogative of the thorough and sympathetic artist. It is also affluent in strong, hearty earnestness, and that magnetic power which compels an audience to believe an artist is really the person assumed. Each representative of the part is marked by some new and subtle appreciation of the Queen's character illustrated in such a manner as to freshen the performance and make the lesson more bold, striking and impressive.

Among the artistes engaged in Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, are Jolly Nash, the English violinist; Cogill and Cooper, the California song and dance men; Signor Raeffael Abecco, the harpist; and El Nino Eddie. "The Black Crook" was in preparation.

The Washington, D. C., Critic makes the following complimentary remarks concerning the company engaged at the National Theatre:—Miss Neilson, as Rosalind, in that pretty play "As You Like It," last night, acquitted herself with the highest satisfaction to all present, as she always does; but, then, Miss Neilson is in the hands of the Philistines, so to speak; for she was the only good actor on the stage last night. Foreburg may do as Sikesy, or a bloody butcher, but for a decent play he is not worth a cent. Why, one of the actors actually died on his knees and elbows like a beef, and other supporters did acts quite as ridiculous. For instance, one would-be actor reminded us of the fellow who leads the funeral procession in "Richard," when his demeanor should have been the very opposite. In fact, a new company would be the appropriate thing at the National if it is proposed to present any more stars as good as Miss Neilson. "Romeo and Juliet" will be presented to-night again, when Miss Neilson will appear in her charming character of Juliet. Go and see her for her own sake.

A New York correspondent says of Strackosch's chorus:

A more motely crew than the chorus of the Italian Opera in this country cannot conveniently be found.

The chorus of the Strackosch troupe, now at the Academy, consisting of sixty or seventy persons, is composed of Germans, French, Italians, Spaniards, English, Americans, Dutch, Scotch, and Cubans. The men have been soldiers, tradesmen, peddlers, commissionaires, valets, barbers, image-makers, tavern-keepers, guides, interpreters and donkey-drivers.

The women have been seamstresses, cooks, milliners, music-teachers, bar-maids, grape-gatherers, laundresses, servants, ballet-girls, supernumeraries, book-binders, and sardine-preparers.

In conversation with them, I have been struck by the variety of their fortunes as well as of their nationality. Many of them have traveled all over Europe and over a good part of Asia and Africa. Several of the male chorus have sung in the principal cities of the United States, also in Edinburgh, Dublin, Lisbon, Madrid, Havana, Paris, Genoa, Naples, Rome, Venice, Dresden, Geneva, Amsterdam, Vienna, Warsaw, St. Petersburg, Palermo, Malta, and Cairo.

The experiences and adventures of the chorus have been very singular and romantic, although they do not suspect it, and if they were carefully written out and arranged would make an exceedingly interesting volume, or rather set of volumes. Uneducated people, lacking self-consciousness, seldom attach significance to what they have observed and endured.

Jarrett & Palmer will begin a "Black Crook" revival at the Grand Opera House, Nov. 23. Preparations of unusual magnitude are in progress in order to make this the spectacular sensation of the season.

The Tomb of George Frederick Cooke.

One of the most interesting theatrical relics in this country, is the tomb of George Frederick Cooke, in St. Paul's churchyard, New York. Cooke died in 1812, and his remains were buried in a vault beneath St. Paul's church, where they rested nine years. In 1821 Edmund Kean, who was acting in this country at the time, caused the remains of his famous exemplar and predecessor in the tragic art to be disinterred and laid in a grave in the churchyard, over which he erected the tomb that marks this storied spot. It was at this time that Dr. Francis took possession of Cooke's skull, and Kean secured the bone of his forefinger. —an act of reverential desecration described by the Doctor himself, in his book about Old New York. In 1846 the tomb of Cooke had fallen into decay, and Charles Kean, who had come hither to act, caused the structure erected by his father to be repaired. Time and the storms have dealt with it severely since then, and last Summer it was seen to be again in a dilapidated state. Mr. Sothern observed this, and at his direction and expense, the tomb has once more been put in order. The stones are now firmly cemented, and the whole structure is bound together in the interior with iron anchors, so that now the tomb is more substantial than it ever was, and is likely to resist decay and tempest for many years. Mr. Sothern has done a worthy action in thus contributing to secure the permanence of this memorial to a great actor. The lettering on the tomb has been recut, and it should be noted, in recognition of the fidelity of a good man, that Mr. T. E. Mills, of Wallack's Theatre—by whom the subject was brought to Mr. Sothern's notice—has personally attended to the repairs and acted as the Old Mortality of this proceeding. The inscriptions on Cooke's tomb are as follows :

A Pleasant Exhibition.

The Yreka Journal of the 18th says:

The spotted boy and his companion, the boa constrictor, also Miss Matilda Sanvill, the smallest lady in the world, 19 years old and 31 inches in height, were exhibited Monday evening at Kessler's Theatre. About a dozen monkeys were also along with the show on exhibition.

We hope that the spotted boy's "companion" won't turn himself into a boy constrictor some day and thus break up the show.

Limiting Them.

There are no millionaires in Turkey. When a Turk has accumulated anything beyond $9,000 or $10,000, the boss Turk of all crooks his finger at him, whispers, "Come down, honey," and the balance is handed over, or off goes a head.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. H

Dr. Doherty.

Has devoted his study more particularly to chronic and specific practic, and as such is now the most successful of any Physician in San Francisco. Office, 519 Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, a few doors below the What Cheer House. T

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

OUT OF SOCIETY

All people's social and wedding parties are not noticed by the daily press. Jack Williams got married the other day to Angelina Smith, and there was not a word about it in the newspapers, that is, there wasn't any gratuitous notice. Neither Jack nor Angelina expected or wished any notice beyond the mere announcement, but it was not so with Mr. Scrubbs, a maternal uncle of Angelina. He said he would be dangswizzled (some mining phrase we believe) if his niece wasn't as good as anyone else, and as to the party it was as pleasant a party as he ever attended and his wife was determined there should be a notice of it, and he was willing to gratify her and didn't care what it cost. So Mrs. Scrubbs made out a list of the guests present and we'll be dangswizzled if (although Jack and Angelina and Scrubbs and Mrs. Scrubbs and the whole lot of them are not at all society people) old Scrubbs didn't get that into one of the bit papers. But alas it was charged at twenty-five cents a line, and to add insult to injury, the proprietor made the printer put a * at the end of it which did not mean that it was a star affair, but that the notice was paid for at regular advertising rates. It is a terrible thing to some people to be out of society. Others don't suffer so much.

Literary Style.

A writer in Scribner's says: No man of power can do himself a greater wrong than to make an attempt to acquire the style of another man, under the impression that that style will fill his thought. He might as well have his clothes made to his neighbor's measure. There is not chance in a thousand of a fit, unless it be a fit of disappointment or disgust. The sensittiveness of language to the impulses and characteristics of the spirit that sits behind and utters it is one of the marvels of the world. Its flexibility in shaping itself to every variety of thought and every form of imagination, its power to transmit an atmosphere or an aroma which no analysis or word or expression betrays, and the ease with which it is made either puerile or majestic, in accordance with the spirit of its maker, show that style, unborn of the individual, is an utterly valueless attainment. We can imagine no good to come from "attaining" a style by studying other men, except perhaps, to cover up the literary coxcombry of such writers as Willis, the rythmical follies of such men as Poe, or the affected barbarism of—Mr. Emerson knows who, because he once did the world great mischief by praising him.

More "Opinions."

The Calistoga Free Press observes: The FIGARO, San Francisco, devoted to theatrical matters, lately donned a new dress—type from the Pacific Foundry. Looks as bright and sparkling as a dewdrop. Lively, vivacious, interesting.

The Corvallis Gazette, speaking of FIGARO says: This spicy little paper, published daily by J. P. Bogardus, San Francisco, comes to us in an entirely new dress, which is really handsome. FIGARO is the "organ of amusements," and contains a large amount of interesting and instructive reading on almost every imaginable topic.

FIGARO—San Francisco's journal of amusements—has put on a bright new suit of outer gear, from the furnishing house of Messrs. Ellis, Brand & Co. Always bright and sparkling, FIGARO is doubly so in its new toggery.—Alameda Encinal.

Balloon Marriages.

Marriage is an honorable estate and on no account to be lightly undertaken, and these balloonatic marriages are objectionable in many ways, but especially in this, that parties are in no condition to intermarry when they are so far up in the world and without visible means of support.

Training His Nerves.

A Cincinnati papers says :

A cashier of a bank in this city has read so many accounts in the papers of late of bank robbers entering a cashier's house at night, gagging and binding the inmates and obliging the cashier to go and open the bank safe, that he is very nervous on the subject. He is satisfied he will yet have a visit of that kind, do what he may to avoid it, and he thinks the next best thing his family can do is to learn to go through the ordeal with as much composure as possible. Accordingly he has been putting them through a rehearsal every night for a week or so past, greatly to their terror and inconvenience. He acts the part of bank robber himself. In the dead of night he awakes his wife, and pressing a vinegar cruet against her head, commands her in low, gruff tones to get up and make no noise on pain of having her brains instantly blown out with the vinegar cruet. Then he binds her to the bed-post and gags her with the baby's gutta percha rattle. The children and servants he gags and locks up in convenient closets, and then stuffing a flatiron-holder into his own mouth and pressing a bologna sausage against each temple he marches himself securely off to unlock the bank. Cold weather coming on now it is not altogether comfortable, and the family think they prefer to take the risk of the robbers.

The Danbury Man in England.

Bailey, the Danbury News man, is publishing his impressions of England in a series of letters to his paper. He makes the following remark among others: The English are as unostentatious in their names as in other things. John is the common male and Jane is the popular female cognomen. I begin to think that nearly all the female servants are called "Jane;" I am not sure there is not an act of Parliament to that effect. The term "servant" is used in a broader sense than in our country. The employes of a company are called "servants" whether they are at the head or foot of the list. Imagine an American railway ticket-seller called a servant. But it is too dreadful to think of, and, fortunately, no one would dare do it.

When a Nevada miner leaps into a saloon, with a revolver in each hand and a bowie knife under his arm, and asks, "Who runs this ere soul-destroying shebang?" echo is left to answer, while the crowd fall out of the back door.

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 213 Sutter street near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. P

EUROPEAN

Bals d'Opera!

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

Maguire's New Theatre.

The last nights of "The Sphinx" are announced and those who have not yet seen Miss Annette Ince in her artistic and powerful delineation of the character of Blanche de Chellis must not delay paying a visit to this theatre. The piece is beautifully mounted and capitally played. The effectiveness of the final scene has been much inreased since the first night.

California Theatre.

To-night after careful preparation the drama of "No Thoroughfare," will be produced with new scenery and mechanical appliances. W. J Florence will appear in his favorite role of Obenreizer the Swiss. Miss Bella Pateman will appear as Marguerite Obenreizer's ward, T. W. Keene as George Vendale, N. Decker as Walter Wilding, Robert Pateman as Joe Ladle, Mrs. C. R. Saunders as Sally Goldstraw and Miss Louisa Johnstone as Madame Dor. In the prologue Mrs. Sophie Edwin will play the Veiled Lady and Tillie Darling Walter Wilding. A full synopsis of scenery and incidents is published on our first page. A matinee will be given on Thanksgiving Day.

Opera House.

To-night in addition to all the attractions offered by the inimitable Billy Emerson and his great band of minstrels, Leopold and Geraldine the star gymnasts of the East will make their appearance at this house. Harry Gordon, the musical phenomenon will also appear, Harry Sefton will present his amusing eccentricities, "The Conspirators" from La Fille de Madame Angot, will be performed, and altogether an extraordinarily attractive entertainment will be given. There will be a matinee performance on Thanksgiving Day.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Ned Buckley's Regular Army Oh!" "Stocks Up," and other acts are very popular, and the drama of "The Detective's Daughter," in which Frank Martimore, Johnny Tuers, Miss Maggie Brewer and others appear, is well played.

COSMOPOLITAN BAL MASQUE.—"Everything depends upon the way in which it's done." In the present case it is being done thoroughly by the manager-in-chief, Sam Gencse, and Fred Whymper as business and press agent. In brief, there will be a capital band at Horticultural Hall, on Thanksgiving night, under J. Allen; lots of new music specially imported; the new Choral Quadrilles," where a select choir will give popular songs while the dancing proceeds; new French grotesque quadrilles; refreshments in first-class style; bar kept by Slinkey, of "Bon Ton" fame; costumes by Mrs Taylor, who will have a selection at the Hall itself; tickets at M. Gray's, around town generally and at the doors. This will be the first real carnival ball ever given here.

Notes.

Alfred Wilkie, the tenor, left for the East this morning, en route for England, where he is to remain for two years studying under the best masters and developing his fine voice. Mr. Wilkie came here with Madame Anna Bishop in July, 1873, and sang at all her concerts in this city. He afterwards travelled with her through the interior of this State, Oregon, Washington Territory and British Columbia. Returning here he dissolved his connection with the company in January 1874. Since then he has sung at church and at numerous concerts. He was elected a member of the Bohemian Club and an honorary member of the Handel and Haydn Society. He bears with him the best wishes of his professional associates and a large circle of friends.

Preparations are being made for the production of a magnificent Christmas piece at Maguire's New Theatre. M. Strauss, the scenic artist is engaged on a beautiful transformation scene, and a ballet will be imported from New York.

"The Queen of the Arena" will be produced at Maguire's New Theatre on Friday.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

WAITING FOR LUCK.

Ho! ye who listless and moping
Sit dismally twirling your thumbs,
And gloomily waiting and watching
For something that thus never comes;
You might just as well, foolish mortals,
Expect by lightning you'll be struck;
One will happen as soon as the other!
Don't stand around waiting for luck.

There's a saying—a good and a true one—
(Take courage you poor one who delves
With a stout heart so bravely) that "Heaven
Will help those who first help themselves;"
And you'll find, if you wish for good fortune,
A pretty good way is to tuck
Up your shirt-sleeves and start out and find it,
Don't sit around waiting for luck.

You may pine and mope on forever—
Find fault and deplore your hard fate—
But you'd better remember the proverb
And act on it ere it's too late;
You may pout and grumble forever,
Just so long you will find you are stuck
In mire of sloth and abasement—
Don't sit aroond waitng for luck!

There is wealth to be had—go and seek it!
And with it get honor and and fame;
By the sweat of your brow you can gain them,
And carve for yourself a proud name;
But to do this takes tact and ambition,
Persistency, hope—and some pluck,
Are you ready?—then lose not a moment!
Don't sit around waitiug for luck!

Intemperance.

It is not the happy and prosperous man for whom you fear the evils and dangers of intemperance—it is not he who, as a rule, becomes a drunkard; but it is the man whose affairs have become deranged, whose embarrasments have multiplied, whose sufferings of body and mind have driven him to the temporary relief which the use of alcoholic stimulants oftentimes affords. What part has been played, and is played every day in the creation of drunkards by the extravagance of their wives and daughters, and others who depend upon them for support? The physiology of intemperance is one that has, fortunately, received more care and more thought from scientific men recently than at any former period, and the fact is becoming, by those who study the question, and are best competent to speak upon it, to be admitted that the excessive use of alcoholic stimulant resulting in intemperance is a physical disease, just as much as any other disease that afflicts the human frame—that there is necessarily no connection with it of a moral nature.

Schneider.

Mlle. Hortense Schneider, Parisian queen of the opera bouffe, was in her youth a working girl, and the daughter of an humble tailor at Bordeaux. She is now, at about forty, living in the style of a sultana. Her diamonds are valued at $200,000, and among her other jewels of fabulous cost is cited an emerald set of surpassing splendor. Her apartments are crowded with the most expensive furniture and objets de vertu. Bronzes and marbles and pictures and crystals and Sevres porcelain and Gobelin tapestry are scattered through her rooms in sumptuous profusion. Although the charm of youth is forever lost to Mlle. Schneider, she still has the handsomest arms and hands, the prettiest foot, and the merriest blue eyes that flash and sparkle and entice behind the Purisian footlights.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F, Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. How is This.

Miss Fanny Marston some time ago used to go to a country town and get a notice in the local journal in which she was compared to Jenny Lind, Parepa Rosa, and all the great singers of the present century. The Hollister Enterprise does not appear to have been captured by either the vocalist or her agent. It says: Miss Fannie Marston gave her long heralded concert Thursday evening. The house was moderately well filled and everyone was on the tip toe of curiosity to hear the great California prima donna warble her lays. Whether public expectation had been wrought up too high, from the deficient acoustic properties of the hall, or a lack of merit in the singer, as a faithful chronicler of events we must say that Miss Marston did not give the satisfaction that was anticipated, and many were disappointed. The lady has an excellent voice, which she can throw into a high scale with much apparent ease, it is well adapted to operatic airs, and not deficient in sweetness, but in some of her ballads it must be confessed that she made a lamentable failure. She was assisted by a couple of gentlemen, whose names, (in the absence of programmes) we do not definitely know. One thrummed the piano in good style, and could retreat behind the scenery after the execution of each piece with the stiffest spinal column of any man we ever saw. The other seemed to be manager and general "supe" of the outfit, whose attempted singing reminded us of the feeble cawing of a young crow perched on a worm-fence, on the edge of a Missouri corn field. If he possessed any other merit we failed to observe it.

Decidedly Indecent.

A good story is told by a distinguished sculptor of the cool reception which his mother gave to his first attempt in the plastic art. "It was the figure of a woman looking out upon the sea, as if trying to catch a glimpse of the vessel that contained her sailor-husband. The figure was scarcely demi-draped about the neck—which seemed to have been the only point which struck the good lady's attention. "Well, what do you think of her?" asked the young man eagerly, expectant of his mother's praise. "I think," said the matron, with decision, "that no decent woman would be seen out of doors in such a plight."

Charlotte Cushman.

Miss Cushman, even at her advanced age, will probably find her present leave-taking of the stage a mistake, and wish to return to it by and by. When in Rome she was a physical sufferer, and her physician there, as we have been told, could not help her. She returned to the United States not to resume the stage, but to rest and to die. Her American physician advised a return to the stage and a more active life. The advice was taken, and Miss Cushman has been in better health ever since.

A Mother of Actresses.

Mrs. Alexander Drake, an actress of bygone celebrity, lives in Kentucky, near Louisville, aged eighty-seven. She first played in Pittsburg, sixty years ago, as Jane Shore, and her last appearance, as Lady Macbeth, five months ago in Louisville, Ky., at a benefit tendered her after a long retirement. The Chapman sisters, of California, are her grandchildren.

The new fashions of very short walking skirts is popular among those who have pretty feet, and are glad to show 'em.

When is a wife like a great coat?—When her husband is wrapped up in her.

The Young Man from the East.

"I'm a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

A Promising Critic.

The musical editor of Demorest's Monthly says: "No one should undertake to criticise music who cannot accurately whistle an air from any opera." Demorest should at once engage a young gentleman who condescends to make a living in the FIGARO office. He can whistle all the tunes that ever were invented. We know him by experience. And if Demorest will only send for him, and promise to give him a good salary, plenty to eat, and a healthy clubbing every day, we'll present him the youth without shedding a tear. There's the making of a great critic in him, we suppose. He's been as fine a source of pleasure to us as gout would be to a policeman, or a felon to a blacksmith. If he doesn't make a great musical critic then the musical editor of Demorest's Monthly is mistaken, and we'll have to endure still more of his whistling. We don't want it whispered abroad—in fact, we want to keep the idea to ourselves—but we will say that the man who does whistle and the one who admires whistling should be locked in a room, the key thrown away, and the building blown to atoms. We'd shed a tear for the whistler, but laugh with demoniac enjoyment over the fate of the man who likes whistling.

Irreverent.

One of those irreverent daily papers publishes the following as if there were something funny in it:

A New Bedford clergyman amazed his congregation last Sunday by suddenly leaving his pulpit, trotting down the aisle, and striding off toward home. The choir sang, and then there was awkward, fidgetty waiting. Soon the pastor shot into the church again, sopping perspiration from his forehead with his handkerchief, and read his sermon without explanation. He had forgotten his manuscript, that was all. Some of those who waited to hear the sermon wished he hadn't found it.

An Unmusical Angel.

There is gentleman living on Seventh street who sings with great force of expression, "I want to be an an Angel." He has corns on his toes, rheumatism, and the neuralgia. All those who hear him sing want him to die. They don't usually express the hope that he will be an angel. They generally say: "He be d-d-doubly blowed."

Waiting for the First.

There is said to be a young man connected with a dry goods store in this city who has not been sober since July, owing to the joy he experiences when thinking of the reform oath he proposes taking on New Year's Day.

HOPE.

Why on earth Hope should be ranked among the Cardinal Virtues, we cannot imagine. It is a dangerous thing when indulged in to excess. A man full of Charity is in a healthy condition, a man full of Hope is a maniac. Hope is a disease with some people. It is not only the harm that they do to themselves by indulging in this Cardinal Virtue, that must be considered, but also the mischief they do to others. There is Charles O'Meary, as good, wholesouled a fellow as ever lived, the only fault he has is too much Hope. He is chock full of it. He thinks nothing of ordering a suit of clothes of that famous merchant tailor, William Geimann, of Montgomery street, at a time when his whole capital amounts to two dollars and a half; tell him you are hard up and must have twenty dollars, he will say "Me dear boy, you shall have it at three o'clock this afternoon." If you are in want of a house, he will promise to get you one ready furnished, rent free. He really believes he can do these things. He is hopeful. He doesn't tell lies intentionally. Nevertheless, good fellow as Charles is, he is many times a nuisance. He infects people with Hope. They depend on him and are bitterly disappointed. Faith isn't much of a virtue either. It was very well of St. Paul to say "the greatest of these is Charity." If he were living in these days, he would come to the conclusion that Charity was really the only virtue worth mentioning. It is certainly of inestimable value on account of its rarity. Micawber should certainly have been accounted a virtuous man—he was full of Hope—but Hope threw off on him every time. Hope is a humbug, and often a nuisance.

The Danger of a Mother-in-Law.

Those New York papers are death on mothers-in-law. One of them says:

We learn from our foreign exchanges that Marshal Bazaine is near Liege, awaiting the arrival of his mother-in-law, and when she arrives that he will proceed to Santader to reside as a private individual, holding aloof from politics. Poor man, we guess his mother-in-law will give him enough of bother, without his mixing in the troubles of politics. We never heard of any great man who had a mother-in-law. There was old Socrates. Would he ever have become the great philosopher he was if he had a mother-in-law to back up his loving wife Xantippe? He would have taken the herbane before the State ordered him to indulge in the draught if there had been a mother-in-law. Would Cæsar have crossed the Rubicon, if he had been honored with a mother-in-law? Would Hannibal have conquered Spain and kept Rome in fright for years had he been the happy recipient of a mother-in-law's advice? Not much. After he married and his wife's mother interfered with his plans of battle, Scipio Africanus knocked spots out of him, and he was glad to get rid of his mother-in-law even at the expense of laying Carthage in ashes. Napoleon Bonaparte was always successful until he got a father-in-law—even so near an approach to the awful relation will crush the most magnificent genius. Our own Washington had no mother-in-law, hence America is a free nation. History teaches us that greatness and a mother-in-law are utterly irreconcilable. Young men of America, who aren't married, take warning.

"Reverend Rascal."

The New York Dispatch of the 15th says:

On our first page will be found a very interesting article under the foregoing heading. It is timely, as at present the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, the Brooklyn slangwhanger, is preaching on the ungodliness of theatres. If the reverend gentlemen will read the article, it will prove to him that there is no profession, however great its claims to sanctity, which does not contain its percentage of sinners. We suppose it would be useless to hope that it will lead him to more charitable views of a much slandered and, as a general thing, most worthy class of ladies and gentlemen—the players.

The article referred to makes a pretty bad showing for the Church. The sooner parsons stop preaching against the immorality of the stage, the better. The star preacher has as many temptations as the favorite tenor or leading juvenile, and he is not always a St. Anthony, as the record referred to conclusively proves.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—In organizing this grand Ball the Management proposes to reform several institutions of the so-called Carnival Balls, which have rendered these entertainments irksome to those participating in them, and a disappointment to the spectators, and to substitute in their place many of the new and original features to which the great success of the European Bals-Masques is mainly due. While every precaution will be taken to enforce orderly and decorous behavior on the part of all, sufficient license will be accorded to remove the feeling of irksome restraint, which, as a rule, has been allowed to divest the Carnival Balls of the only attraction they should present.

California Theatre.

Considering the stormy weather, there was quite a good attendance at this house last night. "No Thoroughfare," with W. J. Florence in the role of Jules Obenreizer, proved one of the greatest successes of the year. As to Mr. Florence, he took every one by surprise. There was nothing particularly brilliant in his Captain Cuttle, and Bob Brierly has been better played on the California stage. In Jules Obenreizer, Mr. Florence fairly rivaled Fechter, who is acknowledged the finest melodramatic actor of the day. The art of acting is, to sink one's individuality in the character represented. This, Mr. Florence did perfectly last night. He was unrecognizable, he was Jules Obenreizer the Swiss, and far more like Charles Fechter than W. J. Florence. Every look and gesture was artistic, every movement graceful and effective. It was a triumph. Mr. Florence received able support. T. W. Keene acted the role of George Vandale admirably, and showed good taste in dress. Being in mourning for his late partner, he was dressed in black instead of in flaunting colors. He looked like a respectable city merchant, and not like a London snob. N. Decker was very natural and pleasing as Walter Wilding, Robert Pateman was most excellent as Joey Ladle, bringing out the strong points of the character with much skill. We think, however, he made his face too red for that of a man who only "took it in at the porce." Joey Ladle living so much in the cellar would acquire a pallor of countenance. W. M. Leman acted the part of Mr. Bintry well, he always acts well when he has to represent a genial old gentleman; in solemn parts he is apt to be a little "preachy." Mrs. C. R. Saunders as Sally Goldstraw, looked attractive enough to justify Joey Ladle's admiration of her. Miss Bella Pateman looked charming, dressed prettily, and acted splendidly in the role of Marguerite, and Miss Louisa Johnstone as the taciturn Madame Dor, acted well. In the prologue, Mrs. Sophie Edwin did the little there was for her to do as the Veiled Lady with her accustomed skill, and Tillie Darling as Walter Wilding was a very nice little boy. The scenery was admirable. Everything was painted expressly for this occasion, and the wine vault, the Swiss inn and the gallery in the Alps were triumphs of scenic art. The audience certainly made up in appreciation what it lacked in numbers. The house rang with applause, and the curtain had to be raised at the close of the prologue, and each of the five acts. "No Thoroughfare" should run through the week at least, and the California Theatre should be crowded every night. This capital entertainment will be continued until further notice, and will be given at the matinee on Thursday.

Opera House.

The applause which the famous gymnasts Leopold and Geraldine received on making their appearance at this house last night, proved that the audience appreciated their pre-eminent ability in the graceful and original line of gymnastic art which they follow. The rest of the bill was, if anything, better than usual. The first part ended with the very lively scene entitled "Life on the Mississippi," in which all the comedians appear to excellent advantage. Harry Sefton, presented his original terpsichorean act, Harry Gordon made quite a hit in his extraordinary musical performances, Billy Emerson did not allow his spirits to be dampened by the weather but was livelier than ever, the act of "Funny Sam" was rattled off with much vim by Billy Rice, J. R. Kemble, J. F. Oberist and G. Richards; Billy Arlington and Ben Cotton were very amusing in the act of "The Two Sports," and "The Conspirators," from "La Fille de Madame Angot" was a decided hit. The same bill will be played to-night and at the matinee on Thursday.

Maguire's New Theatre.

Any notable novelty produced in London or New York is sure to be presented for the delectation of the San Francisco public. "The Sphinx," with Miss Annette Ince in the strange character of Blanche de Chellis, has had quite a run at this house. It will be played, however, for the last time at the matinee on Thursday. On Thursday evening the play of "Oliver Twist" will be produced with J. A. Herne in his great character of Bill Sikes.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Stocks up," "Ned Buckley's Regular Army, Ho!" "The Detective's Daughter," Miss Ida Fisk's banjo solos, Mlle. Blanche's ballads, Fanny Webster's comic songs, and many other performances make the bill at this house a very full and attractive one.

Woodward's Gardens.

In addition to a fine concert by Wetterman's new grand orchestra, new features are constantly being introduced at these Gardens. The programme for Saturday and Sunday next, includes the appearance of Mlle. Jeannette Ellaler on the corde elastique, Gracie and Alvan in their velocipede act, Alec the Aztec Indian, and a great variety troupe. Thursday there will be a grand Thanksgiving performance of pantomime, tableaux and vocal concert, drill and ball by the German Garde Fusileer and Eintracht Verein.

COSMOPOLITAN BAL MASQUE.—"Everything depends upon the way in which it's done." In the present case it is being done thoroughly by the manager-in-chief, Sam Genese, and Fred Whymper as business and press agent. In brief, there will be a capital band at Horticultural Hall, on Thanksgiving night, under J. Allen; lots of new music specially imported; the new Choral Quadrilles," where a select choir will give popular songs while the dancing proceeds; new French grotesque quadrilles; refreshments in first-class style; bar kept by Slinkey, of "Bon Ton" fame; costumes by Mrs Taylor, who will have a selection at the Hall itself; tickets at M. Gray's, around town generally and at the doors. This will be the first real carnival ball ever given here.

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

Oh, what a cunning little bear!
See him stand upon two feet!
Now he is looking ev'rywhere—
Ah! he spies out my retreat.

Oh! what a savage little bear!
How he pounces on the rug!
He will bite and pull out hair,
But I do not mind his hug.

Oh, what a funny little bear!
Barnum has none half so funny;
For raw meat he does not care,
But he's fond of bread and honey.

Oh, what a darling little bear!
He is only one year old;
He has blue eyes and yellow hair,
And he's worth his weight in gold.

Oh, what a sleepy little bear!
Let me kiss his rosy feet.
Oh, what a roly-poly bear!
He is good enough to eat.

A Curious Play.

The Swiss residents of New York celebrated the five hundredth anniversary of the independence of their Alpine Republic at Turner Hall, under the auspices of the New York Gruetli Verein. The Gruetli Verein is an association for the mental and moral improvement of the Swiss emigrants to America, and it has thirty-three branch societies in the larger cities of the Union. This year the Gruetli Verein determined to celebrate the 14th of November, the day on which, five hundred years ago, the three founders of the Helvetian Republic, swore the famous oath on the summit of Mount Gruetli, in a more than usually solemn manner. For this purpose they caused a play to be written by Professor Jacob Frierabend, principal of the German-American School, on Norfolk Street, in which the principal events in Swiss History, since the Alpine country was first mentioned, are represented on the stage, not by mere tableaux-vivants, but by speaking actors, the whole being a series of highly poetical episodes, interspersed with beautiful tableaux, songs, dances, and music. The number of performers appearing on the stage exceeded one hundred, and the principal parts were enacted by leading Swiss residents of New York. The stage decorations were elegant and, in some instances, truly charming, the costumes historically faithful and gorgeous, and the instrumental and vocal music excellent. The first discovery of the beautiful Alpine valleys by Orgetoris and Dirico, and other wild Northern chieftains, was the opening scene; then followed in rapid succession the Roman invasion, the Christianization of the country in the earlier part of the middle ages, the struggle of the cantons for independence, Tell's heroic deeds, the oath on Mount Gretli, Arnold Winkereid's daring exploit and noble death at Sempach, the successful war against Charles the Bold, the thrilling events of the Reformation, the Thirty Year's War, the French invasion, the resurrection of Swiss Independence in 1815, and the events of the last fifty years. This unique play had been so well rehearsed that its first performance, which took place before a large and enthusiastic audience, went off very smoothly. A ball closed the celebration.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. A Touching Appeal.

A young man connected with the telegraphic profession in this city concluded, a short time ago, to swear off drinking. He did not wait until New Year's Day to get a good start, according to custom, but he set his resolve into execution the moment it was formed. For four days he had hard luck. He wasted his evenings in the dissipation of reading, he retired at the unreasonable hour of 10 P. M., and he was up again at eight in the morning. He fell into the disgraceful habit of combing his hair, and on the morning of the third day he appeared in public with a paper collar on. In short, he was going to the dogs by a large majority, and his companions told him so. All their pleadings were of no avail in inducing the reformed operator to return to the blights of the beer mug; but he was to be tested still farther. On the fifth day he was walking on Kearny street, he met a man who looked at him as if he had just discovered the man who had robbed him of his daughter. It was Nick, the proprietor of the saloon where the "op" had been in the habit of spending his evenings prior to swearing off. Nick reached out his hand as if it was too much to expect of him under the circumstances, and led the operator to one side. Then brushing a gathering teardrop from his eye, he said, in a voice husky with emotion, "Say, Schake, vas I efer anytings but a frent mit you? Did you nefer hafe a petter one?" "You were always a good friend of mine, Nick," said Jake, feeling some alarm. "Did I efer schteal from you, did I efer purn anypody's house up? Did I efer kill some ones? Did I efer do anytings dot vasn't shust right?" said Nick. "I never knew of your doing anybody any harm," said Jake, with a sinking at his heart. "Vell, den, Mr. Schake Groundvire, vy you no come down in my saloon no more? Vy you stay avay? you vant to ruin my peezness?" The operator then knew the cause of Nick's sorrow. There were some exclamations on either side, more boisterous than religious in character, and the last words spoken were by Nick, as his late companion moved down the street: "Say, Schake, you come down there some more, I put 'em on der slate."

Schneider.

Mlle. Hortense Schneider, Parisian queen of the opera bouffe, was in her youth a working girl, and the daughter of an humble tailor at Bordeaux. She is now, at about forty, living in the style of a sultana. Her diamonds are valued at $200,000, and among her other jewels of fabulous cost is cited an emerald set of surpassing splendor. Her apartments are crowded with the most expensive furniture and objets de vertu. Bronzes and marbles and pictures and crystals and Sevres porcelain and Gobelin tapestry are scattered through her rooms in sumptuous profusion. Although the charm of youth is forever lost to Mlle. Schneider, she still has the handsomest arms and hands, the prettiest foot, and the merriest blue eyes that flash and sparkle and entice behind the Persian footlights.

Limiting Them.

There are no millionaires in Turkey. When a Turk has accumulated anything beyond $9,000 or $10,000, the boss Turk of all crooks his finger at him, whispers, "Come down, honey," and the balance is handed over, or off goes a head.

Albani is a great card, and Strakosch is happy.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescord and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. x

Bravo Cole!

On the afternoon and evening of November 4th, Mr. W. W. Cole, proprietor of the circus and menagerie bearing his name, arrived in Quincy, Ill., and gave two performances for the benefit of Woodland Home of that town. This society is a very worthy charitable institution, and for some time past they have had a severe struggle to meet current expenses, and funds were very hard to raise from the already overtaxed citizens. But by Mr. Cole's generosity, in giving these two entertainments, about one thousand dollars go into the treasury of the society. Several of the popular clergymen announced the event from their pulpits, and many prominent church members were noticeable among the crowd in the tent, proving that they overcame, at least for a day, their prejudices, and "went to the circus" in order to assist a worthy cause. Every citizen of Quincy and vicinity is loud in praise of the liberality of Mr. Cole, and his noble act is well worthy of it. The company disbanded in that city, and the animals and circus property have gone into winter quarters at the fair ground. Mr. Cole will thoroughly reorganize his company, refurnish and replenish his outfit, and add many new attractions to his show for the season of 1875.

A Neat Dodge.

The Paris correspondent of the Arcadian is responsible for this story about Christine Nilsson and her bouquets:—All the world knows that the fair Christine is about as mercenary a woman as any living. She likes effect, especially when it is likely to do her service. One night at the Italiens she actually sent a man up to the top proscenium-box with a quantity of common wall-flowers, which he was to throw down upon the stage at a given moment. Imagine what a lovely scene this produced, How sweet and simple was this tribute of the poor to the august Diva! How pretty it was to see her pick up the common wall-flowers and kiss them, and then lift her fine blue eyes up to the gallery, in sign of eternal gratitude to the gods!

New? Pshaw!

An exchange says:

A new kind of medicine has been invented by Joseph Ashman of London, in connection with spiritualism. He calls it Psycopathy and according to him the vis nervosa, or "soul-force," is the thing we must look to. If that is well all else will probably be well. This force—this "nerve-aura"—may be communicated by one person to another even when they are far apart. The aura may be infused into water, and with the most excellent results.

Mesmer knew all about this, and Reichenbach and a hundred others used it. Joseph Ashman cannot patent his "new" medicine.

Mrs. Joaquin Miller.

Some really fine poetry by Mrs. Joaquin Miller (we think Minnie Myrtle Miller a far prettier name), appeared in Sunday's Call. Mrs. Miller has taken up her residence in San Francisco and adopted the pursuit of literature. She has a novel in hand, has completed two acts of a play, and is writing occasionally for the Morning Call. Meanwhile Joaquin is reported to be sloping off with Italian women. Joaquin has lost all the popularity he ever had. He has one comfort, he resembles Byron "in so many ways."

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Boucicault's New Play.

The New York Times says: On Saturday night Mr. Boucicault's long expected play, the "Shaughraun," was produced at Wallack's and created at once the greatest success which has been won in any theatre for some years past. A detailed notice of the performance appeared in our columns yesterday, but it is impossible to do justice to the charming work which Mr. Boucicault has produced after seeing it at a single representation. We can only repeat to-day that the play, and the acting of Mr. Boucicault as the Shaughraun, are characterized by true genius, and will undoubtedly serve to increase the great reputation won in past years by the famous author and actor. The "Shaughraun" is likely to take its place as the finest of all the works of Mr. Boucicault belonging to the same school.

The subordinate parts are all good in themselves, and are filled by the leading members of Mr. Wallack's company. Mr. Gilbert presents a beautiful study of an Irish priest—if all the priests were like him the converts to Roman Catholicism would be much more numerous than they are. Mr. Montague has a very good opportunity afforded him as the Captain of a Foot Regiment, and Mr. Polk, Mr. Beckett, and other actors are well cared for. Among the ladies Miss Ione Burke deserves, perhaps, the greatest praise, on account of the simplicity and naturalness of her performance; but Miss Lyas, Miss Lewis, Mrs. Sefton, and Mme. Ponisi all have excellent parts to play, and make the most of them. A poor dog, resembling the Shaughraun himself, in his vagabond mode of life, comes very nearly being one of the best characters in the piece, although he is never seen. One can imagine him with unkempt appearance and good-for-nothing air, following at the Shaughraun's heels, and showing him the same sort of fidelity which the Shraughraun shows toward his own master. This part of "Tatters," the dog is most ingeniously sketched in, and indeed the play is full of beautiful touches and never loses its absorbing interest from beginning to end. Mr. Wallack has placed it upon the stage with the greatest liberality, and the scenery would alone be well worth going to see. Mr. Boucicault has added another to the great successes of his life, and produced one of the most original and brilliant plays which the present generation has had the opportunity of seeing.

Neat-Handed Phillis.

When Mr. William Guppy raised his eyes from the pit of the theatre to Miss Esther Summerson sitting in the boxes, the "image imprinted on his "art" was that of the cynosure of neighboring eyes, stately among stately towers and ancestral trees. But doubtless when Mr. William Guppy, as lovers will, abandoned himself to blissful dreams of the possible home that should grow out of his lofty passion, it was another vision that he saw; it was the high-born Helen coming down to breakfast in a sweet morning-cap, a neat-handed Phillis. For love, which soars and sings, also builds it nest. The one instinct is as deep and sure as the other. The cynosure of worshipping hearts and eyes is but the romantic aspect of Phillis; and because she is so lofty and so lovely will she be the miracle-worker in the household. The secret sorrow of a thousand homes is that the lady of the towers and battlements does not prove in fact to be the neat-handed Phillis.

Rough on Donovan.

In a very well known town in Vermont there is a flourishing colony of Irish settlers who have cultivated the soil to some profit. Some of the number emigrated a few years since to seek their fortune elsewhere. One of them, returning for a visit, was making inquiries as to his old friends, among them was one Jim Donnovan?" "Ah! Ned, where is Jim Donnovan?" "Oh! sure, he has settled down intirely, and is well off; but, bad luck to him, he went to Montreal and married a little Protestant girl." "Married what?" "A Protestant girl." "May the divil fly away with him Why didn't he marry one of his own sex?"

That Very Funny Man.

The Danbury News man has been visiting the "land of brown heath and shaggy wood," and in his last letter he writes:

I devoted one day to Melrose Abbey. It is a well conducted ruin. The heart of Bruce lies within its walls, and about ten thousand Pringles are buried just outside of them. The Pringle family must have proved a perfect god-send to the undertakers in the neighborhood. There are nearly five hundred old castles in this vicinity. Queen Mary was imprisoned in all of them. That unfortunate monarch must have been in jail about four-fifths of the time. What I now want, what I really pant after, is a ruin that wasn't her prison, that Sir Walter Scott, hasn't written about, and that Queen Victoria didn't visit in 1842.

"Ritualism."

"Your young friend staid uncommonly late last night, and I was quite inclined to come into the parlor and dismiss him," said an indulgent father to his pet of sixteen. "Oh, yes, it was pretty late; but we got so interested in discussing ritualism that we did not notice the fleeting hours, papa!" "Discussing ritualism?" sternly queried the father, and then he walked slowly away with his hands under his coat skirts, trying to remember what they called it when he was young.

Opera House.

Leopold and Geraldine are immensely popular at this house. Billy Rice is very amusing as the gifted story-teller Funny Sam, Billy Emerson appears in some of best specialties, Harry Sefton in his eccentric performances, and Harry Gordon in his original musical illustrations. "The Conspirators" from the opera of "La Fille de Madame Angot" is a very taking feature, and is admirably rendered. There will be a matinee performance on Thanksgiving day

Maguire's New Theatre.

"The Sphinx," with Miss Annette Ince as Blanche de Chellis, will be performed this evening, and at the matinee on Thanksgiving Day for the last time. For Thanksgiving night, the drama of "Oliver Twist" will be played with J. A. Herne in the character of Bill Sikes, Annette Ince as Nancy Sikes, Ella Kemble as Rose Maylie, Blanche Galton as Mrs. Corney, Nellie Deaves as Oliver Twist, J. S. Lindsay as Fagin, George Giddens as the Dodger, Frank Rea as Bumble and a generally strong cast. "Oliver Twist" s a strong holiday piece, and will draw a full house on Thanksgiving night.

California Theatre.

"No Thoroughfare" drew a good house last night and the fine acting of W. J. Florence as Obenreizer, and the beautiful scenery were both generally admired. A better play than "No Thoroughfare" has not been produced for a long time. There will be no Thanksgiving matinee.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"Lucy di Soiree," "Haunted Tavern," "Intelligence Office," and a great variety of acts, songs and dances make up a big programme at this house for to night and Thanksgiving night.

Woodward's Gardens.

In addition to a fine concert by Wetterman's new grand orchestra, new features are constantly being introduced at these Gardens. The programme for Saturday and Sunday next, includes the appearance of Mlle. Jeannette Elsler on the corde elastique, Gracie and Alvan in their velocipede act, Alec the Aztec Indian, and a great variety troupe. Thursday there will be a grand Thanksgiving performance of pantomime, tableaux and vocal concert, drill and ball by the German Garde Fusileer and Eintracht Verein.

COSMOPOLITAN BAL MASQUE.—"Everything depends upon the way in which it's done." In the present case it is being done thoroughly by the manager-in-chief, Sam Genese, and Fred Whymper as business and press agent. In brief, there will be a capital band at Horticultural Hall, on Thanksgiving night, under J. Allen; lots of new music specially imported; the new Choral Quadrilles," where a select choir will give popular songs while the dancing proceeds; new French grotesque quadrilles; refreshments in first-class style; bar kept by Slinkey, of "Bon Ton" fame; costumes by Mrs Taylor, who will have a selection at the Hall itself; tickets at M. Gray's, around town generally and at the doors. This will be the first real carnival ball ever given here.

Bachelor's Thanksgiving Dinner.

Hepburn, the genial host of the Mint restaurant, Commercial street just above Montgomery, is going to get up a grand blow-out in the shape of a bachelor's dinner on Thanksgiving Day. Boiled turkey any oyster sauce, roast turkey, roast pig and all the good things of life will be provided. A word to the bachelor public who want a good old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner will be sufficient.—Go there!

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-r

Fox & Vincent, who are the Bonifaces of the old established and popular saloon, 133 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel, have reduced the price of their beverages to the popular rates. BE TRUE.

Do the good that you are able,
Help all whom you can;
Life is not a foolish fable,
God is true to man;
Lift and cheer your fallen brother
Proud upon the sod—
Who are true to one another,
They are true to God.

Man is not a vulgar fraction,
Let him but be strong;
In your thought and in your action
Clear away the wrong;
Round and full in your completeness,
Just in what you do—
God, who fills the world with sweetness,
Will look out for you.

Fashion's Freaks.

Bags and pockets have been substituted for slashes as ornaments on street dresses.

Furs are used in trimming opera-cloaks of the Dolman pattern.

There is a new fringe for trimming ball and party dresses called seaweed fringe. It resembles seaweed very much, and is both pretty and unique.

The six-button dog-skin gloves will be much worn by ladies this season. They are finished in the most elegant style.

Some of the prettiest of the new styles of fans are of black satin, embroidered in gold, and with a feather edge.

Trailing skirts are no longer worn on the promenade. Worth has decided that short, round skirts are the prettiest for the streets, and so they are adopted again.

Garnet colored stuffs having come into great favor, the garnet is once more extensively used in jewelry.

Who knows but that these flaring hats, with their triangular points and broad brims, presage the return of the coal-scuttle bonnets of twenty years ago?

Dressmakers find two distinct classes to cater for,—the one choosing the finest materials to be made up elegantly plain; the other selecting cheaper goods and depending on ornamentation in making them showy.

Clinging drapery is studied this season, with even greater persistency than last. It is the drooping, soft dresses that are now la mode; and those that cling the closest and droop the most determinedly, are the most acceptable.

Bouquets for End-Men.

The Chicago correspondent of a New York paper tells the following good story at the expense of Billy Manning, a well-known negro minstrel. For some time Manning has been officiating as "end man" with Kelly & Leon's Minstrels, while Luke Schoolcraft served in a like amusing capacity at the other end. The other evening, Clara Louise Kellogg, of the English Opera Troupe, occupied a private box, and was an enthusiastic auditor of the entertainment. To add to her pleasure the management placed a large basket of beautiful flowers on a pedestal in front of her box. Looking at this bouquet from the auditorium, it appeared to be directly in front of Luke Schoolcraft. Early in the evening, the wife of Billy Manning—she who once was Mollie an Irish actress of some little note—entered the house and took her seat in the dress circle. Hardly had she seated herself, however, when she discovered the basket of flowers. Without making inquiry into the matter, she at once made up her mind that some admirer of Luke Schoolcraft had sent him a handsome bouquet. Her Irish blood was up, and she determined Billy should have a larger and better one. She rushed from the place, ran across the street to the Sherman House, purchased two large baskets of flowers, and returned with them to the theatre. When the head usher handed the floral offering to Manning, the good-natured audience burst into applause, whereupon the comedian stood up and thanked some unknown friend for the beautiful gift. He said he had no idea where they came from, but, judging from the excited appearance of one person in the audience, he felt he would find out the next day when the bill came round.

Poor New York!

A New York paper has the following: Silver change is circulating, says a contemporary, more freely than it has for years. That's so. We saw a five cent piece on Friday. It was in the window of an exchange office.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Washing Returned in One Day.

A Curious Idea.

The Dispatch says:

An advertiser in the Sun of Saturday gives a glimpse of a new branch of industry for boys. His advertisement reads:

"WANTED—A boy about eighteen to milk and take care of horses." Now, we have often heard that asses' milk was good for the cure of certain diseases. We once knew a man who imagined that the drinking of asses' milk would cure him of catarrh, and he purchased a donkey, and drink its milk morn, noon, and night. But it didn't do any good. One day he remarked to a friend: "Asses' milk's a humbug. I've drunk it until I wonder that I don't bray instead of talk, and it hasn't done me any good." "My dear fellow," said his friend, "don't bother yourself because you can't bray. You're not the only donkey in the world who doesn't bray." But we've never heard that any use was made of horses' milk, save to strengthen the equine infant. Still, there may be something in it that has been kept a secret from the world. Perhaps it's out of horses' milk that they make that fragrant butter called oleomargarine; or it may be that much of the milk sold in the daries with stirabout and crackers is of that kind. Some that we've tried has been thin enough to come from a two-twenty mare. We want some boy who has been milking and taking care of horses to enlighten us on this business. We are in search of information.

One of Job's Comforters.

Mr. Jeremiah Niles was suffering last week from the toothache. He is not a man of mild and patient temperament, and he gave way to his pain in words of wrath. He was parading his office on Saturday, occasionally indulging in an Indian war dance, and giving utterance to whoops, which had they been translated would be considered profane, when a friend entered. "Hello, Jerry," said he, "what's the matter?" "Oh, nothing much, I've only got a toothache, d—n it." "Well, well, Jerry, you must bear it patiently. You know mortal man was born to sorrow." Jerry stopped before his friend, looked at him fiercely, and said: "It may be that mortal man was born to sorrow, but I don't think that the whole sorrow, pain and agony should be concentrated into one d—d old snaggletooth. And if you or any other blasted fool tells me to be patient, I'll put a head on you in half a minute. Jerry's friend left him without any further attempt at consolation.

A Deadly Lively Performance.

Of the new English opera troupe now performing at the Lyceum, New York, Trinculo says: Soldene's entertainment is another contribution to the American stage. It is as merry as the Lord Mayor's procession, as witty as Magna Charta, as fresh and spontaneous and bright as the British Museum.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rheniah hock."

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDNT.]

MELBOURNE, October 20, 1874.

MY DEAR FIGARO :—Recruited health, revived strength, and my normal will enables me to carry on my most agreeable correspondence with you. For some time past the hap-hazard mail service between Australia and California has upset my calculations, but now that the value of the service has been absolutely proved, I will, as you say in your parts, bet my bottom dollar that it will be continued somehow, by hook or by crook. Amusements here have been very lively since my last. At the

THEATRE ROYAL

The Williamsons have carried all before them. Their success has been most wonderful, and deservedly so. Their varied talent is undoubted. Night after night is the Royal crowded, and night after night does their popularity increase. There is no fake about their performances, but by straight, honest, natural ability, they hold their position as artists of the highest class. They can worthily hold their own in this country with the late G. V. Brooke, Barry Sullivan, Joseph Jefferson and Charles Matthews, though in a different line of business to most of the above artists.

MISS MAGGIE MOORE.

(How proud her husband is of her and so are we, spectators!) is one of the most fascinating actresses we have had out here. Such a vein of genuine humor permeates through all her performances that it compels the attention of her audience. Comic to a ree, but without the slightest scintilla of vulgarity, she enlists not only the sympathies of her audience but draws upon their risible faculties to an extent seldom successfully achieved by any previous actress. Her "Topsy" was a perfect masterpiece of character acting, while her "Little Nell and the Marchioness," which she performed on Saturday last (I am informed for the first time), stamped her as an artiste of the first rank.

MR. J. C. WILLIAMSON

In "Kerry," had not only his audience but the entire press "by the wool." It was such a rendition of character as could only have emanated from a thorough artist. His make-up, self-abnegation, and finished acting, were indeed the work of a scholar and a student of character. The petite comedy ran a month, but is bound to be reproduced. In the "Fairy Circle" his Con O'Carolan was a most exquisite piece of acting. No exaggeration, no unmeaning gag took the place of good acting, but every point, pathetic or comical, was given with great effect. Mr. Williamson and his wife are much respected in private life, the genial, gentlemanly manner (which, by the way, characterizes all great artists), in which he "moves round," and the ladylike and gentle style in which his clever little wife receives all who may be honored by their acquaintance, proves at once how they have won upon the audience of this "Babylon of the Southern Hemisphere."

MR. JAMES MOORE.

Miss Maggie Moore's brother, had a brilliant reception on Saturday last, in an Ethiopian jig, and met with a very warm reception. His pedal movements are very clever.

The cast of characters for the last of the Williamson's productions ("Little Nell") was very excellent, and included Mesdames Kate Russell (Mrs. Dampier), Miss Docy Stewart (Mrs. Collins), Miss Jenny Bryce (Mrs. Appleton), and Mrs. Bryer, Messrs. F. C. Appleton, Stuart O'Brien, I. S. Greville, R. Stewart, H. Sefton, John Dunn, C. H. Taylor, Harry Leston, Tom Lewis and

MR. DAMPIER,

Whose splendid performance of Daniel Quilp is the talk of the town. That such a well-favored actor should enact by the possession of great talent such a hideous, bow-legged villain, almost surpasses the understanding of his audience. Mr. Dampier is one of the most conscientious actors we have had in this country for many years, and is an artist who is not spoiled by the flatteries of the press. As it is the intention of himself and wife at some future time to visit America, I can only say that when he does the States will receive a visit from artists who, by the possession of rare abilities, deserve and obtain genuine approbation.

MR. COPPIN,

I regret to say, has been laid up lately with a return i it from his old friend, the gout. The absence of this gentleman from the active duties of life, whether as a Member of Parliament, a Bank Director or a Theatrical Manager, is severely felt. We can ill afford to lose the services of such an enterprising and useful man.

MR. HARWOOD,

The senior member of the Royal Lion, emboldened by the great success attending the engagement of the Williamsons, will (so I hear), in the course of a short time, visit the States to make arrangements with other stars to visit our antipodean shores. Having a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the playgoers of this Island, one may be sure that his visit will be ultimately to the advantage of all the Australias.

THE OPERA HOUSE.

"La Fille de Madame Angot," well produced, well sung, and well acted, has been the event in the musical world since my last. Miss Clara Thompson (Mrs. Henry Bracy), has worthily filled the role. Mrs. Bell (Miss Jenny Winston), appeared as Madame Lange. Our Australian tenor, E. A. Beaumont, was the Ange Piton. The other characters were well sustained by Messrs. Henry Bracy, A. Dell, E. Farley, A. Daniels, I. E. Kitts and G. P. Carey, Mrs. I. H. Fox, Miss Wooldridge, Miss Bessie Royal and Miss Dolly Ford. Seldom indeed has there been such a really pleasant and artistic presentation set before a Melbourne audience, and to insure its certain success Mr. William Saurin Lyster engaged the services of Mr. John Hill, K. S. R. A. M., as Conductor. His "Angot" venture has resulted in crowded houses. The last nights of the opera are, however, announced, consequent on the compulsory retirement for a short time into private life of Mrs. Bracy. The burlesque of "El Dorado" is announced to follow. The new opera bouffe "Gerofle-Gerofla" has been secured by the enterprising director, but when it will be produced is only in the womb of Time. In writing of opera in Australia it cannot be denied that to

MR. WILLIAM SAURIN LYSTER

Is due all the credit of introducing to us the works of the greatest masters, sustained by the first artists of eminence to be obtained, either in Europe or America, to visit these antipodes. To his untiring energies may be attributed the high state of civilization to which we have arrived in musical matters, and patrons. As a genial, warm-hearted Irish gentleman, he is highly respected, and as an operatic manager he holds the highest rank. May his shadow never grow less!

ST. GEORGE'S HALL

Has been taken on a long lease by Mr. J. C. Rainer, a gentleman well known in this city. His very successful panorama of the American War has caused him again to enter into the active duties of catering for the Australian public. By cablegram he has engaged Professor Sylvester, better known as The Fakir of Oolu, and his troupe. They are to arrive here by the mail steamer due on the 16th of December. The Hall has lately been occupied by

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE CASE (GRACE EGERTON).

But their short season was anything but a prosperous one. They seem to have gone off their pristine talents, and, as a consequence, their audiences became "small by degress and beautifully less." The Carapdinis will be the next company to occupy the Hall.

THE COLOSSEUM.

Owing to the leniency of the authorities, this Hall is still open with a variety entertainment. I will not mention the names of the artists engaged at this "show," as I have no wish to injure them in their profession or to lower them in the estimation of friends at a distance. Mr. Charles Wright is still the liberal (?) lessee and manager (save the mark!)

BLONDIN.

The great Chevalier, is to arrive here from Sydney th's day. In the choice of his agent in advance he has been most injudicious. A Mr. Lyons, at one period not long ago a check-taker and afterwards a general utility man in a circus in India, obtained the appointment and carried out the sequel to the old adage "Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." He has had some trouble to obtain here a site for his principal, owing to his want of address and tact. Blondin, however, comes himself, but will have some trouble to bridge over the troubles his injudicious and ignorant agent has brought about his ears. That the Chevalier will obtain plenty of excellent spots on which to erect his enormous tent, there is not a shadow of doubt.

MISS HATTIE SHEPPARD,

Or, as she was latterly known, Mrs. Henry Hallam, died the other day, after I despatched my last letter. She had been confined of a fine, healthy girl, but four days previous, and everything promised the early resumption of the active duties of her beloved profession. Four days after her accouchment puerperal fever set in with fearful virulence, resulting in her death two days afterwards. The news of this sad event came upon the town as a public calamity, and shed a gloom over not only the profession, by whom she was beloved, but the entire district. Her decease is a loss to Australia. Her place in its dramatic world can never be filled. As a lady of refined and gentle manners, as an accomplished and ever-improving actress, as a loving and tender child to her mother, and as an affectionate wife, Hattie Hallam will long live in the remembrance and affections of the Australian people. Her child, shortly before the interment of the mother, was christened Hattie Cynisca Bella Hallam, the name the deceased lady wished it to bear. To add still further to this sad calamity, her aged mother, who never recovered the fearful shock, gave way and after a short illness followed her daughter to "another and a better world." So sad is this item of my month's news that I now draw the curtain, merely mentioning that the bereaved husband, who had been married barely a year, was, and is now; in New Zealand, and that the well-known Dr. Neild, like a good Samaritan as he is, has taken charge of the motherless infant.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Lynch, who arrived here as agent of the Girard Brothers, will leave next mail for your city as agent in advance through America of Madame Arabella Goddard, the great pianiste. In the choice of her agent, I think the distinguished artistes has been most judicious as Mr. Lynch has the happy knack of making himself a general favorite wherever he "locates"

A rumor is about town—its source I, as yet, know not—that Lawrence Barrett, is shortly to visit the colonies on a professional tour. Come along. Good talent is always apreciated and well paid for here!

In the provinces there is a vast amount of talent and I was happy to say that there are very, very few "pros." out of collar. At

BALLARAT.

The Theatro Royal, is leased by Mr. Lionels Harday, with his wife, Miss Rose Cooper as Duchess. They have a very good company including Mrs. Woodbridge, an old Melbourne favorite. Mr. Boothroyd Fanclough is now the reigning star as Hamlet. The business has been excellent. Mr. Lyster's Italian Opera Company, is to appear in a short time.

STAWELL.

Mr. Charles Lacelles, Miss Lydia Howard, Thatcher, Veoletto, and the Mademoiselles Novaro, have been giving drawing-room entertainments with considerable success. They intend to visit Horshaws and then "do" the Western District.

SANDHURST.

The New Royal Princess Theatre, at View Point is doing a fine business with Miss Adelaide Browning (Mrs. J. H. Steeles), as the bright particular star. The company is the best out of Melbourne, and includes Messrs. W. G. Carey and Harry Power, the new establishment is a great success, and thanks to the energy of Mr. Hefferman, is likely to continue so.

GEELONG.

No show, no trade; people miserable, but parsons doing well, tea fights very flat, and muffin worries, a drug in the market pretty well played out.

CASTLEMAINE.

Madame Goddard has lately given two concerts at the Theatre Royal. The place was crowded though the prices were big, numbers at each performance were turned away from the doors, not being able to gain admittance. Aynsley Scott with a very "multy" variety show, has made an appearance here, but with no beneficial result. Without talent, "gas" and "blow" won't go down in this colony.

In the surrounding colonies matters have been very lively of late, though the amusements have been various. Commencing with

SYDNEY, N. S. W.

I hear that "Le Chevalier Blondin" has bled the amusement seekers to a tune, and as a consequence injured after shows for a time. At the Victoria Theatre, under the lesseeship of Mr. John Bennett, and the stage management of Mr. B. N. Jones. Miss May Howard has been fulfilling a long and profitable engagement. "East Lynne," "The Wandering Heir," "Romeo and Juliet," (Miss Howard as the love sick hero) and "The Hidden Hand," have been the last productions in which she has appeared. She intends shortly to return to San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Towers and Miss Rose Towers, new arrivals from England are announced to appear shortly in a new drama "The Waifs of the Street." The Queen's Theatre is now under Mr. Edward Holloway as Lessee and Manager. Mr. Lachlaus Macgowan, J. Woolfe, Oliver Deering, C. Brown, H. Jerdan, J. H. Martin, Mrs. E. Holloway, Madame Rolland, Julia Merton, Anny Chambers and Mrs. Macgowan form the bulk of the company.

ADELAIDE, S. A.

Lyster and Cagli's Grand Italian Opera Company, under the direction of Signor Lebman, have been doing an excellent season here. Mr. Samuel Lagar,

TASMANIA.

The Hibernicon panorama, with Charles A. Boyd as Manager, Johnny Cowan, Shaw Cross, Barry O'Mayra, J. O'Neil, Miss Bessie Harrison, Miss Kate DeLacey and W. S. Midcalfe, agent, are doing splendid business in Hobarton. They will next show in Launceston.

QUEENSLAND.

At the Theatre Royal, Brisbane, Mr and Mrs F. Belton have been starring for a season, and with very poor results. Mr. Morton Tavares is re-enforcing his company, and has already effected an engagement with Mr. W. Andrews, the comedian, and his wife, Miss Nelly Montague, a very pleasing soubrette. "The School for Scandal" and the drama of "Belphegor" have been recently performed.

NEW ZEALAND.

Is at present rather bare of amusements. The Minstrels—Harry Kelly, E. Amery, C. Sutton and others, under the management of G. W. Rockafeller, have done well on their tour. At the Prince of Wales, in Auckland, Miss Adelaide Stoneham assisted by her brother, H. Stoneham, has been giving a series of drawing-room entertainments, having the comique, Charles Verner, to versify the show. John Smith, the original nigger impersonator, has done a middling business during his tour through the Islands with his variety show, consisting of Val Vose, Airec and the DeCastro family. To pull up bad business he tried the "gift" dodge, but it did not go down, and he was glad to join his forces with those of George Loyal, at Dunedin, including Zeula (lady gymnaste), Verletti, Lizzie Shafter, Mr. McLean, Master McLern and the Loyal George himself. Loyal's crowd was the salvation of Ginger Blue Smith's.

CALL BOY.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, "THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F. Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. Also retail Store No. 207 Montgomery street. T

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. H

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—"No Thoroughfare" which has made a tremendous hit at this theatre, with W. J Florence, in his remarkably clever impersonation of Obenreizer, will be played at the matinee to-day, to-night and until further notice.

OPERA HOUSE.—The attractions at this theatre are superior to those offered at any other house of the kind in the United States. The Emerson Minstrels, Harry Gordon, the musical phenomenon, Harry Sefton, the dancing spider, and those most graceful and daring gymnasts, Leopold and Geraldine, appear nightly. These two last named performers delight all by the quickness and grace of their movements.

MAGUIRE'S NEW THEATRE. — "Oliver Twist," with Annette Ince as Nancy Sikes, Miss Kila Kemble as Rose Maylie, J. A. Herne as Bill Sikes, and George Giddens as the Dodger, has made a great hit. It will be repeated this evening and to-morrow evening.

BUCKLEY'S NEW VARIETY THEATRE.—"He Would Be an Actor," by Frank Mortimore, Johnny Tuers and J. C. Drum, "Dodging for a Wife," "Madame Gassyniger" and "Furnished Rooms," are among the acts to be performed to-night at this popular variety hall.

WOODWARD'S GARDENS. — NOVELTIES. In addition to a fine concert by Wetterman's new grand orchestra, new features are constantly being introduced at these Gardens. The programme for Saturday and Sunday next, includes the appearance of Mlle. Jeannette Ellsler on the corde elastique, Gracie and Alvan in their velocipede act, Alec the Aztec Indian, and a great variety troupe.

GOLDEN GATE PARK.—Those who drive out to the new park should visit The Villa which has just been opened. Here they will find four public parlors and ten private dining-rooms. Guido Maegenberg, the proprietor, gets up epicurean breakfasts, dinners and suppers at short notice.

THE CLIFF HOUSE.—Captain Foster, the genial host of the Cliff House, entertains visitors from all parts of the Globe at his famous sea-side resort. The Cliff House is THE one thing San Francisco has to boast of as different from anything else in the world. Omnibuses run every day from the terminus of the Lone Mountain railroad.

CITY GARDENS.—An Orchestral Concert, and a ball in the evening will be given here on Sunday. The gardens are clothed in verdure, and are in the best order.

NOTES.—The Cosmopolitan Bal Masque at Horticultural Hall, Thanksgiving night, was decidedly the most successful thing of the kind ever known in this city. There was life in it, fun in it, it did not resemble a funeral party or a Methodist Church social as other bal masques given in this city have. Everything was perfectly "proper," but not stupid. Messrs. Genese and Whymper have made a new revelation to the public of San Francisco. The music under the direction of J. Allen, was good, the dances were excellently arranged, the people on the floor knew how to dance, the costumes, mostly by Mrs Taylor, were varied and original, and there was a big crowd. When the ball was at its height, there must have been nearly a thousand people on the floor. The bar arrangements in the hands of J. E. Slinkey, were admirable, and he also provided a supper that gave universal satisfaction. There were no extortionate charges, and everything was of the best quality. The Cosmopolitan Ball was a grand success, and we learn that another ball will be given under the same management during the approaching holiday season, probably on Christmas Eve.

Miss Adele Leighton, who made such a successful debut at the Opera House some two weeks since, will be the recipient of a benefit at Maguire's New Theatre, on Monday next, when she will personate the character of Blanche de Chelles, in "The Sphinx," which will be played for the last time on that occasion. The version to be played is the property of Miss Leighton.

The Palace Amphitheatre is being placed in perfect repair preparatory to the opening of the Winter circus season there about December 15th. The roof had warped a little under the Summer's sun, and double rafters have been placed in it to make it as firm as wood and iron can. Manager Wilson is now in New York making preparations for his forthcoming season, and has already a brilliant array of talent under engagement. The Amphitheatre will be thoroughly renovated, and will open as good as new, and with a new company in the ring.

The Alta has received the following dispatches concerning John McCullough and Charlotte Cushman:

"NEW ORLEANS, November 27th.—A large and brilliant audience assembled at the Varieties Theatres on Monday evening to witness John McCullough as Virginius. Mr. McCullough fully came up to the high anticipations of the many present, and received great applause. During the week he has performed "Othello" and "The Gladiator," receiving the same warm recognition extended on the opening night. At the conclusion of his engagement he will leave for San Francisco, opening at the California on the 14th of December, and will support Miss Charlotte Cushman during her engagement at that theatre."

CINCINNATI, November 27th.—Charlotte Cushman has so much improved in health that she leaves for Chicago to-day. Her illness was caused by a heavy cold, aggravated by erysipelas. She is accompanied in her tour by Miss Stebbins and an attendant."

Professor W. Mix, who has devoted a considerable portion of his life to the study of astronomy, will lecture to-morrow evening at Dashaway Hall on the transit of Venus. He will illustrate his lecture with sketches on the blackboard. There is no charge for admission.

Hughey Morton, comedian and character vocalist, will receive a farewell benefit in the shape of a grand entertainment and ball, at Hibernia Hall, on Monday, Dec. 7th.

Matt Kelly, Charley Nickerson, George Wallace and a small minstrel company, left town this morning for a season in the coast valleys. They will open at Antioch to-night.

Leopold and Geraldine, the gymnasts, have created quite a sensation at the Opera House. They are generally acknowledged to be the most brilliant artistes in the profession.

EASTERN DRAMATIC NEWS.

We have published the most interesting items of dramatic news during the week, and give up a large portion of our space to-day to a letter from "Our own correspondent" in Melbourne.

In New York, at the Academy of Music, "Mignon," with Albani and Heilbron was presented. The season of Italian Opera, under Strakosch, is to close this evening.....The "Two Orphans," with Miss Clara Morris as the heroine, was to follow Miss Charlotte Thompson in "Jane Eyre," at Union Square Theatre.....The next attraction at Fifth Avenue Theatre was to be "The Busy Body".....Boucicault's drama, entitled "The Shaughraun," which we have already fully noticed was running well at Wallack's....At Booth's, Joe Jefferson was playing in "Rip Van Winkle".....The Soldene Troupe was playing "La Fille de Madame Angot" in English, at the Lyceum.....At the Park Theatre, John T. Raymond in "The Gilded Age," is doing well. The piece has run over sixty night. It is safe for a hundred at least.....At the Metropolitan Theatre, Johnny Manning and a corps de ballet in a Jardin Mabille can-can, Serjeant Burke in lightning drill, and other attractions were presented.....At the Grand Opera House, "The Black Crook" was revived by the Kiralfy Brothers on the 23d.....At the Olympic, Sam Rickey and Master Barney were as popular as ever.....Walter Bray was among the new engagements at the Globe Theatre. Others were as follows: Mrs. J. Lloyd Haigh (Miss Jenny Hughes), Miss Winnetta Montague, Chas. Howard Ned Fox, Wayne and Lovely, Prof. Alex. Davis, and McNulty and Carland.....At the Theatre Comique, J. H. Budworth was to appear in a new play, and Harrigan and Hart in a new sketch entitled "The Canceys".....At Tony Pastor's "The Flower Girl of New York," was the piece de resistance.....W. A. Mestayer made a hit at the Bowery in "The Hoodlum, or Life in Frisco." He was followed by Miss Fanny Herring in "The Tigress of the West".....At Wood's Museum, Charles E. Emmett appeared in a "Buffalo Bill" sort of drama entitled "Little Rifle".....At Robinson's Hall, (where we suspect our old friend John Woodard is stage manager) "The Turkish Harem" was the attraction.....The Colosseum is closed.

About the great Rip Van Vin Winkle, an Eastern paper says: Joe Jefferson is a convert to spiritualism. He will act only a part of the season, as he has arranged to spend most of the winter on his Louisiana plantation.

Mr. Charles Fechter is at Memphis.

The London correspondent of the Arcadian, in noticing the appearance of Mr. Sothern at the Haymarket Theatre, says that he has so exaggerated his performance of Lord Dundreary that it no longer pleases. "What might before have been thought to be a barely possible character," he says, "is now nothing but an utter burlesque. The critics, without an exception of any importance, are very severe in their remarks, and it is likely that a change in the bill will soon have to be made." Both the American actresses whom Mr. Sothern took with him to England—Miss Walton and Miss Linda Dietz—have made exceedingly favorable impressions.

Years ago the following notice was printed on the play-bills at Burton's New York Theatre: "The regular frequenters of Burton's Theatre have desired the manager to state that the fidgety people who occasionally disturb the audience by rising some time before the conclusion of the entertainment, pushing their way out, standing up to put on their overcoats, or to shawl ladies, are most earnestly requested to respect the feelings of those who desire to see the whole performance in quiet. Every one has an undoubted right to leave a theatre when he will, but a moment or so's delay can not make much matter in an evening's entertainment, especially when it is known that the patrons of this house consider the disturbance as an annoyance. The manager also respectfully hints that it is most distressing to the ladies and gentlemen on the stage.' This is just as applicable to the theatrical audience to-day as it ever was, only we should designate offenders as brutally indifferent rather than 'fidgety."

Bronson Howard did not write the following, whatever people may say to the contrary notwithstanding:—

What are critics, I ask you, in these modern days?
Why, they're nothing but fellows who run down my plays,
Who wear ragged pants that are burst out at the knees,
And are patched at a place I won't name, if you please.
They have no Sunday clothes, they ne'er owned a dress-coat,
They smell strongly of gin, and on caporal doat;
If they're asked to a party, they really don't know
What clothes they should wear or in what way to go.
They'd as likely as not wear a coat smirched with tar,
And ride to a ball in a Third-Avenue car.
They really have asked me (I don't stretch it at all)
If a dress-coat's the thing at an upper-ten ball.

La Colville, as the dilettanti prefer to call Mis Violetta Colville, drew 3,000 persons to the Brooklyn Academy on the 8th, for the benefit of St. Mary's Church of the Immaculate Conception, and achieved a complete artistic triumph.

J. L. Toole, Louisville, Chicago, 30th, one week; St. Louis, Dec. 7, one week.

A pistol to be used by Marietta Ravel in a play at the Troy Opera House, was loaded with a decidedly realistic bullet by a boy who had been rat hunting with the firearm. The discovery was made just in time, probably, to save the life of an actor.

Lu-Lu, the young female gymnast, has assumed his male apparel, and now figures as Mr. Farini, taking the name of the man who adopted and reared him. He sailed for Europe on the 11th.

While the Warm Spring Indians were playing at Hooley's Brooklyn Opera House, a portion of the troupe, who were not performing, were shown to seats in the front of the house by Joe Fleming, the ticket taker. Fleming's head is as bald and smooth as a billiard ball, and a boy in the gallery, seeing him with the Indians, shouted out, "Hi, look there, that's one of the fellers that was scalped." The audience saw the joke, and for a few moments the actors on the stage could not be heard.

Mr. Ciprico is in New York, and has negotiated with Messrs. Simmons and Wall's Dramatic Agency 603 Broadway, to conduct business for him during the present season. Mr. Ciprico opens in Baltimore, at John T. Ford's Holiday Street Theatre, on Dec. 14th.

The able stage manager, Mr. Wise, will mount "Edmund Kean," in elegant style, and it will receive the support of an unusually strong company, among whom we find Mark M. Price, one of the best character actors on the stage. Mr. Ciprico will likely appear in New York City in February, and in Brooklyn by next April, after playing in Philadelphia and Chicago.

The Dispatch says:

Mr. W. R. Floyd, we are happy to state, is rapidly recovering from his recent alarming illness. We trust to soon see him again on the boards of Wallack's Theatre.

Mr. D. P. Bowers, commences an engagement at the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, on the 30th.

A New York paper says:

Sardou's new piece, "La Haine," will probably soon be produced at one of our city theatres.

Those perennial and popular stars, Mr. and Mrs Barney Williams, have finished their limited engagement at the Bowery Theatre, New York, where Mrs. Williams gave her well-known farce of "Customs of the Country."

The Courier of the 15th says:

The theatre-goer could hardly read a pleasanter announcement than that made by the Boston Theatre Management for the ensuing week. Miss Charlotte LeClercq has been engaged for six nights and one matinee, and she will appear in no less than six different characters—Mercy Merrick in the "New Magdalen," Peg Woffington in "Masks and Faces" (Mr. Shewell enacting the part of Triplet), Lady Isable and Madame Vine in "East Lynn," Julia in "The Hunchback," and Lady Macbeth in Shakespeare's tragedy. The above selections will enable the admirers of Miss LeClercq to see her in a round of strongly contrasted impersonations, two of which are new to Bostonians, while one—the last named—is new to the actress. The fact that a lady of Miss LeClercq's popularity and professional rank is to appear at the Boston Theatre next Saturday night for the first time as Lady Macbeth, ought to be sufficient to attract to that house every lover of the legitimate drama in this city. For Thanksgiving week the bill at this theatre will consist of Boucicault's and Byron's sensational drama, "Lost at Sea," with several special attractions.

PACIFIC COAST DRAMATIC NEWS.

SAN DIEGO.—Little Mac's Minstrels made a great success here. They gave their last performance at Horton Hall on Saturday last. Williams and Christy, song and dance men have joined the troupe.

SALT LAKE CITY.—Monday evening of this week was devoted to the benefit of H. Harley, the costumer of the theatre. "Neighbor Jackwood," was performed. It was repeated the following evening. On Wednesday Miss Agnes Booth and Joseph Wheelock commenced an engagement of four nights, opening in "Much Ado About Nothing."

HOLLISTER.—The Hollister Amateurs will give an entertainment at Beatty's Hall to-night for the benefit of Mr Henry Varcoe who is a sufferer from a recent fire.

SAN JUAN.—The Amateur Dramatic Club, gave an entertainment at Plaza Hall, on Wednesday evening.

ALAMEDA.—The Encinal says: On the 18th of December the lady and gentlemen amateurs of Alameda will give an evening's entertainment in Smith's Hall, which will be well worth witnessing. The plays selected are "Dying for Love" and the "Snapping Turtle."

FOREIGN DRAMATIC NEWS.

A correspondent writing from London furnishes the following gossip:

We are all raving about the St. James. Indeed, the reopening was one of the biggest successes known in London for many a long day. This is due to no tricks, no unworthy expedient, and no puffery, but simply to the perfection of mechanism, the admirable care, tact, and discretion of the management, the talent of the artists, the goodness of the piece, the charm of the music, and the indefatigable exertions of the clever author, Mr. H. B. Farnie, whose "Nemesis" and "Loo" have already taken the town. A dress rehearsal was given on the preceding Thursday, for which some thousand or more invitations had been issued; thus the usual swarm of eager first-nighters were disappointed of their invitations on Saturday.

So, on Saturday, the whole house were a festive aspect; the gilded youth and the golden-haired maidens of Mayfair were largely or beautifully represented, and the house as bright and clean as a new (opal) pin which set them and their jewels in a most appropriate framing.

The opening piece was a comedietta called "A Guardian Angel," already known to the public as "Much Too Clever," by Joseph Halton and John Oxenford. It was originally played at the Gaiety last Winter, with Mr. Toole in the leading role. This part is now taken by Mr. J. L. Hall, a Widdicombe-like comedian, who hails from Australia, and latterly from the Prince of Wales, Liverpool, where, for a year past, he has been an enormous favorite.

And now we have a quiet week till Mr. Bateman gives us "Hamlet" as it has not been given since Charles Kean first appeared with a picked cast. Miss Isabel Bateman, over whose fair face the shadow of small pox had been impending, could not rehearse until the time of writing this, but everything else promises well. Mr. Irving will wear a cloak trimmed with ostrich plumes and his own dark hair. The mounting will be exceptionally fine, and as usual Mr. Bateman's taste will be brought to bear. Herr Stoepel is arranging the music. On the same evening, at the Vaudeville, which is doing remarkably well, "The Two Roses" will be backed up by "Green Old Age," a musical absurdity by Robert Reece Miss Amy Roselle, Miss Kate Bishop, and Messrs. James and Thorne will perform in it. On the following Monday H. S. Leigh's clever adaptation, "Le Roi Carotte," will be revived at the Alhambra, where Byron's "Demon's Bride" has been an utter failure. Miss Amy Sheridan, from this house, opens the luckless Opera Comique about the 7th, with Burnand's "Ixion," arranged as opera bouffe. She will play Venus, Miss Pattie Laverne, the hero, and Miss Rose Behrend Apollo. Miss Eleanor Bufton will be leading lady, and Mr. Gaston Murray stage manager. "The Broken Branch" dropped off the tree last night for the manager's benefit; at least, it could not be said to have hung there for his benefit. Mr. D'Oyly Carte, a clever, honorable, estimable man, has not lost money, but he certainly has not made it.

At Christmas, Miss Lydia Thompson migrates to the larger Globe. "Oil and Vinegar," by M. J. Byron, is in rehearsal at the Gaiety. Mr. Howard Paul has been making money at the Westbourne Hall. She is now starring, but reappears in town in a fortnight. The Prince of Wales drops "The School for Scandal" on Friday week, and the next night "Sweethearts" by W. S. Gilbert, will be brought out. This piece was the occasion, it is said, of Mr. Harte's secession, and Mr. Coghlan will take his part. We are all going to fall in love over again with Marie Wilton (Mrs. Bancroft), who plays an old and a young lady. The other piece is "Society," a never-tiring, ill-constructed, clever play, one of never-to-be-repeated T. W. Robertson's most popular plays. It will be cast by the present company; Mr. Archer who made such a hit as Dudley Smooth in "Money," rejoining and taking Lord Ptarmigant. The Criterion reopens very soon, with Reece's adaptation of "Les Pres Saint Gervais."

OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDNT.]

MELBOURNE, October 20, 1874.

MY DEAR FIGARO:—Recruited health, revived strength, and my normal will enables me to carry on my most agreeable correspondence with you. For some time past the hap-hazard mail service between Australia and California has upset my calculations, but now that the value of the service has been absolutely proved, I will, as you say in your parts, bet my bottom dollar that it will be continued somehow, by hook or by crook. Amusements here have been very lively since my last. At the

THEATRE ROYAL

The Williamsons have carried all before them. Their success has been most wonderful, and deservedly so. Their varied talent is undoubted. Night after night is the Royal crowded, and night after night does their popularity increase. There is no fake about their performances, but by straight, honest, natural ability, they hold their position as artists of the highest class. They can worthily hold their own in this country with the late G. V. Brooke, Barry Sullivan, Joseph Jefferson and Charles Matthews, though in a different line of business to most of the above artists.

MISS MAGGIE MOORE.

(How proud her husband is of her and so are we, spectators!) is one of the most fascinating actresses we have had out here. Such a vein of genuine humor permeates through all her performances that it compels the attention of her audience. Comic to a degree, but without the slightest scintilla of vulgarity, she enlists not only the sympathies of her audience but draws upon their risible faculties to an extent seldom successfully achieved by any previous actress. Her "Topsy" was a perfect masterpiece of character acting, while her "Little Nell and the Marchioness," which she performed on Saturday last (I am informed for the first time), stamped her as an artiste of the first rank.

MR. J. C. WILLIAMSON

In "Kerry," had not only his audience but the entire press "by the wool." It was such a rendition of character as could only have emanated from a thorough artist. His make-up, self-abnegation, and finished acting, were indeed the work of a scholar and a student of character. The petite comedy ran a month, but is bound to be reproduced. In the "Fairy Circle" his Con O'Carolan was a most exquisite piece of acting. No exaggeration, no unmeaning gag took the place of good acting, but every point, pathetic or comical, was given with great effect. Mr. Williamson and his wife are much respected in private life, the genial, gentlemanly manner (which, by the way, characterizes all great artists), in which he "moves round," and the ladylike and gentle style in which his clever little wife receives all who may be honored by their acquaintance, proves at once how they have won upon the audience of this "Babylon of the Southern Hemisphere."

MR. JAMES MOORE,

Miss Maggie Moore's brother, had a brilliant reception on Saturday last, in an Ethiopian jig, and met with a very warm reception. His pedal movements are very clever.

The cast of characters for the last of the Williamson's productions ("Little Nell") was very excellent, and included Mesdames Kate Russell (Mrs. Dampier), Miss Docy Stewart (Mrs. Collins), Miss Jenny Bryce (Mrs. Appleton), and Mrs. Bryer, Messrs. F. C. Appleton, Stuart O'Brien, I. S. Greville, R. Stewart, H. Sefton, John Dunn, C. H. Taylor, Harry Leston, Tom Lewis and

MR. DAMPIER,

Whose splendid performance of Daniel Quilp is the talk of the town. That such a well-favored actor should enact by the possession of great talent such a hideous, bow-legged villain, almost surpasses the understanding of his audience. Mr. Dampier is one of the most conscientious actors we have had in this country for many years, and is an artist who is not spoiled by the flatteries of the press. As it is the intention of himself and wife at some future time to visit America, I can only say that when he does so the States will receive a visit from artists who, by the possession of rare abilities, deserve and obtain genuine approbation.

MR. COPPIN,

I regret to say, has been laid up lately with a return visit from his old friend, the gout. The absence of this gentleman from the active duties of life, whether as a Member of Parliament, a Bank Director or a Theatrical Manager, is severely felt. We can ill afford to lose the services of such an enterprising and useful man.

MR. HARWOOD,

The senior member of the Royal Lion, emboldened by the great success attending the engagement of the Williamsons, will (so I hear), in the course of a short time, visit the States to make arrangements with other stars to visit our antipodean shores. Having a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the playgoers of this Island, one may be sure that his visit will be ultimately to the advantage of all the Australias.

THE OPERA HOUSE,

"La Fille de Madame Angot," well produced, well sung, and well acted, has been the event in the musical world since my last. Miss Clara Thompson (Mrs. Henry Bracy), has worthily filled the role. Mrs. Bell (Miss Jenny Winston), appeared as Madame Lange. Our Australian tenor, E. A. Beaumont, was the Ange Pitou. The other characters were well sustained by Messrs. Henry Bracy, A. Bell, E. Farley, A. Daniels, I. E. Kitts and G. P. Carey, Mrs. I. H. Fox, Miss Wooldridge, Miss Bessie Royal and Miss Dolly Ford. Seldom indeed has there been such a really pleasant and artistic presentation set before a Melbourne audience, and to insure its certain success Mr. William Saurin Lyster engaged the services of Mr. John Hill, K. S. R. A. M., as Conductor. His "Angot" venture has resulted in crowded houses. The last nights of the opera are, however announced, consequent on the compulsory retirement for a short time into private life of Mrs. Bracy. The burlesque of "El Dorado" is announced to follow. A new opera bouffe "Geroffe-Geroffa" has been secured by the enterprising director, but when it will be produced is only in the womb of Time. In writing of opera in Australia it cannot be denied that to

MR. WILLIAM SAURIN LYSTER

Is due all the credit of introducing to us the works of the greatest masters, sustained by the first artists of eminence to be obtained, either in Europe or America, to visit these antipodes. To his untiring energies may be attributed the high state of civilization to which we have arrived in musical matters, and though, at times, fortune may have been adverse to [illegible] success, [illegible] patrons. As a genial, warm-hearted Irish gentleman, he is highly respected, and as an operatic manager he holds the highest rank. May his shadow never grow less!

ST. GEORGE'S HALL

Has been taken on a long lease by Mr. J. C. Rainer, a gentleman well known in this city. His very successful panorama of the American War has caused him again to enter into the active duties of catering for the Australian public. By cablegram he has engaged Professor Sylvester, better known as The Fakir of Oolu, and his troupe. They are to arrive here by the mail steamer due on the 16th of December. The Hall has lately been occupied by

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE CASE (GRACE EGERTON),

But their short season was anything but a prosperous one. They seem to have gone off their pristine talents, and, as a consequence, their audiences became "small by degress and beautifully less." The Carandinis will be the next company to occupy the Hall.

THE COLOSSEUM.

Owing to the leniency of the authorities, this Hall is still open with a variety entertainment. I will not mention the names of the artists engaged at this "show," as I have no wish to injure them in their profession or to lower them in the estimation of friends at a distance. Mr. Charles Wright is still the liberal (?!) lessee and manager (save the mark!)

BLONDIN,

The great Chevalier, is to arrive here from Sydney th's day. In the choice of his agent in advance he has been most injudicious. A Mr. Lyons, at one period not long ago a check-taker and afterwards a general utility man in a circus in India, obtained the appointment and carried out the sequel to the old adage "Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." He has had some trouble to obtain here a site for his principal, owing to his want of address and tact. Blondin, however, comes himself, but will have some trouble to bridge over the troubles his injudicious and ignorant agent has brought about his ears. That the Chevalier will obtain plenty of excellent spots on which to erect his enormous tent, there is not a shadow of doubt.

MISS HATTIE SHEPPARD,

Or, as she was latterly known, Mrs. Henry Hallam, died the other day, after I despatched my last letter. She had been confined of a fine, healthy girl, but four days previous, and everything promised the early resumption of the active duties of her beloved profession. Four days after her accouchment puerperal fever set in with fearful virulence, resulting in her death two days afterwards. The news of this sad event came upon the town as a public calamity, and shed a gloom over not only the profestion, by whom she was beloved, but the entire district. Her decease is a loss to Australia. Her place in its dramatic world can never be filled. As a lady of refined and gentle manners, as an accomplished and ever-improving actress, as a loving and tender child to her mother, and as an affectionate wife, Hattie Hallam will long live in the remembrance and affections of the Australian people. Her child, shortly before the interment of the mother, was christened Hattie Cynisca Bella Hallam, the name the deceased lady wished it to bear. To add still further to this sad calamity, her aged mother, who never recovered the fearful shock, gave way and after a short illness followed her daughter to "another and a better world." So sad is this item of my month's news that I now draw the curtain, merely mentioning that the bereaved husband, who had been married barely a year, was, and is now; in New Zealand, and that the well-known Dr. Neild, like a good Samaritan as he is, has taken charge of the motherless infant.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Lynch, who arrived here as agent of the Girard Brothers, will leave next mail for your city as agent in advance through America of Madame Arabella Goddard, the great pianiste. In the choice of her agent, I think the distinguished artistes has been most judicious as Mr. Lynch has the happy knack of making himself a general favorite wherever he "locates"

A rumor is about town—its source I, as yet, know not—that Lawrence Barrett, is shortly to visit the colonies on a professional tour. Come along. Good talent is always apreciated and well paid for here!

In the provinces there is a vast amount of talent and I was happy to say that there are very, very few "pros." out of collar. At

BALLARAT.

The Theatre Royal, is leased by Mr. Lionels Harday, with his wife, Miss Rose Cooper as Duchess. They have a very good company including Mrs. Woodbridge, an old Melbourne favorite. Mr. Boothroyd Fanclough is now the reigning star as Hamlet. The business has been excellent. Mr. Lyster's Italian Opera Company, is to appear in a short time.

STAWELL.

Mr. Charles Lacelles, Miss Lydia Howard, Thatcher, Veoletto, and the Mademoiselles Novaro, have been giving drawing-room entertainments with considerable success. They intend to visit Horshaws and then "do" the Western District.

SANDHURST.

The New Royal Princess Theatre, at View Point is doing a fine business with Miss Adelaide Brown ing (Mrs. J. H. Steeles), as the bright particular star The company is the best out of Melbourne, and in cludes Messrs. W. G. Carey and Harry Power, the new establishment is a great success, and thanks to the energy of Mr. Hefferman, is likely to continue so.

GEELONG.

No show, no trade; people miserable, but parsons doing well, tea fights very flat, and muffin worries, a drug in the market pretty well played out.

CASTLEMAINE.

Madame Goddard has lately given two concerts at the Theatre Royal. The place was crowded though the prices were big, numbers at each performance were turned away from the doors, not being able to gain admittance. Aynsley Scott with a very "multy" variety show, has made an appearance here, but with no beneficial result. Without talent, "gas" and "blow" won't go down in this colony.

In the surrounding colonies matters have been very lively of late, though the amusements have been various. Commencing with

SYDNEY, N. S. W.

I hear that "Le Chevalier Blondin" has bled the amusement seekers to a tune, and as a consequence injured after shows for a time. At the Victoria Theatre, under the lesseeship of Mr. John Bennett, and the stage management of Mr. B. N. Jones. Miss May Howard has been fulfilling a long and profitable engagement. "East Lynne," "The Wandering Heir," "Romeo and Juliet," (Miss Howard as the love sick hero) and "The Hidden Hand," have been the last productions in which she has appeared. She intends shortly to return to San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Towers and Miss Rose Towers, new arrivals from England are announced to appear shortly in a new drama "The Waifs of the Street." The Queen's Theatre is now under Mr. Edward Holloway as Lessee and Manager. Mr. Lachlans Macgowan, J. Woolfe, Oliver Deering, C. Brown, H. Jerdan, J. H. Martin, Mrs. E. Holloway, Madame Rolland, Julia Merton, Anny Chambers and Mrs. Macgowan form the bulk of the company.

ADELAIDE, S. A.

Lyster and Cagli's Grand Italian Opera Company, under the direction of Signor Zebman, have been doing an excellent season here. Mr. Samuel Lagar, the lessee of the theatre, met with a very severe accident, caused through a jerk from a [illegible]. He is

TASMANIA.

The Hibernicon panorama, with Charles A. Boyd as Manager, Johnny Cowan, Shaw Cross, Barry O'Marra, J. O'Neil, Miss Bessie Harrison, Miss Kate DeLacey and W. S. Midcalfe, agent, are doing splendid business in Hobarton. They will next show in Launceston.

QUEENSLAND.

At the Theatre Royal, Brisbane, Mr. and Mrs. F. Belton have been starring for a season, and with very poor results. Mr. Morton Tavares is re-enforcing his company, and has already effected an engagement with Mr. W. Andrews, the comedian, and his wife, Miss Nelly Montague, a very pleasing soubrette. "The School for Scandal" and the drama of "Belphegor" have been recently performed.

NEW ZEALAND

Is at present rather bare of amusements. The Minstrels—Harry Kelly, E. Amery, C. Sutton and others, under the management of G. W. Rockafeller, have done well on their tour. At the Prince of Wales, in Auckland, Miss Adelaide Stoneham assisted by her broiher, H. Stoneham, has been giving a series of drawing-room entertainments, having the comique, Charles Verner, to versify the show. John Smith, the original nigger impersonator, has done a middling business during his tour through the Islands with his variety show, consisting of Val Vose, Airec and the DeCastro family. To pull up bad business he tried the "gift" dodge, but it did not go down, and he was glad to join his forces with those of George Loyal, at Dunedin, including Zeula (lady gymnaste), Verletti, Lizzie Shafter, Mr. McLean, Master McLern and the Loyal George himself. Loyal's crowd was the salvation of Ginger Blue Smith's.

CALL BOY.

Republication.

In consequence of the demand for Saturday's FIGARO, having exhausted the large edition, we republish in to-day's issue, our Australian letter and other theatrical notes.

Piper's Opera House.

The Lyon County Times of the 24th, speaking of the performance last week at Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, says:

"Built on Sand," written by Willie Gill, drew a large house last night. The Opera House troupe fully sustained their previous reputation for superior acting. The treble trapeze performance of Lottie, Frank and Katie is grand beyond description. The flying trapeze, by the daring and intreped Lottie, was the finest performance of the kind that was ever witnessed by a Nevada audience. The vocal entertainment by the Rickards we have not space at hand to speak of, but will say it was fully up to the great reputation of the company. The same performance to-night.

Lottie, Frank and Katie, the gymnasts, and Rickards, the character vocalist are re-engaged for the present week.

A Matter of Course.

An ambitious Biddy applying for a cook's situation the other day was unfortunately a little too glib in self-praise for her own interest, when in reply to the inquiry if she could prepare a dinner for three courses, asid she could "purvide a dinner ova dozen coorses, or aven twinty, no matter how many if the butcher sint the coorses in, in sayson—for there was niver the coorse I couldn't cook—sure it's a coorse cook I am intirely." "No doubt," replied the lady," entirely too coarse for me.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles. *

Opera House.

The first part to-night will terminate with the descriptive act entitled "The Arizona Diamond Mine," after this Harry Sefton will appear in his original specialties, Linden in his burlesque ballads, Billy Emerson and Billy Rice in "Othello," Ben Cotton, Billy Arlington, G Richards and J. F. Oberist in "A Big Mistake," Billy Emerson in his inimitable sketches of character, the company in the chorus of "The Conspirators," and the magnificent Leopold and Geraldine, in their thrillingly sensational and charmingly graceful feats on the trapeze. Every act is good and every performer is a star.

Maguire's New Theatre.

To-night, Miss Adele Leighton will be the recipient of a complimentary benefit at this theatre, and will appear in the character of Blanche de Chelles in the play of "The Sphinx," the manuscript of which she has purchased with the intention of making it her starring piece. To-morrow evening the four-act sensational drama entitled "Carlotta Queen of the Arena," written expressly for J. A. Herne by John A. DeBonay, will be produced for the first time in San Francisco. Miss Annette Ince will appear as Carlotta, and J. A. Herne as Bambrino, King of the Arena. King Kalakaua and suite will visit the theatre on this occasion and a crowded house may be expected.

California Theatre.

"No Thoroughfare" is up for a run at this house and will be played every night of the present week. W. J. Florence's impersonation of Obenreizer, is universally acknowledged to be one of the best bits of acting ever witnessed on the California stage, and the beautiful scenery by Porter is generally admired. This evening, His Majesty, King Kalakaua, will visit the theatre. He will be accompanied by Mayor Otis, Minister Pierce, Governor Dominis, Governor Kapeno and Hon. H. W. Severance.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

"He Would Be an Actor," "Dodging for a Wife," "Madame Gassynigger" and "Furnished Rooms," are among the acts to be performed to-night by Johnny Tuers, Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson and others.

Mechanic's Pavilion.

The Second Infantry, N. G/C., Colonel John McComb commanding, will give a promenade concert at the Pavilion on Friday evening. There will be an inspection and review by Major General D. W. Thompson and staff. There is sure to be a large and fashionable attendance.

SALE OF VALUABLE PAINTINGS.—A fine collection of oil paintings by European artists, being the collection of a private gallery, is now on exhibition at Mercantile Library Hall, which is well worth the attention of connoisseurs. There are many beautiful landscapes and some notedly fine figure pieces. These paintings will be sold by Greenebaum & Co, on Tuesday at 12 o'clock. The sale will be peremptory, and the pictures will be sold with the frames and shadow boxes

Notes.

Saturday being the birthday of Bob Eberle the worthy stage manager of the California Theatre, he was presented with a solitaire diamond stud by members of the company.

The tegeraph announces the death of S. C. Coon, well known to the public as S. C. Campbell, the tenor singer. He died at his brother's residence in Chicago, on Thursday last, at the age of 44 years. He was tenor in the English Opera Troupe at the time of his death. Mr. Campbell was formerly a member of Maguire's San Francisco Minstrels, and many who knew him in this city, will hear of his death with regret. The telegraph informs us that "His funeral yesterday was attended by the members of the profession in Chicago, and a large number of the prominent people of the city."

Risley's Mirror of England, which has proved a great hit in the Eastern States, will be exhibited at Mercantile Library Hall, on the 3d.

TOUCHING OBITUARIES.

[A wag is "Max Adeler," and his book, Out of the Hurly Burly, contains much that should cheer the dyspeptic and despondent. In his obituary notices are a few choice bits of poesy that seem, as it were, to "fill the bill." Thus:]

The death-angel smote Alexander M'Glue,
And gave him protracted repose;
He wore a checked shirt and number nine shoe,
And he had a pink wart on his nose.

No doubt he is happier dwelling in space
Over there on the evergreen shore.
His friends are informed that his funeral takes place
Precisely at quarter-past four.

[ANOTHER STILL MORE TOUCHING.]

We have lost our little Hanner in a very painful manner,
And we often asked, how can her sufferings be borne?
When her death was first reported, her aunt got up and snorted
With the grief that she supported, for it made her feel forlorn.

She was such a little seraph that her father, who is a sheriff,
Really doesn't seem to care if he ne'er smiles in life again;
She has gone, we hope, to heaven, at the early age of seven
(Funeral starts off at eleven), where she'll never more have pain.

Much Georgeousness.

A grumbler writes as follows:

"The dresses and jewelry in the possession of Janauschek, the German tragedienne, may make a bit of interesting reading. She has one cross which has only twenty-eight diamonds in it and all of them as large size. Then she has chains, strung with precious stones, bracelets innumerable, and one pair of solitaire earrings that cost $22,000. She has a ruby pin worth $7,000, and a pearl pendant worth $5,000, and another diamond cross worth $10,000. Then the great actress carries with her sixty-six dresses, which is about one-third of her wardrobe. And that the style be understood let it be known that there are many of them for which she paid $12 per yard gold for the velvet on them. The dresses cost her from $600 to $1,500 each. What do you think of that, poor plodders at $2 per day? This woman who decorates her person with $1,000 dresses and $20,000 earings, plays perhaps three hours each day. People pay $1 50 to $3 00 for seats to see her, and she lives the life of a princess. Things are not equally distributed is this world. She rolls in velvet, I get my boots half-soled three times, and live in a boarding house."

Beecher and his Dog.

I have a four-legged little heathen of a dog—a very discriminating dog to gentlemen in disguise. If ever a dog was distressed to think he could not talk, that dog is, and I sit on the bank in Summer and say to him: "Tommy, I am sorry for you;" and he whines, as much as to say, "So am I." I say, "I would like to tell you many things which are worth your knowing." and I don't know which is the more puzzled—I to get an idea into his head or he to get mine out of my head. He doesn't know what I think, but he feels there is something about a dog that he ought to know. He longs to get up into a larger sphere and be something better, and I think you will find in 1 Corinthians, ii. 12, 13, a much more dignified—certainly philosophical—explanation of the fact.

An Expert.

A Cincinnati paper says: Rev. Pepperpod has been preaching against the stage again. He knows all about the stage, of course. He drew a fearful picture of the "green-room," told how demoralizing it was with its bar and ten-pin alley. He described in a graphic manner how portions of the audience lounged into the green room during the play, and spent hours playing three card monte with the actresses. What Rev. Pepperpod doesn't know about the stage isn't worth telling.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. This metal, after many years' trial under the Hoe and other Machines of the leading London and English and Scotch provincial DAILY PAPERS, has been found to be at least TWICE AS DURABLE as the ordinary type metal, and has gained it very universal preference. The great improvements they have introduced in their manufacture, enable them to supply Fonts of this superior metal without any increase of Price upon the ordinary quality.

Magniloquent.

Calvin McDonald is pre-eminently the magniloquent editor of the Pacific Coast. Down South his style is more frequently met with. Some of the country papers of the South possess editors who are gifted with an affluence of gorgeous language and a wealth of fancy, and a magnificent brilliance of imagination equal to those of the gushing "poetic-critic" of the Tribune. In the following fervid, feeble and magniloquent poetic style did the editor of a Mississippi paper discourse on the recent election: "Once more the Anglo Saxon walks erect, his eye proudly beaming with the light of triumph and his breast heaving with the undying spirit of freedom. Once more the children of the Conqueror and the descendants of Alfred and Edward glory in their ancestry and fling the standards of white supremacy to the fragrant breezes of the Southland, and the shouts of the victorious and unconquerable Caucasian ascends in a grand diapason to the eternal throne of Liberty." We are ready to invest a few stamps in a bet that the soul of the individual who wrote the foregoing wasn't "stirred by the emotions which move the heart of the nutmeg." Would we be too free with such a poetical genius if we were to suggest whisky as the inspiration?

Jet.

One of FIGARO'S lady contributors sends us the following reflections on the present rage for jet ornaments :

She spoke to me as I sat in the public parlor of the hotel before the blazing fire. I was impressed by her dignity and courteous affability, and by the quantity of jet she wore. We had a pleasant chat, and on parting, I expressed a wish that we might meet again. We did. She came to my room next day to sell hair oil, face powder, and curling fluid of her own invention. She rubbed some of the latter on to my little daughter's hair, which has since turned green, but shows no signs of curling. I should like to meet with that woman again. Her dignity and her jet should not save her.

The infant mortality is greater than usual this year, on account of the jet beads from their mothers dresses, which the little ones bite off and swallow.

Strings of jet beads will be soon interwoven with braids and curls, making all young ladies, blondes or brunes, the possessors of jetty tresses.

Does any husband know what is most obnoxious to his wife ?

Ans: Not yet (not jet.)

The Ollendorf System.

Numbers of Chinese are pursuing their studies at Eastern colleges: Pity the poor Celestials. They are to learn French after Ollendorf's system; and so now, no doubt, the young Mongolians are reading in their Ollendorfs such passages as this: "Have you the old horse of your dead grandmother?" "No, I have not the old horse of my dead grandmother, but I have the small squirrel of my old stepfather."

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of E. F, Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850 and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-ej

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. Also retail Store No. 207 Montgomery street. T

The Old Mint Restaurant.

this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate. C. A. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-T

The Latest "Hamlet."

The London correspondent of the New York Spirit of the Times gives the following account of the latest impersonation of "Hamlet" in London :

The actors do not like Mr. Irving's "Hamlet." Now, is that not a better beginning than if I had told you that "The event of the season, nay, more, of the dramatic age, upon which the mind of amateurs and artistes had been long fixed, and which had caused expectation to stand upon tiptoe for many weeks, came off on Saturday?" I think so, at least. As a matter of fact, the expectation of an event does not tend one whit towards keeping playgers from any theatre that they may choose to honor or dishonor by their presence, and expectation is, as a rule, only greedy looking for orders. But when, on Saturday last, our Hamlet at last burst upon us he found us ready and waiting. We had wanted a Hamlet for a long while. Thirteen years ago we had gone as mad as we Anglo Saxons can, that is in a very methodical way, over Fechter; then we had endured Mr. Allerton and tolerated Mr. Steele Mackaye. So, when on Saturday last, a man who is, to use a very hackneyed but in the present case by no means useless phrase, "a scholar and gentleman," who from the age of nineteen to that of some two-and-thirty had worked his way up through fortune and misfortune, through good and evil care, never loudly and blatantly asserting himself, always accepting any part that came in his way and doing all that he could with it, appeared in a really great part, all London—that is to say, all play-going London that pleasant shooting, country-house visiting, and hunting have left to us—rushed to the Lyceum, prepared to be "nice" or "nasty," according to his idiosyncrasy. Of course all the upholders of bygone days were in great force, all those who had at twelve years of age, or it may be at six, seen Young or Kemble, went to the Lyceum to convince themselves that Mr. Irving was only a good stock actor, able to play Jeremy Diddler. Of course those who said that he would be "a comedy Hamlet" or "a sitting Hamlet," or "a ranting Hamlet" were there. But beside all these the general public came; not only the aristocratic public or the wealthy public that had booked its orchestra stalls or boxes, but the play-loving public that remained for the space of two hours at the pit doors and paid its two shillings, partly because it could not afford more, and partly because the booking had been so great. But, nevertheless, crammed as was the house, people were by no means in a gushing humor. They received Mr. Irving with an air as who should say we like you, we are glad to see you, and we will welcome you; but, that done, you must show that you deserve our liking and our welcome and truly so it was. Mr. Irving's excellent performance did not come upon us as a revelation; by steady good work he won his audience to his side, and by no trick of manner, no coarse outlines, no ranting, and no exaggeration gradually brought and held the house by simple dint of his great mental power. He went into no byways to prove his originality; simply and by force of intellect and study he asserted his claim to be considered one of the most thoughtful and polished actors who ever graced the English stage, and by slow degrees he compelled the voice of the house to proclaim him as such. Mr. Irving's Hamlet is the ideal of a cultivated man with a heart and soul also. Nothing that could bring out into clear relief the grandeur of this finest conception of the finest mind of creation was omitted, and very few will be found to detract from its merits. In the ethical parts of the play he is calmly contemplative or profoundly introspective; in action he is prompt, manly, and forcible, by mere dint of innate power. We do not mean manly, perhaps, in the somewhat brutal style, so dear to Kinsley, but in the sense in which "nervous men make the best soldiers and do the world's best work." With the Ghost, he is by turns reverent and filial; with his mother he is dutiful yet firm; with Horatio, brotherly; with Ophelia, tender and passionate in turn; with the players, "the glass of fashion and the mould of form;" with Polonius, one who, as Coleridge said, "sees through the very soul of those who surround him." Tenderly, naturally, unconventionally, and superbly were the colors filled in, boldly and fully was the outline drawn, grand and complete was the whole picture."

The correspondent speaks very highly of the Laertes of Edmund Lathes, formerly of the California Theatre.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles.

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co., 707 Market street, near Third, because they get better goods for the same price than any other dealers.

The Decker Grand Piano is the KING of all others, without exception. Kohler, Chase & Co., Agents, 633 Clay street. U

Washing Returned in One Day.

Charles Reade's Opinion.

Charles Reade has written some good novels, but George Elliot has written far better ones. With this preface we give his opinion of women: "Nothing is so hard on women as a long, steady struggle. In matters physical, this is the thing the muscles of the fair cannot stand. In matters intellectual and moral, the long strain it is that beats them dead. Do not look for a Bacona, a Newtona a Handella a Victoria Huga. Some American ladies tell us education has stopped the growth of these. No, mesdames. These are not in nature. They can bubble letters ten minutes that you could no more deliver to order in ten days than a river can play like a fountain. They can sparkle gems of stories; they can flash like diamonds of poems. The entire sex has never produced one opera nor one epic that mankind could tolerate a minute; and why?—these come by long, high-strung labor. But weak as they are in the long run in everything but the affections (and there they are giants), they are all overpowering while their gallop lasts. Fragella shall dance any two of you flat on the floor before four o'clock, and then dance on till the peep of day. You trundle off to your business as usual, and could dance again the next night, and so through the countless ages. She who danced you into nothing is in bed, a human jelly crowned with headache."

Do Not Suffer from Corns.

The unfortunate sufferers from Corns, Bunions club and Ingrowing Nails, can find instant relief by applying at Dr. R. H. Cowan's Institute, removed to 212 Kearny street, from 1 to 6 P. M. We speak from experience, having tested the Doctor's capability. Reference given if required. H

Maguire's New Theatre.

Miss Adele Leighton had a large and fashionable audience last night when she essayed the role of Blanche de Chelles in "The Sphinx." She acquitted herself well, and was the recipient of many floral offerings. Miss Leighton has ambition and industry and is determined to succeed in the profession which she has adopted. To-night the thrillingly sensational drama of "Carlotta, the Queen of the Arena" will be presented for the first time in this city with Miss Annette Ince in the title role, J. A. Herne as Bambrino, George Giddens as Clown, Miss Ella Kemble as Blanche Stanhope, and a generally good cast, comprising Thomas Whiffen, Frank Rea, J. S Lindsay, Miss Sydney Cowell and other favorites.

California Theatre.

There was an immense audience at this house last night to witness the performance of "No Thoroughfare." The opera boxes on the left hand side of the theatre were occupied by His Majesty, King Kalakaua, Mayor Otis, and members of the King's suite. The distinguished visitors attracted much attention. "No Thoroughfare" is announced for its last nights.

Opera House.

The new bill at this house is a capital one, and gave general satisfaction to the large audience present last night. Harry Sefton is quite a favorite, Ernest Linden gains much applause for his burlesque ballads, Billy Emerson is a host in himself and appears in the first part in a screaming act, and in his character sketches. The chorus of "The Conspirators" is still all the rage, and the daring Leopold, and the handsome and graceful Geraldine delight the audience who never weary in seeing them in their wonderful performance on the trapeze. The same bill will be played to-night.

Buckley's New Variety Theatre.

A very varied and lively bill is performed at this house by Johnny Tuers, Frank Mortimore, Hughey Robinson and a host of others. A spectacular piece, a kind of Black Crook, with grand marches, etc., is getting up for the holidays.

Mercantile Library Hall.

Risley's Mirror of England, which has proved a great hit in the Eastern States, will be exhibited at Mercantile Library Hall, on the 3d. A synopsis of the scenes presented will appear to-morrow in FIGARO, which will be the house programme.

Mechanic's Pavilion.

The Second Infantry, N. G. C., Colonel John McComb commanding, will give a promenade concert at the Pavilion on Friday evening. There will be an inspection and review by Major General D. W. Thompson and staff. There is sure to be a large and fashionable attendance.

Dashaway Hall.

There is a curious and attractive exhibition at this hall at present. It will continue until Saturday evening. It consists of a curiously spotted boy, an immense boa constrictor, and a pretty little dwarf lady. The show has been travelling with much success through California and Oregon. The charge for admission is twenty-five cents.

Woodward's Gardens.

The attractions at these Gardens are too numerous to mention, and the visitors are in proportion to them, especially on Sunday. The orchestral concerts, by Wetterman's New Grand Orchestra, now given every Sunday, furnish most excellent music, and are a great success. Saturday and Sunday next, second appearance of Mlle. Jeannette Ellsler in her great act on the corde elastique, Gracie and Alvan in their truly great act on the velocipede, of which they have wonderful control, and the New Variety Troupe. Now on exhibition, a living Iguana.

Notes.

Signor G. Chiarini and Son of the Royal Italian Circus, arrived in the Vancouver, last evening, from Japan. Signor Chiarini was forced to charter a bark to bring over his company, stock and circus paraphernalia; as it was found impossible to obtain passage for them on the steamer, owing to their being overcrowded with China freight. The bark sailed a few days before the steamer, and may be expected here in about ten days. Signor Chiarini will doubtless give us an equestrian season here, but when or where, it is impossible to say at present.

The Winter Styles.

All the latest Winter styles of hat have been received and are now on view at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street. The variety is very large, and the prices charged at this well-known establishment are very reasonable. R

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

The Green Room.

This popular resort of the profession and all epicures who can appreciate good liquors and a good lunch, is directly opposite the California Theatre. It has just been beautifully frescoed and is now a modle of taste and elegance. Everybody goes to the Green Room between the acts. X

The Antelope Oyster House.

DYSPEPSIA, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, and a thou-

CHARITY.

BY SARAH G. DUDLEY.

Judge not. Thy lines may fall in goodly places;
Haply thou hast a goodly heritage;
Who, safely sheltered, looks on loving faces,
Knows little of the storms that fiercely rage,
Sees not the trials of the lonely-hearted,
Who struggles with the tempter yields and falls,
Notes sin triumphant, purity departed,
But does not hear the siren's sweet, low calls.

Judge not the fault that binds thy fallen brother,
His sore temptation thou may'st never know;
This fault besets thee not, but many another
Deep-rooted in thy heart doth live and grow.
The vilest life, sin, crime and lust obeying,
But for God's grace, perchance, had been thine own,
Judge not, but listen to His clear voice saying
"Let him that hath not sinned first cast a stone."

Have charity for erring man or woman,
Oh, give thy hand to raise the fallen up;
We all are frail—we know to err is human;
These have but deeper drank sin's common cup;
Have charity for self. Thy burden olden
Of vain regrets cast off: His grace implore.
And be at peace, or hear His accents golden:
"Neither do I condemn. Go, sin no more!"

For the Ladies.

Scarlet and black is a fashionable combination in bonnets.

Embroidered black silks are unusually elegant this season.

It has become quite the correct thing for ladies to wear silk stockings.

For full dress occasions the very low corsage is worn, finished with standing lace or plaited tulle.

One of the handsomest garments of the season will be the velvet polonaise with jet trimmings.

Artificial orange flowers are now generally used for trimming and ornamental bridal costumes.

The new bonnets have very long streamers at the back, either of velvet or ribbon of heavy quality.

The ladies have worn all sorts of flowers and fruits in their hats, and now they have a turning up on the side.

The newest handkerchiefs are cut round-cornered, and have the monogramme or initial in the center.

Dresses are by no means cut as scant as they used to be around the skirt. "Heaven be praised," he cried.

The fashionable fan is in the old shape, is of black satin embroidered in colors, and has a deep feather edge.

Double-breasted cloth jackets, cut in the English style, with reverse and wide collars are to be worn this winter.

There is nothing especially new in the opera cloak line. White cashmere or broadcloth are the popular materials.

There is no indication that the fashion of wearing sahes is on the decline. The new French sashes are beautiful.

Navy-blue cloth waterproof cloaks retain their popularity very well, and will be fashionable for a long time to come.

Natural flowers are to be worn in the hair at all weddings, receptions or entertainments where the bonnet is ruled out.

It is said that the French ball dress of the period is cut and made exactly like what is known as a morning wrapper.

Artistic Workmen.

Old Mr. Crabapple is very much pleased with a gentleman whom he has engaged to saw wood. "When he piles the wood," said old Crabapple to his friend, "if one stick projects beyond the other he pounds it in with an ax." "He's a slouch," replied old man Stubble; "you should see my woodsawyer. When he gets the wood all piled, he takes off the rough projecting ends with a claw-hammer saw." "Does he? Well, he couldn't pile wood for me," broke in old Spikenburg; "my, sawyer piles the wood carefully, then goes over the ends with a jack-plane, sandpapers them down, and puts on a coat of varnish before he ever thinks of asking for his pay." Then they all went into the Grand Hotel after a big drink before Syntax could tell how his woodsawyer silver-plated all the ends of the wood, and nailed a handle on each and every stick to pick it up by.

Melancholy Justice.

The Detroit Free Press tells about it thus:

"Somehow or other, soda water ain't what it used to be," sighed his Honor, as he leaned back behind a pile of warrants and brushed the chestnut shucks off his lap.

"And the world itself seems a dreary waste to me," replied Bijah, a sad look coming to his eyes. "I sometimes don't care how soon I am called upon to go."

"My feelings exactly," added the clerk. "This world has no more pleasure for me."

The wind sighed drearily around the gables. A dog under the table uttered a mournful howl. A small boy in the corner wiped his eyes on his hat. The entrance of half a dozen spectators, together with the thunder-like noise of a passing dray, acted to snap the link of sadness and his Honor forced a smile and told Bijah to reach in and grab the first person he could get hold of. * * * *

His name was Winn. He admitted that he could not buy a door-knob if brick houses were selling at a shilling a piece, and he further owned up that he sat on the dock for hours in looking the wolf of starvation in the face.

"I don't thing this world has any further use for you," remarked His Honor, after taking a long look at the prisoner. "I see you haven't any get-up-and-vote-twice in your nature, and your character has been allowed to tumble around until you feel like an old omnibus horse."

"Don't abuse me," replied the prisoner in a mournful voice.

"But it annoys me to see a big, fat hulk of a loafer idling away his life and chewing apple-rinds to keep from starvation. I'd get under a pile-driver, go to sleep on a railroad track, or walk off the wharf, before I'd drag out such a life. However, it's no use talking to you. Consider yourself elevated for three months, and when that's out come back for some more."

Failures in Business.

Peter Cooper failed in making hats, failed as a cabinet maker, locomotive builder and grocer, but as often as he failed he "tried again," until he could stand upon his feet alone, then crowned his victory by giving a million dollars to help the boys in time to come.

Horace Greeley tried three or four lines of business before he founded the Tribune, and made it worth a million dollars.

Patrick Henry failed at everything he undertook until he made himself the ornament of his age and nation.

Stephen A. Douglas made dinner tables and bedsteads and bureaus many a long year before he made himself a giant on the floor of Congress.

Abraham Lincoln failed to make both ends meet by chopping wood; failed to make his salt in the galley-slave life of a Mississippi flat-boatman; he had not wit enough to run a corner grocery, and yet he made himself a grand character of the nineteenth century.

General Grant failed at everything except smoking cigars; he learned how to tan hides, but could not sell leather enough to purchase a pair of breeches. A few years ago "he brought up" on top of a wood pile "teaming it" to town for $40 a month, and yet he is at the head of a great nation.

The Young Man from the East.

"Im a stranger in this city,
I'm lately from the East,
And mighty fond of oysters;
Where can I get a feast?
I've been to all the restaurants,
But nowhere could I find,
A plate of Eastern oysters,
Of the old fashioned kind."

"Well, I can tell you," said his friend,
"Exactly where to go,
And where to get your oysters,
Direct from where they grow.
Just take a stroll down PINE STREET,
At 419, opposite the Market,
You'll see a sign, 'THE SADDLE ROCK,'
You can't fail to remark it.

"Emerson Corville keeps the place,
The best saloon in town,
There you can get your oysters raw,
Or fried so crisp and brown.
He's the largest oyster dealer
On the Pacific Coast,
And that he keeps the freshest
Has ever been his boast.

"He's got nice little private rooms,
Where you can sit at ease,
And eat your California stew,
Or Eastern if you please.
All the young men of fashion go
Right to the SADDLE ROCK,
To eat their EASTERN OYSTERS
And drink their Rhenish hock."

Carnival Ball.

As the season of masquerades is approaching we would advise those in want of costumes to call on Mrs. W. G. Taylor, the pioneer costumer at No. 708 Montgomery street, up stairs. Mrs. Taylor has a a great variety of new and elegant costumes, and her terms are the most reasonable of any costumer in the city. Country orders promptly attended to. 9-y

The California, the Union, the Pacific and the Bohemian are all popular clubs. Those who do not belong to a club find Chapman & Terrill's Billiard Parlor, northeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, a very good substitue. After the theatres are out there is a perfect rush to this agreeable resort, and billiards, and good wines, liquors and cigars, make an hour pass away very pleasantly.

Kilpatrick's War Drama.

General Judson C. Kilpatrick is now at work on a new war drama which is intended to be something of rather more than ordinary interest. Scenes are to be portrayed in which the writer was an actor—"all of which he saw and a part of which he was." The General holds that a playwright, to construct a truthful war drama, must have known the trials, hardships and few comforts of the tented field, and possess the literary ability to faithfully describe them. Wildly absurd situations, such as appear in "Belle Lamar," and the dramas of a similar character, will have no place in Kilpatrick's play. No Major-General will come in person to seek a truce with a cavalry colonel, who mysteriously finds himself in command of amateur artillery, the guns being manned by half-a-dozen infantry men. There will be no weeping and wailing of high-toned Southern women in the first act, nor will the drawing-room tax the chief exertions of the scenic artist. At present it is the General's intentions to have the first act open with a skirmish. There will probably be five acts, covering five years of the war, and one of the principal characters, that of a plantation darkey, will gradually develop with the play, from the nigger contraband of 1860, into the educated freedman of 1866. All the stirring incidents will be truthfully drawn from the experiences of the men who were once under the writer's command. The dramatis personæ will sing and chaff around camp fires as those can who have sat and sung by the flickering firelight before Lookout Mountain, with the Army of the Cumberland, or in the wonderful March to the sea. He desires to have in some cases the rank and file play what they once acted in severe earnest. Kilpatrick will give the piece truthfulness, and Mark Twain and Nasby will each supply some fun—each perhaps portraying one character. With realistic scenery, such a play could not fail of being a gratifying success.

Take Time to Eat.

A very bad, and probably the most injurious habit the American people have—especially mechanics—is that of rapid eating. We should eat slowly, and give our victuals more time to digest, and we would find it much better for our health. Germans do not arise so hastily from the table as we; for time with them is not so precious; life is not so crowded; time can be found for after-dinner talk. The cigars and coffee, which appear before the cloth is removed, keep the company together; and in that state of suffused comfort which quiet digestion creates, they bear without anger the opinions of antagonists.

Copartnership.

George P. Rowell, the well-known advertising agent of New York, has formed a copartnership with Nelson Chesman for the purpose of carrying on a newspaper agency in St. Louis. The firm of Rowell & Chesman are bound to do a big business.

Managers

Of Amusements, Excursions, Lectures, and Concerts, are directed to the splendid Printing Establishment of B. F, Sterett, 532 Clay Street, over the San Francisco Market. The largest Posters, in Plain or Fancy Colors, are turned out in the shortest possible space of time. Also, Beautiful Programmes, Tickets, etc., etc., printed to suit the most fastidious. Mr. Sterett keeps constantly on hand a fine line of bright colored papers of every shade, and the prices charged for these are very little in advance of plain white paper. Streamers of various sizes, from 18 to 42 inch letters, in stock, of all colors of paper and ink. Theatre Managers are especially invited to call for estimates. This well-known Printing House was established by the present proprietor in 1850, and has been in successful operation ever since. 3-cj

Real Works of Art.

There is an immense difference between the dolls of twenty years ago, and those of to-day. The ancient doll was a misshapen monster with a dull expressionless face. Feldbusch & Co., No. 308 Battery street, have received for the coming holidays the most beautiful and varied collection of dolls ever seen. There are crying dolls, sleeping dolls, and dolls wide-awake, dolls with hair, and dolls bald-headed, and all as real as life. Toys of every description on hand—to the trade. Also retail Store No. 207 Montgomery street. T

The Old Mint Restaurant.

At this old established house, 605 Commercial street, above Montgomery, always noted among the bon vivants for its good things, can be procured the finest and best cooked Oysters, Steaks and Chops in town. Terrapins and the choicest brands of Wines and Liquors a specialty. Charges moderate G. M. Hepburn, the new proprietor, invites the public to give the "Old Mint" a trial. 8-T

PEACE IS DECLARED in all families who buy their furniture and bedding of J. A. Shaber & Co., 707 Market street, near Third, because they get better goods for the same price than any other dealers.

The Emerson Piano is the finest and cheapest Piano in the market to-day for general use. Kohler, Chase & Co., 633 Clay street. U

Charles H. Webb.

The Boston Courier says of Charles H. Webb's new publication:

John Paul's Book is worth reading. The humor of Mr. Webb may be described as of the Mark Twain sort, but his wit is his own, and if not of the highest order, it is infinitely amusing. Thus, evidently dissatisfied with the portrait given of him (which, indeed, is not a very flattering one) he explains that he was absent from home when a request came from the publishers that he would furnish a photograph, so that a portrait might be engraved to beautify the book, and that the family, in the excitement of the moment, and fearful that the publishers would change their mind if given time for calm reflection, seized the first photograph that came handy and sent it along. This happened to be a picture of a former prize-fighting friend known as the California Chicken. But thinking the critics would deal more gently with the book if they supposed this the man they had to deal with as author, the mistake was suffered to pass uncorrected. The title-page gravely informs us that the book is "moral and instructive, consisting of Travels, Tales, Poetry, and like Fabrications, by John Paul, author of 'Liffith Lank,' 'St. Twel'mo,' and other works too humerous to mention;" and the very appropriate motto is:—

Brittania needs no bulwarks,
No tower along the steep;
Her march is o'er the mountain wave,
Her home is on the deep.

The book is dedicated "To the Bald-Headed," and after the premise that "loss of hair is caused by loss of sleep," we have the corollary: "To the bald, then, I come, bringing not puppy nor mandragora but a book of my own composing for a composing draught. Surely in my wake shall follow tired Nature's hair restorer—balmy sleep;" and the whole is prefaced by "opinions of the press," being appropriate quotations carefully collected from such modern journalists as Shakspere, Sir Philip Sidney, Isaac Watts, Thomas Fuller, Henry Taylor, and others of like kidney. The book is not a desultory collection of old letters, miscellaneous articles, and the like, but is the continuous table-talk of an observant and very witty man.

A Cruel Wretch.

What a brute of a husband that was out in Iowa. He refused to kiss his wife for three months, and the tender-hearted darling committed suicide. Now, if we'd been in that woman's place we wouldn't have committed suicide. We'd have called in a substitute, and closed our eyes, and imagined all the time it was the dear one. But some women ain't got any sense. The female wasn't anything at all like a San Jose female we once knew. He and she got mad, and he wouldn't kiss her for several days. She said to him he'd be sorry for it. She went to a party next evening, where they played "Pick cherries and hand them down," and "Post-office," and "Pout in the corner," and a whole lot of such plays, and she was up every time she had a chance, and never refused a kiss. And there was one young man in the party whose kisses pleased her so much that the following week she eloped with him. That's the way she took to make her husband sorry. We can't say that he is bowed down with grief. We saw him the other day, and he was about half drunk, and smoking a five-cent cigar and telling a funny story that nobody but himself laughed it. Some men don't seem to have any hearts to break.

A "Free" Race.

At a recent race-meeting at Sycamore, Illinois, a well-to-do but penurious farmer, twelve miles from home, drove up to the gates upon the fourth day with his whole family to see the races. The gateman asked for tickets, at which the farmer mildly rebuked him, and gave the gate-keeper to understand that he didn't know his business—that it was a free-day. Some vigorous English was indulged in, and the farmer in defence of his free-day theory, pulled from his pocket the bill of the meeting, and triumphantly read therefrom: "Friday, Oct. 29, Purse $1000, free for all." "Yes, free for all," repeated the old man, "now let me in." Explanations by the gateman were of no use. The old gentleman turned about and drove his family home again, fully believing himself to be an outraged man.

The Fall.

The fall of man was a very lamentable event in one way of looking at it, but if it had not taken place the splendid Hats which are sold at "The Hat Store" 647 Washington street, would never have come into fashion, We make this remark apropos of the fact that this establishment has just introduced the new Fall and Winter styles. *

Bunker's Club House Sausages.

A delicous table delicacy. They are made of dairy-fed pork, are admirably seasoned, and are as superior to the ordinary dry, tasteless sausage made of beef and pork mixed, as anything can be imagined. Made fresh every morning at Bunker's Stall, 74 and 75 California Market, California street entrance. Try them. 9-B

The Winter Styles.

All the latest Winter styles of hat have been received and are now on view at "The" Hat Store, 647 Washington street. The variety is very large, and the prices charged at this well-known establishment are very reasonable. R

The original "Swain's Bakery" is now established in their magnificent new place at 213 Sutter street near Centre Market, and has added a lunch room and ice cream saloon. This is their only place of business. P

A Rare Girl.

The Cincinnati hotels ought to be filled with male guests, if this is the sort of chamber-maids they have out there: "She was just about that height which the greatest of Greek sculptors deemed the stature most perfectly consonant with perfection of female beauty—five feet two. She had a quiet, handsome face, decidedly classical, and rich black hair, neatly arranged in heavily-plaited coils at the back of a dainty little head. She had faultlessly round white arms, and she probably knew how pretty they looked, inasmuch as she had turned up the sleeves of her dress even as far as the ivory smooth curves of her shoulders. Her figure was full and graceful, and strong—the figure of a girlish Venus de Milo. We had taken note of these things while lounging on a sofa in the front parlor of a first-class hotel not very many squares from the Enquirer office. The girl was busy putting the apartment in order; brushing off the dust from mahogany furniture; wiping the face of the huge mirror that gratefully reflected her charms with more vivid truthfulness in return for the little attention. It was a pretty spectacle, and inspired pleasant dreams."

Contentment.

Learn to be content. Men labor and struggle and bemoan their fate; complain of misfortunes when they are really enjoying their happiest moments. The poor man desires wealth, the rich are fearful lest they become poor. Give us neither poverty nor riches, said one who had reflected much upon the foibles of mankind. Health, home, friends, food and raiment are sufficient, and these the majority have, yet, ever restless the great mass of humanity is discontent. Longing for something which, when obtained, fails to bring the expected joy. Truly, man is of few days and full of trouble.
